FOREWORD

"In the onward flow of years, all that is not recorded is lost. We know of the past only as the written page reveals the romance, the tragedy, the joy, the sorrow, the struggles, and achievements of a people." Stella Richards (Taken from the Joseph Harker Family History.)

More than two centuries have come and gone since our Thomas Little fought in the famous battle on the Boyne; fought to overthrow tyranny, and establish freedom and liberty-that most precious gift designed by a Divine Creator for his earth children. Though we know not the tales of courage and heroism of the forefathers through the following centuries are we content to leave them in the folds of oblivion? Or will we as loyal sons and daughters seek their stories in records yet unsearched?

Will we allow the history of the past century of which we are fortunate enough to have some knowledge, though not complete, will we let that which is known die and be buried in the annals of the past? Or will we while yet there is time, preserve for posterity these records? Only he who cherishes a memory of his ancestors deserves to be remembered by posterity.

Information for the Little Family history was obtained from many sources. For the earlier members much was taken from old letters and notes gathered by Nellie Terry and passed on to the compiler by Harriette Terry Montague. Also from old letters, wills and other documents obtained from Kitty Mulchay (foster daughter of the late Sarah Little) at the old Little home in Tyre, Seneca County, New York. The information of later Generations was obtained from correspondence with living members of the family, and many personal contacts by the compiler together with much checking of churches and state records.

The purposes of the sketches in this book has not been to emphasize the more prominent and successful members of the family but to give consideration to all who were interested enough to send in their biographical information. As these sketches are read it is hoped we can gain an understanding of the individuals' personality traits, and interests, which endear them to us as members of a family unit.

INTRODUCTION

In 1924, members of different families by the name of Little met in Salt Lake City and formed a surname genealogical organization, the purpose of which was to foster the spirit of friendliness and cooperation in research, to find our different ancestors and possible connecting links. However, since all were not interested and failed to take active part, in a few years it came to be just a family organization, with the family of James Amasa Little taking the lead. His daughter Claudia Little Robinson Cooper Brown and daughters-in-law Mary Elizabeth (Cluff) Little and Emma Priscilla (Evans) Little were a strong force in pushing the work in those early days when the organization was new.

James A. Little had two brothers, Edwin Sobieski and Feramorz. The descendants of these three brothers compose what the family commonly call the Western branch, because they came to Utah in the early pioneer days, and have since been scattered throughout the western states. Their father was James Little. Descendants of two uncles, Moses Little, who settled in the province of Ontario, Canada, and Malcolm Little, who lived in the state of New York, and their sister, Nancy Little McMillan in Ohio, comprise the Eastern branch, though some of the later generations have also come west. The common ancestor is William Little Jr., who came to America from Ireland in the early 1800's; the exact time has not been learned. He is not found in the 1801 census of New York, but was in the state as early as 1804, when it is known that he gave a piece of land to his son, Moses, at the time of this son's marriage. This land was soon turned back and the transaction was all verbal; so no record exists except in an old letter.

William Little emigrated from the vicinity of Bally Bay in County Monaghan, Ireland. The family tombstone is said to be in the Terordan cemetery, and the Cahans Church stands on its grounds. There must be several graves there, for we know William Little Jr. had seven sons and two daughters, but only the four above named are known to us. It is quite likely that some of these children were married and remained in Ireland. A Robert Little Campbell lived in Canada near Moses Little, and is called a cousin -- his mother being a Miss Little, probably a sister to Moses. We have found no mention of her on paper, but Helen Little Smith, grand neice of Moses Little, has made the statement, "My father called Little Campbell's mother, Aunt Alice."

Research was begun as early as 1875, when James A. and Feramorz Little visited the family in New York and brought back the records then available. Through correspondance by Claudia, and later by Harriet F. Little, much has been added to that record. A visit to the old home in Tyre, New York, in 1940 brought out many old letters and pictures that give life and interest to this work. Correspondence with researchers in Ireland, Jeannie L. M. Stewart, assistant secretary to the Presbyterian Historical Society, and Mrs. Mabel Phelps, a charter member of the Irish Genealogical Society, has failed to give information on the earlier members of the family. We are indebted to Malcolm Little Sr. for the record earlier than his father, William Jr.. It was he who in the year 1805, while he was still in Ireland, wrote the following:

"The generations of Thomas Little, an emigrant in company with William, Prince of Orange, arrived in Karrickfergus, Ireland, in the year of our Lord 1690. After the commemoration of the Boyne, he received his inheritance of his commander, in Knockboy, County Armagh. 2. His son John born Knockboy, Ireland. 3. His son William born Garvy, County Tyrone, 4. His son William Jr. born Cavankilgreen, County Tyrone. 5. His son Malcolm born Terordan, County Monaghan. A facsimilie of this document will be found in this book. The original has not been preserved, but on the 19 May 1821, Malcolm Little made a copy at Junius, New York, and this copy is now in the family collection.

At the semi-annual meeting of the family organization, Octoboer 1934, it was decided that the family history should be printed as a means of preserving to future posterity, the knowledge and traditions of our pioneer ancestors. Immediately the secretary, Harriet F. Little, sent out letters of inquiry for family genealogy to all addresses known. Many family group sheets were collected in the next few years, but in 1938 the organization fell to pieces and for ten years nothing was done except a little private correspondence by the secretary. In 1948 through her efforts an organization was again effected, but revived slowly. In 1951 after an illness in the hospital the secretary came to the conclusion that it was her responsibility to record the facts which none other in the family knew; so on her own initiative she began this compilation and has carried it through to the finish. As the work proceeded she decided to take in the descendants of Susannah Young - wife of James Little. So that added to the Little record the posterity of Charles Oliphant, and Lacy Stilsen, half brothers of Edwin S., Feramorz, and James A. Little. Collection of record on the Littles also continued down to the last baby known and sent in.

Later some members of the family became interested and gave material as well as moral support to the work. Cooperation of the many members who have contributed their records has been encouraging, and we are grateful to them, for without their aid the work could not come to so nearly complete form. To those who have given grudgingly, or not at all, we are sure they will feel themselves the losers when they find their record incomplete. The material presented appears as it was given by various members of the family. The compiler has worked with painstaking care and determination to make the work accurate and true to facts, in so far as it has been possible to ascertain the truth. She has gone to old records, in many cases to verify her facts.

We want to especially express appreciation for the research and many notes left by Nellie Terry, a great grand-daughter of Moses Little; also to Harriette Terry Montague, who preserved Nellie's work and passed it on to us.

The numbering system and plan of this work was chosen by a committee after a study of several different family histories had been made. The numbers appearing in the left-hand column, give the number of the descendants from William Little Jr.. The letters designate the generation. In order to find the individual genealogy of a party in question, find his particular number in the center of the page. For example, if the number appearing in the left-hand column is 12-A, the genealogy of that individual will be found under No. 12-A in the center of the page of first generation; or if the number is 8-B, that will be found in the center of the page in the second generation, or they may be located through the index in the back of the book.

It is a common statement in the family that we are of Scotch-Irish descent. It will be interesting then to learn something of the origin of the Scotch-Irish people. The quotation following is from The Scotch-Irish in America by John Walker Dinsmore D. D. L. L. D. chapter one pages 7 to 11 - published by the Winona Pub. Co. Chicago, Ill.

"Who are the Scotch-Irish? The common notion is that they are a mongrel breed, partly Scotch and partly Irish; that is, the progeny of a cross between the ancient Scot and the ancient Celt or Kelt. This is an entire mistake. Whatever blood may be in the veins of the genuine Scotch-Irishman, one thing is certain, and that is that there is not mingled with it one drop of the old Irish or Kelt. From time immemorial, these two races have been hostile and much of the time bitterly so. True enough, if you run down the Highland Scot and the old Irish to their deepest root, you will come to a common tap root in the ancient Kelt, one of the main streams of the great Aryan race which, ages ago, migrated into Europe from Asia. The Erse, the Gael, the Cymri, and the Manx, were all originally of this stock and their descendants survive today, the old Irish, the Highland Scotch, the Welch, and the people of the Isle of Man.

"The Lowland Scotch, however, were of quite a different stock. They were Teutonic or Anglo-Saxon origin, and were separated from their neighbors on either side by race, language, religion and personal traits. In very early ages they came into the lowlands of Scotland, and their descendants live there today. They were for a long time a rude, semi-barbarous and fierce people, given to plundering their neighbors in England on the south.

"Conversion to Christianity brought transformation to these people. It left them with their native vigor, but tamed their ferocity and put into them a strong sentiment of Justice and brotherhood. Now the Scotch-Irish is a lowland Scotchman, who moved over into the north of Ireland. During the latter half of the 17th century and the first quarter of the 18th century, the lowland Scotch in large numbers crossed over into Ireland, and there settled chiefly in the Province of Ulster. This migration was due to several causes, some of them industrial, some political, and most of them religious. The lowland Scotch, almost to a man, embraced the doctrines of the Reformation and as a consequence, soon began to be sorely harried by the persecutions then rife in Scotland. They believed the Gospel of our Lord and hated tyranny whether of priest or prince, so went over to Ulster where, at that time there was promise of larger liberty of conscience and worship. They were Calvinists and Presbyterians, almost to a man and to the marrow."

The genealogy of our family begins with Thomas Little, who left London, England, with William, Prince of Orange in the year 1690. That he left London does not necessarily mean he was born in London or even lived in London -- more of this later. Since he fought in the battle of the Boyne, a brief description may be of interest here.

The following quotations were gleaned from different sources, but chiefly from, The Scotch-Irish in Northern Ireland and American Colonies, pages 85 - 92 and 100- 103, by Maud Glasgow, Published in 1936 by G. P. Putnam Sons, New York.

"The reign of James II, son of Charles I and brother of Charles II, lasted but four years, but those years were replete with cruelty and injustice on an unprecedented scale, and his administration notable for detestable and inhuman laws, for merciless punishments and unsurpassed judicial iniquities." In Ireland, during his jurisdiction there, the protestants could obtain no justice either in the courts or out of them. No Protestant could fill any place in civil service, army or navy. Beginning about 1681, Presbyterian ministers and members of their flocks began a heavy migration to America, which lasted over a hundred years. So it was upon Ulster Presbyterians the privilege and honor was conferred of laying the foundation of the Presbyterian Church in America (just as Scotland had laid it in Ulster.)

William, Prince of Orange, was of Calvinistic faith. He was noted for his toleration of the honest opinions and principles of others. He had married Mary, the eldest daughter of James, and had been invited to replace the "Impossible James."

On June 14, 1690 William landed at Karrickfergus in Ireland and with his suite, rode to Belfast, (where he was given a great ovation). With his army he reached the river Boyne, on the first day of July, and on the following day the troops were facing each other across the famous river. Two Kings against each other, a nephew against uncle -- two sons-in-law against the father of their wives. The Prince of Orange (King William III) had given orders to march at daybreak. They had a good stock of ammunition and a sprig of green in each hat to distinguish them from the enemy, who wore pieces of white paper in theirs. William III had 30,000 men, consisting of Scotch, Anglo-Irish, and Dutch, besides soldiers of other nationalities, but all were of the protestant faith. King James sought a place of safety, where he might view the battle without exposure to danger, and kept at a safe distance throughout the engagement.

On the morning of the battle, the Prince of Orange was recognized by his foes on the opposite bank of the river, who hoping to destroy their opponent, shot a canon ball in his direction, which struck William on the shoulder. The Prince lost some blood, but making little of his wound, had it bound up by an attendant and later mounted his horse, and with a sword in his unwounded hand led his men into the thickest of the fight, and where the leader went, victory followed. A ball struck the cap of his pistol, the heel was shot off his boot, but he seemed invulnerable. The bravery of the commander inspired his men and they were winning on every side. James was overwhelmingly defeated. His Celtic Irish soldiers ran, flinging away their equipment, and the king too ran to Dublin, berating the Irish soldiers and accusing them of cowardice.

The Prince of Orange issued orders that no unnecessary blood should be shed and that captives should be treated with consideration. The loss of the victors was relatively small. The famous battle, renowned in song and story, was fought in July 1st (old style) or July 12th (new style) in 1690, and is annually commemorated in Northern Ireland.

As Malcolm Little has written, our Thomas Little was given an inheritance of his commander in Knockboy, County Armagh, Ireland. This indicates that he was an officer, and of a noble family. In search to find the location of this land grant, we learned that there are 15 townlands of Knockboy in Ireland, but none in what is now County Armagh. However, there is a Knock-boy on the east border of County Monaghan, and tracing the movements of the family gives justification in accepting this as the place. Here the son John was born. He then went north west to Garvy, in the southeast part of County Tyrone, just over the border from County Monaghan. His son William was born there, and again his son William Jr. was born at Cavan-kilgreen, which is a division from Garvy and both lie in the parish of Carnteel.

There most likely were other children in these families, but our search has failed to prove any connecting links. Since our family were "Blue Scotch Presbyterians", as Sarah Little expressed it, it is not unlikely that some of these earlier generations, because of religious persecutions, emigrated to America and we may find their descendants in Pennsylvania, the New England States, even in Nova Scotia, and in the states of the south. A Thomas Little, who emigrated from County Tyrone, Ireland in 1735 and settled in Massachusetts, who had a son Thomas and a grand son Thomas, could very well be an older brother to our John, but the connection is unproven. The birth date of this Thomas Little is recorded as 1688, and we have estimated our John's birthdate as 1691 because he was born at Knockboy. Colonel Jesse Carter Little of this line came to Utah with the early pioneers, and his descendants live today in Morgan, Utah. (See the John White Family History). A daughter of Col. Jesse C. Little married our Feramorz; so there is this later connection. Others of this line in early days went to Iowa where they were farmers.

People by the name of Little (and there are many different spellings of the name on record) are literally numerous in England, Scotland, and Ireland, as well as America. There were several families of Little in Ireland before our Thomas arrived. It is quite possible that there were Littles from Scotland, who came to Ulster much earlier. The tradition exists in the family that we are Scotch-Irish, however, we must follow the line as we know it, and that seems to take us back to England. We have no knowledge as to where our Thomas was born, nor who was his father. One clue, which seems worth following when time and means will permit, points to a possible connection with the line of Geoffrey Little of Halstead, England. George Fred Little of Keene, New Hampshire, wrote the compiler that his grandfather, John Wildridge Little, had told him that the family coat-of-arms had a "rooster on top". George Fred Little later related the incident to the compiler when she visited his home.

John Wildridge Little was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and came to this country at the age of about 15 years; therefore, was likely to be interested in family heraldry. In checking on the coats-of-arms belonging to Littles, we found one with a rooster for a crest. It belonged to the line of Geoffrey Little, who died about 1521; his line is carried through six generations to 1624, a gap of two generations before our Thomas. (See Visitations of Essex, Vol. 13 p. 435)

All we know of John Little is that he was born at Knockboy. His father was Thomas and his son, William -- rather meager information on which to build family connections. William Little married Catherine (Fitzpatrick) if we read aright a name that is nearly torn away from an old paper on which Malcolm Little wrote the names of his grandparents. The old paper is in the family collection. Malcolm Little has also recorded that William Little Sr. died at the age of 78 years and six months, but failed to give the death date. Since the recording was done in 1805 we know that William was dead at that time; and since William Jr. and family had left Ireland about 1801 - 04, it is reasonable to suppose the death occurred after their departure, and was the activating motive which caused Malcolm Little to write down this record.

William Little Jr. was born at Cavankilgreen, County Tyrone; his son, Malcolm was born in Terordan, County Monaghan, Post address Bally Bay, Ireland, so William went southward to establish his home. Evidence of this is further carried out by a recommendation from his minister Andrew Warwick at Crieve, Ireland, which Malcolm Little brought with him to New York.

Malcolm Little left Ireland April 11, 1807, and arrived in New York on May 18th. For lack of better information the family has earlier accepted this emigration date for William Jr. and his family. They should now take note and correct that error. Moses Little was married in New York state, November 5, 1804, at which time his father gave him a piece of land, and further the fact that Malcolm Little brought with him a recommendation from his minister is strong indication that he came alone and not with the family. Crieve is located 2 miles northwest of Bally Bay, Terordan, or Cahans, is two and a half miles away. Near Rockcorry, and southwest of Bally Bay is located the estate of Cornawall, where lived a family of Littles for seven generations. The given names are very much the same as ours. The compiler talked with John Little, William Little, and others of this family in San Francisco, and is inclined to believe that they are descendants of our Thomas. Their father and grandfather was Moses Little. Beyond that they could give no information; so their origin and possible connection requires research.

The family names of Stephen Little of Foglish, County Fermanagh, Ireland, and Fivemile town, County Tyrone are also quite similar. It seems they should belong to the family of our Thomas Little. Mrs. Elliotte Little of New York City, a member of this family had printed a small book of family history in 1932. She very graciously sent a copy to the compiler of this work, for which she is very grateful. With this background then, we begin our family history. The line runs as follows:

Thomas Little, who fought in the Battle on the Boyne with William III, and given a land grant in Townland of Knockboy, Ireland.

John Little, who was born at Knockboy, Ireland.

William Little, Sr., who was born at Garvy, County Tyrone, Ireland.

William Little Jr., our earliest known emigrant.

DESCENDANTS OF WILLIAM LITTLE JR.

(O)

William Little Jr., born about 1756 at Cavankilgreen, a division from Garvy, County Tyrone, Ireland, emigrated to America from County Monaghan, supposedly from Cahans parish near Bally Bay. The family tombstone is said to be in the Terordan Cemetery, and Jeannie L. M. Stewart, assistant secretary to the Presbyterian Historical Society has said, "The Cahans Church stands on its grounds." In 1942, at the request of the compiler, Joseph Little, who lives at Cavan (He is of the Cornawall family), sent his daughter to visit the Terordan Cemetery; she found the older part was "very ancient" and the stones so corroded and covered with moss that it was impossible to read the inscriptions. However, we feel that the place has been definitely located.

William Little Jr. came to America in the early 1800's. Local Tradition says, William Little settled on lot 7 of Junius (since 1829, Tyre) in the north part of Seneca County, state of New York. His wife Letitia, with sons, Moses and James and daughter Nancy must have come with him. The son Malcolm came later. Letitia, variously spelled, Lettice, Letis, Lytesia, was a Scotch woman (several notes refer to her as such), and she is supposed to be a daughter of James Smith, who lived at or near Auburn, New York. The land records at Auburn show a James Smith as early as 1799, and later entrants. There is a James Smith and wife Dorcas of the town of Dryden, a James Smith and wife Elizabeth of Scipio, and other entrants of James Smith; so it has been impossible to make connection with Letitia. However, old letters mention a James Smith and John Caldwell (Colwell) in connection with the Little property. The will of William Little does not even mention his real estate, so it is possible that it had already been turned to his son, Malcolm, who at least continued ownership of the property. Mention is made by Malcolm of 31 acres, on which his father's widow did live. An extract from a letter dated April 4, 1839, by Moses Little to his son, John Wildridge Little, mentions John Caldwell's property. "He has a sister and children plenty, but none of them can own any of James Smith's property as long as I am alive."

Records at Waterloo, New York, show that on March 4, 1820, Malcolm Little bought 24 acres of land from William Little, his father. The will was probated December 25, 1821; so it is reasonable to believe that William died in 1821 and not in 1820, as has been given previously in family records. Letitia's death date has not been found, but occurred prior to 1817, for in William's will he mentions his second wife, Elinor. William and Letitia are buried in the Ridgeroad cemetery only a short distance south of their farm in Tyre, New York.

William Little married second, Elinor Keis, or Kies, a widow with children, for Malcolm says in a letter of 1839, that Mrs. Little lives in Erie County, New York, about 25 miles from Buffalo, supported by her children, being blind and an invalid.

(O)

WILLIAM LITTLE JR. born about 1756 at Cavankillgreen, County Tyrone, Ireland, is a son of William Sr. and Katherine Fitzpatrick (This last name reasonably certain) Little. He married Letitia Smith, a daughter of James Smith (supposed). They had seven sons and two daughters, but we know only four of them.

- 1-A 1. Moses Little, born November 1777 in Terordan, County Monaghan, Ireland, died 13 July 1848 at Erin, Ontario, Canada.
- 2-A 2. Malcolm Little, born 4 April 1788, at Terordan, County Monaghan, Ireland, died 26 September 1855 at Tyre, Seneca, N. Y.
- 3-A 3. James Little, born about 1790 at Terordan, Ireland, died about the last week of November 1822, at Aurelius, Cayuga County, New York.
- 4-A 4. Nancy Little, born March 1795, at Terordan, Ireland, died September 1873 in Springfield Township, Lucas County, Ohio.

FIRST GENERATION

(1-A)

MOSES LITTLE, son of William Little Jr. and Letitia (Smith) Little was a small man -- 5 feet and 4 inches in height, had brown hair and gray eyes, and fair complexion. He came to this country from Ireland early in the 1800's. At the time of his marriage he was given a piece of land by his father, which was soon turned back, and he went to Scotland. Some misunderstanding and controversy concerning this land arose later, as shown by letters. A letter dated 22 April 1839, written by Malcolm Little Sr. to John Wildridge Little, son of Moses, mentions the transaction in this way: "Your father's former claim was one of a singular nature, a verbal promise for a piece of land, or the value of it. At the time of your father's marriage he took possession of the above piece for about six weeks, then left it to father on another verbal contract and went to Scotland. Hence you are born a Scotchman and baptized there, and according to the right of that country, a legal voter. Shortly afterward your father moved to England and you were then baptized there, costing one half-dollar. There was no expectation of your father or family returning to this country in the minds of any of my father's family. I am well aware that my father did not intend any money to my brother, in his will." From this letter and also one from Rachel Little Almos, dated 13 May 1851, it seems that there was some controversy about the land. Rachel said in her letter, that her father, Moses Little, told her on his death-bed that he had property in the United States and if his heirs would look it up, they could obtain it.

Moses married 5 November 1804, Jane Wildridge of Cootehill, or Armagh, Ireland. They had 11 children, born in four different nations - Scotland, Ireland, England, and Canada. From Scotland he went to London about 1809, where he remained until the close of the French War, March 1815, when he went to Ireland and remained there until July 1819 or 20. He and family left Monaghan, Ireland 21 July 1819/20, and on the 23rd at 8:00 boarded the schooner Maria Newry at Warrens point. On the 24th at 3:00 P.M. they had arrived within 24 miles of Liverpool and 20 miles off the Welch mountains, when the vessel stuck fast in quicksands. Distress signals reached Liverpool, and life boats were dispatched to their aid. All passengers boarded the life boats and were taken to shore, but the vessel was beaten to pieces by the violence of the waves. It was 7:00 o'clock when they landed at the Kings Dock. After three days the family went to Manchester, England by canal, there they were delayed until August 20th, before continuing their journey to London. After nearly two years in the metropolis, Moses and family boarded the Hyperian at Gravesend, on 17 June 1822, and set sail for America. The ship was un-seaworthy and after periods of calm and storm, reached Cork Harbor at 10:00 P.M. on the 29th. They remained at Cork 28 days while the ship was being repaired.

We have no details of the voyage, but landing at Quebec, they continued their travels of over 800 miles, by river, lake, and over-land through Montreal, Canada, Albany and Auburn, New York and to their destination, Tyre, Seneca County, New York, to the home of his brother, Malcolm Little. They arrived there 5 November 1822. Here they spent the winter until March 1823 when he left for the province of Upper Canada. For six and a half years, 1823 -30, he was keeper of Brocks Monument at Queens-town. Here the two youngest children were born.

Moses received a grant of 100 acres of land from the Crown, and settled at Erin, Ontario, Canada. There he reared his family of eight daughters and two sons. He married second Mrs. Elizabeth Parker. Fanny Patrick has written that her mother, Letitia Little Gibson, said of this wife, "she was a fine and very neat woman and used to say, 'if I am put about in the morning, I don't get over it all day.' We might conclude that a woman of middle age or older, starting out and carrying on a new order in life with a very active little old man, might occasionally feel 'put about'. However, she was an excellent wife and made Moses Little very happy."

MALCOLM LITTLE, born 4 April 1788 can almost be called the family historian. It is through his letters and replies, and other recordings saved, that much of the early family history has been preserved. He emigrated from Ireland when 19 years old, leaving his native land 11 April 1807 and arrived in the western part of the state of New York, 18 May. He brought with him a recommendation from his minister; it reads, "That Malcolm Little was a regular member of this congregation and so far as known to us, behavior becoming his Christian profession and at his departure free from public scandal or any ground of church censure, is in the presence of and by order of the session -- certified

The original of this is in the family collection.

Malcolm lived in Junius, Seneca, New York, where he acquired land, became prominent enough to have the local Post Office named after him. We have printed matter showing the Post Office, "Malcolm."

His farm is situated on a slight elevation about five miles south of Clyde and eight miles north of Waterloo. Parts of this farm have been in the possession of the family since before 1804. For many years the place was known as "Cherry Mount Farm." Neighbors related to the compiler, that at one time, Malcolm had an orchard of cherry trees, growing next to the road, which in spring was a mass of beautiful white blooms, that gave the impression of a snow covered hill.

From bits of information preserved, we gather that Malcolm Little was a successful farmer and business man, but perhaps, a little hard to deal with. His sons Marquis and William left home when about 20 years old. What became of William we do not know. A letter written to his brother Malcolm by Marquis in 1844, at Nauvoo, Illinois, has been preserved. From it we quote: "Tell father I should like to have him write to me. I had expected he would write before now. I hope he does not feel toward me as he formerly has done, as long as I am not there to trouble him." These two sons were declared legally dead at the settlement of their father's estate, after his death.

A letter written by his sister, Nancy Little McMillan, tells of privations and hardships they endured out in Ohio. She says, "While my children cried for milk, I humbled my pride and wrote for help, but was denied." It seems that a piece of land in New York near her father's home was in Question; she was not willing to give it up to him.

We have an old hand bill advertising "Little's Magic Balm", which shows his adventures in another field. It is chiefly of interest now because it shows the difference in medical views, and the knowledge of then and now.

The family burial ground is in the Dutch Reformed Cemetery, a short distance south of the farm. It is also called the Ridge Road cemetery, because for some distance, approaching from the south, the road runs along on the crest of a low ridge.

JAMES LITTLE born about 1790 in Terordan, County Monaghan, Ireland, came to America with his parents when a boy about 10 - 12 years old. It has been said by family friends who knew him that he was a short well-knit man with great powers of endurance. He was never known to complain of being weary; he slept about four hours out of 24, and read or worked the remainder of the time. It is also said he was a well read and intelligent man, possessed of quite a collection of books.

Land records at Auburn, New York show that on March 4, 1816 he bought from Mathius Huffman, 50 acres of Land on lot 50 in Aurelius, Cayuga County, New York. Here he carried on farming and gardening. His sons have in their possession a printed hand-bill, dated 1819 advertising his business. It has been related that he was the first man in New York to sell seeds in packages; also to introduce tomatoes for table use. In order to do this it was necessary to get a permit from Governor Clinton. "Love apples," as tomatoes were then called, were thought to be poisonous and grown in gardens for decoration only.

James Little frequently visited Auburn, the county seat, four miles distant to dispose of his produce and bring home supplies. Near the road was a deep hole from which sand had been taken out for building purposes. It is supposed that the bank had caved in after he had gone over the road, and returning home in the darkness of night, the wheels on one side of his wagon slipped into the pit and turned the conveyance over with him under the loaded wagon. It was thus he was found dead the next morning. The horse had got loose and was feeding nearby. The time of this incident is set in a letter from John Wildridge Little to Feramorz in which he says, "My father (Moses Little) and family arrived at the Little home in Junius, Seneca County, N. Y., November 5, 1822, and I should say the accident occurred not more than three weeks after our arrival, making the time the last week of November."

In 1814 or 1815 James married Susannah Young, daughter of John Young and Abigail (Nabby) Howe Young, and is a sister to Brigham Young the 2nd president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and famed Colonizer of the West. With her parents she moved from Massachusetts to Cayuga County, New York in 1813 where she met her husband.

At his death she had the three small boys, the youngest, James, was about two and a half months old. A daughter, Eliza, had died earlier; her tombstone with the inscription partly finished was found in the home by the family succeeding the Littles. A few years later Susannah bound out her youngest son James, and then moved to Mendon, New York where her father and other family members were living. About 1829 she married William B. Stilson.

While here she learned of the new Church organized by the Prophet Joseph Smith. In June she was baptized, and suffered many of the persecutions of the Church. She moved with the Saints to Kirtland, Ohio, and then to Nauvoo in 1840. Here her son James found her in poor circumstances. The year following she went to St. Louis, Missouri where Mr. Stilson was located in the Jefferson Barracks, Camp A-3rd Regiment of Infantry, of the U.S. Army. He had left home earlier and had not been heard from for some years. He reenlisted in Company A 3rd Reg. of Infantry and was given family quarters in the Barracks. Sometime in the spring of 1844 Stilson died from "lung fever".

Her son Feramorz who had also come west now took his mother and half sister Cornelia to do for them what he could. James had enlisted in the Army and marched away to Fort Jessup. Susannah married a third time, Alonzo Pettingill, and when the Saints were expelled from Nauvoo and began their move westward she and her husband, a shoemaker, left the camp of the Saints and went to St. Louis to find a means of subsistence. In February 1849, Pettingill died of "lung fever". He was buried in a St. Louis graveyard without anything to mark the spot "where lies the remains of a faithful, good man, my father in the Gospel," says James A. Little.

The same year James fitted up an outfit to take his mother and sister Cornelia to the mountains. The date is not remembered, but James A. says, "We left St. Louis quite as soon as the grass began to grow, and arrived at Kaneshville about the 1st of June. There they found Susannah's brothers, Phineas H. and Joseph Young with their families. After a pause of about three weeks the journey was continued. On this tedious trek, the greatest fear was from stampedes of their cattle, which over balanced the ever fear of Indians. She arrived in Salt Lake City 17 October 1849. James A. Little said, the place comprised houses enough for a respectable village, had they been closer together, but they were scattered over a large area of ground. For a time Susannah lived in a one-room adobe house. On the 16 December 1849 she got up a little dinner party to which her brother Brigham was invited. The occasion was the marriage of her son James. Soon after he found a house with two rooms, the one for his mother and sister, the other for himself and wife. The food brought with them was soon exhausted. Food was scarce that winter and consisted mainly of shorts bread and a little tea. Susannah died 5 May 1852 in Salt Lake City, Utah.

NANCY LITTLE, was born March 1795 at Terordan, County Monaghan, Ireland; she emigrated to America with her parents when a young child about seven to nine years old. Her father settled on land in Junius, in the north part of Seneca County, New York where she grew to womanhood. She married William McMillan about 1816. Seven of her eleven children were born in New York, the exact place or places unknown -- some perhaps, in the vicinity of her father's home. Malcolm, the last one born in New York is said to be born in Steuben County. In 1833 the McMillan family moved to Springfield township of what is now Ohio. At that time the dividing line between Ohio and Michigan had not been established. They took up land and lived on the farm there for the next 40 years, though the last 25 years Nancy had to carry on alone after the death of her husband.

Springfield is situated in Lucas County, a little southwest from the city of Toledo, Holland is today a village in Springfield township. Here the family worked and endured the hardships and privations of early pioneers in a new country, where the land had to be cleared of timber before it could be cultivated. In a letter written to her brother Malcolm in 1851, Nancy mentions, "our land is cleared except six or eight acres," and says, "last year we had over 100 bushels of peaches, not a blossom this season. The black Oxhart and May Duke cherry trees which Malcolm gave to his uncle William, are bearing fruit. The white Oxhart and French Imperials we lost." She mentions that potatoes are six shillings per bushel, wheat 5 and corn 3 shillings.

They have work horses, cows, pigs and geese. "We have no barn and our house is getting old and rather poor, but if I deserved better, we would have it. My neighbors say I have good children, and the girls are good to mind - even Amanda - if I just look at them. That is strange in this place. Quoting again from her letter we get a picture of disappointment and distress.

"You say you do not know the reason that I did not write to you for many years back, when month after month I heard my little ones cry for milk, and no way to get it for them. I pleaded with William to let me write to you for help, but he still said no! If you do he will not help you. But I could not believe it. I thought I had a brother that would be a friend in need. I wrote; I humbled his manly pride, but not his so much as my own. When after months I got your answer and was denied. When William went there you said you thought I had no right there. I think I own a handsome little place there. Let me know what you think and if you wish to buy it, or if you are willing to give it up. I'd not feel willing to let you keep it. Ask Malcolm what he thinks about it. I have always heard him spoken of as an upright man, and ask your wife. You write that she wishes all to be happy around her. If so, she will be glad to have you do justice to your only sister. I think you cannot feel happy when you think of me and that land."

Nancy Little is shown in her own life, and in that of her children to be a woman of high principles, and religious as well. In spite of some unjust dealings, she seems not to be embittered. She says, "I have never forgotten my brothers, and I was taught in my childhood to love them and to mind them, by one of the best of mothers. I have long hoped to see my oldest brother and go to Canada, but that can not be in this world. I am often very lonely, but I have much to be thankful for. Care and trouble send me daily to my Heavenly Father, and He often calms my troubled soul. Brother, do you pray in and for your family?"

Ten of Nancy's eleven children grew to maturity, and of these all except three reared families of their own. Jane Eliza became a nurse and midwife and gave her life to the service of her fellow women. John, the youngest, died at the age of thirty unmarried. Wells, the third child, enlisted in the 3rd regiment of Ohio volunteers in the war with Mexico. He came home the 2nd of July and died December 16 (18) 1847 from an intestinal disease contracted while in the army. Nancy says, "Oh how thankful we all were that he got home. He had been a good son and kind brother. He had been a member of the Methodist church for years. He died without a struggle or a groan. His father and he were lovely in their lives and in death, they looked calm and heavenly. They are buried on the farm. I can look out of the north window and see their resting place."

Nancy lived the last year of her life in the home of her son, Malcolm, one mile south of the old McMillan homestead. Her granddaughter, Louise, a daughter of Malcolm, has said, "I loved my grandmother and remember how she took interest in the children and played with us on the carpet in the winter of 1871 and 1872. I remember her farm and the log house, and her big patch of various colored peonies."

NANCY LITTLE, daughter of William Jr. and Letitia (Smith) Little, born in March 1795 at Terordan, County Monaghan, Ireland, married about 1816 William McMillan, born in the state of New York. He is the youngest of his family. He died 6 August 1849 at Springfield Township, Lucas County, Ohio, and is buried on the farm. She died September 1873 in Adams Township, Lucas County, Ohio.

SECOND GENERATION

JOHN WILDRIDGE LITTLE was born 13 August 1807 in the Royal hospital in Glasgow, Scotland. He lived also, in England and Ireland as his father was in the British Army. Like his father he was a little short man. He was finely educated and had expected to study for the ministry, but poor health prevented the continuing of his education. He came to America with his parents, brothers and sisters on the sailing vessel, Hyperian, leaving London 14 June 1822. The ship was not very sea worthy and soon began to leak. John W. Little has written of this trip. "The ship continued its leakage until by June 24 when she would take three to four feet of water in an hour, at the same time they were becalmed in a severe thick fog until the morning of the 28th then came the storm. It blew a terrible gale, three sheets (suppose that means sails) were carried away, the boom was broken and nearly carried off together with smaller accidents." To add to their distress was the uncertainty of their location having been unable to take longitude for two days. They reached Cork Harbor at ten p.m. on the 29th of June. Here the family waited twenty-eight days while the ship was being repaired. John W. says he went to school during that time. The voyage was resumed and though the Hyperian ever after proved leaky at sea they reached Quebec about the 19th of September.

After resting a period and waiting for his father to get his money from the government, they boarded on the 14th of October a steamboat, Swift, abound for Montreal, up the St. Lawrence River. From Montreal they traveled to "the lines," United States boundary, where they arrived the 21st of September. There they boarded the steamboat, Phoenix, to go to White Hall at the other end of Lake Champlain a distance of 175 miles. At White Hall on the 24th, they immediately took land carriage for the city of Albany, New York, and thence to Auburn; on the 5th of November, 1822, they arrived at Tyre, the home of his uncle Malcolm Little. After spending the winter at Tyre, the family moved to the province of Ontario, upper Canada. They remained at Queenstown six and a half years.

John W. Little learned the tailoring trade and was in business some time in Canada. About 1832, he came to the United States. One evening while attending a camp meeting at Depauville, New York, his taking notes in shorthand--which he had learned in England--attracted the attention of some young women at the meeting. Their curiosity led them to ask him what he was doing. One of the girls was Elizabeth Dickey. She was employed at a millinery shop. This chance meeting was the beginning of further acquaintance which developed into friendship and romance. They were married October 4, 1835. After the marriage they moved to Cape Vincent, Jefferson Co., New York, where he became prominent in politics, religion, and the schools and she in church and society. Their four children were born here. They made several changes during their married life

They lived at different periods in Depauville, Adams Center, Belleville, Adams, Watertown, Madrid, and Canton, finally returning to Depauville where he opened a small shop over the store of his son in law, Richard Terry. He was sewing a fine coat when he was taken ill with pneumonia, or pleurisy, his last illness. His wife, Elizabeth, died very suddenly, January 24, 1892, she was found dead on the bedroom floor on a Sunday morning. He being ill slept near the sitting room stove. He lived but six days longer. He died January 30, 1892 at the age of 84 years. He was buried the first Tuesday in February, just a week after her burial. She was 77 years old and they had been married 56 years.

FANNY ANN LITTLE was born May 4, 1809 probably in London, England. She emigrated with her parents to America in 1822. She lived at Queenstown and Erin, Ontario, Canada until she married Charles Lovett about 1838. Her husband died not long after the marriage. Fanny Ann left her young child with her parents and came to the United States to seek employment. A letter dated 1839 by Moses Little mentions this event thus, "Ann's child is William by name." Later her brother Robert Dee Little took the child and brought him up as his own child until a young man, then he found his mother and went to her. Albert E. Little speaks of him as my brother cousin. Fanny Ann married a second time, a man by the name of Wagstaff and lived at Bardstown, Kentucky where she died. She is known to be in Bardstown in 1856. She visited relatives in Canada in 1871. No more is known of her.

Fanny Ann Little, born 4 May 1809, probably in London, England, married about 1838 Charles Lovett. We have no dates for him. She must have died soon after her visit to Canada which was in 1871.

(8-B)

LETITIA LITTLE was born August 28, 1811, probably in London, England. She is the fourth child of Moses and Jane (Wildridge) Little. She was eleven years of age when the family came to America. It was while they were living at Queenstown that she met James Gibson, a friend of her brother, John Wildridge. Gibson had come from Quebec to Hamilton, Ontario, upper Canada to attend a special school for young gentlemen. They were married May 5, 1830. In a letter by John Wildridge to his Uncle Malcolm, he has this to say, "Letitia was married last May to a young man by the name of Gibson, a shoemaker by trade and is possessed of many good qualities. I might say he lacks nothing to make him an affectionate husband." Fanny Patrick, his youngest daughter has written this of him. "Through the death of his parents he became the ward of an uncle, John W. Davidson. His early childhood was spent in Point Levis, Quebec. He was born there and baptized in the old French Anglican Cathedral in Quebec by Bishop Mountain. His early education was received from a governess and supervised by a maiden sister of Mr. Davidson, who when he became old enough to memorize required that he learn and review the church catechism and other church lessons. He was called to her for religious learning at ten-thirty every morning, a special reward for excellent recitation being extra bread and strawberry jam. One time his uncle heard him say to a trusted old gardener. "Move your old shanks," when he was going to a locked fruit cellar to get an apple for him. The child was called into the house, given a lecture on respect for the aged, with accompanied administering of a riding crop, and an apple fast for a week. Such austere treatment made him outwardly, at least, a very docile lad.

Later he was sent to Hamilton, upper Canada, to a school for young gentlemen conducted by the Reverend J. Law. At school he was called the young Frenchman, and in some respects he was rather innocent as the following incident shows. A senior student told him it was his duty to cut the hair of the juniors. Gibson submitted to the tonsorial attention and went to the next class with one side of his head practically shaved. Mrs. Law it seems was a very understanding and motherly person, she gave some uniformity to the hair cut. The school was very good in its time. Mr. Davidson, a scholar of his time, was in Civil Service. It seems he intended that the boy should go into government employment, but his austerity and uncompromising manner, it seems, continually antagonized the young man so that he broke away and sought independence.

As parents Letitia and her husband were different in character. He had sessions in the barn with the boys, but he conferred with his daughters when he differed or wished to impress his views on them. Letitia was determined in what she thought was right, as is shown in the incident at Jennie's marriage.

Letitia had reminded her daughter that her second name, Henrietta, should be used in her license and marriage ceremony. The daughter declared she would not have it. She had never liked the name and would not use even the initial. She was married in a home wedding with only the families and a few friends present. In the course of the ceremony when the clergyman said the name, Jane, the mother spoke up audibly, Jane Henrietta, the clergyman bowed reassuringly to mother and the name was actually written into the paper. Fanny says, 'Margaret grew pale and I nearly laughed. To think mother had, once and at last got the last word. '"

At one time in Fanny's school life she became much interested in elocution. Two gentlemen noted for travel and culture heard her recite at school; they called on Mrs. Gibson to persuade her that with training the daughter could become a Fanny Kimble or Mrs. Scott Leddons, actresses of the time. Her reply was that she would rather see a child of hers have a rope around her neck and cast into the sea than go on a theater stage. The father diplomatically showed his daughter the beauty of being able to read well beautiful thoughts to entertain friends and at school or church. He also pointed out the weariness of traveling from city to city without being able to go home at night, etc. He won her over.

Letitia was very anxious that her children should have training for their hands. People can muddle along with their business affairs, but skill is needed for carrying on the trades of the country. She paid to have her two older daughters taught millinery. The two boys were apprenticed to a foundry in the town.

The Gibsons lived at different places in Canada--Jerseyville, Oakville, Burford, Hamilton--but seemed to center about Brantford. He was in the boot and shoe business there, but was burned out and because he didn't have insurance, he lost everything. He then got a position in the railroad. Later he was employed in the stove business. In about 1876, after illness and physical troubles he went blind. He died on July 4, 1884, passing away quietly in his sleep without illness.

Letitia lived with her daughter for another two years. She died February 20, 1886. Fanny says, "On the evening of the 19th she began to sink rapidly and through the night we watched the sands of life sinking, sinking. About four o'clock in the morning I said, 'Ma is Jesus precious now, do you feel Him near?' She looked so lovingly at me, she opened and closed her eyes, she was so happy though speech was denied. She only opened her eyes once again afterwards, and at ten minutes after ten Saturday morning she passed away, oh so easy, she just ceased to breath. She was gone to the blessed home where, all her suffering over, she will with dear father, enjoy never ending happiness. They are buried in Burford in the grounds of St. John's Church. A lovely spot overshadowed by the church itself and in line with the pew where for some years they sat."

LETITIA LITTLE, born 28 August 1811, London (?), England, married 4 May 1830 at Queenstown, Ontario, Canada. James Gibson, son of James and Margaret Moffatt Gibson, born 25 January 1809 at Point Levis, Quebec, Canada. James Gibson, died 4 July 1884 at Burford, Ontario, Canada. - 53-C 5. John Henry Gibson, born 1840, probably at Oakville, Ontario, Canada grew to manhood. Like his brother he had been apprenticed to the foundry to learn a trade, but unlike his brother he was fond of books, and loved music. He made much progress in higher mathematics, and in mechanical drawing. He became a fine draughtsman, also he had an inventive mind. Grain dealers were having trouble with wheat and other grains becoming wet in shipment on the great lakes, John invented a grain drier which his brother-in-law, Mr. Sutton believed would be successful. He and John went to Montreal to demonstrate his model and seek a patent. Two of the most influential grain dealers became interested, and a machine was made from his model. Mr. Sutton went home on business, then became ill and unable to return. John was royally entertained, but put off with the statement that the machine needed alterations. Finally he was given a sum of money and advised to go home, he would be called back later. He was thus cheated out of his patent which was hard on him. Because of this and other unfortunate circumstances he never married, but came to the United States, where for a time he worked as a draughtsman in Buffalo, then moved on. An unsatisfied mind led him to many changes. He died in 1910 away from home and friends.

SARAH JANE LITTLE seems to have had a rather tragic life. She was married at 18 years and widowed with two small children. She was married a second time and widowed again when she was only thirty-two years of age. From a letter dated July 28, 1852, by Robert Dee Little, her brother, we read, "Jane's husband died the latter part of April after a long illness-left her with two children. They are quite helpless." A letter by Rachel dated October 26, 1852, at Hamilton, says, "Our widowed sister was confined last week and gave birth to a daughter. She lives eight miles from the city."

According to a statement by Helen Little Smith, "Aunt Jane Bussy was not good looking, but she was very kind hearted and good." She used to get out of patience with girls who were slow about their work, and had a pet expression for such occasions, "Come day, go day -- God sends Sunday."

Elizabeth (Dolly) Little Sutton has said Jane Bussy had two daughters by Jesten and two sons by Bussy.

SARAH JANE (GENE) LITTLE, born 21 April 1820, Glaslough, County Monaghan, Ireland, married first James Jesten, 20 August 1838 and had two daughters. She married second, a Mr. Bussy, who died April 1852. She died 6 July 1886, at Elmvale, Simcoe County, Ontario, Canada.

ROBERT DEE LITTLE, born 8 January 1826 at Queenstown, Ontario, Canada, was christened 15 January same year. He is the youngest of eleven children of Moses and Jane (Wildridge) Little. When four years old he moved with his family to Erin, Ontario, Canada where his father had acquired land for his services in the army. There Robert grew upon a farm and received his schooling. He was fond of music, and led the singing at church, using a tuning fork to get the pitch.

On the 7 January 1849 he married Ann McCutcheon, daughter of Hugh and Mary (Stewart) McCutcheon. She was born 2 January 1830 at Montreal, Province of Quebec, Canada. She died 1 March 1883 at Garafraxa, Wellington County, Ontario, Canada. He died Saturday 3 September 1870 at Garafraxa. His wife says in her black-edged letter to his brother, while he ailed for about three months he kept his bed only the last two weeks, we did not think his illness so serious. "He died happy rejoicing in the Lord." The Reverend Mr. Brown had called to see him and was asked to preach the funeral sermon, which he did. MALCOLM LITTLE, born 5 January 1820, at Junius, Seneca County, New York; died 6 January 1899, at Tyre (set off from Junius 26 March 1829). He is the eldest son of Malcolm and Sara Decker Little. He followed in the footsteps of his father and was a tiller of the soil. The farm, at least part of it, was land that had been acquired by his grandfather, William Little, Jr., and had next belonged to his father. Malcolm cultivated and loved flowers too. His daughter has said that at one time he had ninety varieties of roses and could name every one. He had a nursery business for a time and later manufactured chain pumps for the wells. He was a prominent and respected citizen in the field of agriculture. He was affiliated with the national, state, and local Grange and brought a rich store of practical and authoritative knowledge of horticulture, chemistry, and farm husbandry to the organization as his contribution and instruction toward lightening the labor of and bringing greater happiness to his fellow members. He served as Master of the County and the local Grange at Clyde, and was chaplain for six terms, also serving on many official committees. Until the coming of the Grange in the early seventies the farmers' social life consisted of neighborhood gatherings with suppers and games or singing.

On March 29, 1841, he married Julia Augusta Avery. Her family were Episcopalians and soon after marriage he joined the Episcopal Church, though the Littles were Presbyterians. His opportunity for education was only that furnished by the district school. They had only one daughter.

IN MEMORIAM.

Malcom Little, Past Master of Clyde Grange, Patrons of Husbandry.

The noble and beneficent Order of Patrons of Husbandry, after its early stages of organization owes its permanence and greatness to the earnest, self sacrificing application of many worthy Patrons, who followed in the work immediately after the founders. They were united by the strong and faithful tie of agriculture and mutually resolved to labor for the good of our order, our country and mankind.

In the early days of the history of the grange, Brother Malcom Little associated himself with all who manfully made the clearing, prepared the soil for planting the seed, and endured the hardships of cultivation and harvest, to the crowning glory of reward, through fidelity. Brother Little was in close fellowship with illustrious pioneers, in the State, and in the National grange, Thompson, McDowell, Adams, Armstrong, Jones, Fulton, Wayne and many others. He shared with them the burdens, trials and opposition, in the heat of the day of early organization and growth, with rare diligence and distinctive ability, seasoned with patience and charity.

Brother Little was always present in the State grange sessions and served in many official and committee duties. He was also master of our county organization one term. But it was in our subordinate, Clyde grange No. 33, where he expended a most devoted and zealous labor for unity of action, through well disciplined, significant organization of his fellow farmers, so there should be true patrons in the art of agriculture, the parent and precursor of all arts. Beside a thorough acquaintance with the special work, and usages of the grange, he brought a rich store of practical and authoritative knowledge of horticulture, chemistry, and farm husbandry, to contribute in the mutual instruction to lighten labor, by diffusion of knowledge in agriculture and to serve to better the rewards and happiness of our members, through the specific purposes of the grange. Brother Little was worthy master and also chaplain of our grange for six terms, besides being our first overseer. He won the warm attachment of the worthy membership of those days, by his discretion, and fitting dispensations of the duties of these several stations in our order.

Our brother died on the 79th anniversary of his birthday, January 5, 1899. We remember the words he was wont to impressively pronounce at the grange altar, about the Great Harvest where we shall all be garnered at last and where he trustfully looked with faith in the Great Master of the Universe for that house not made with hands eternal in the Heavens.

Soon, full soon, we may awake
Beneath the radiant sky,
Soon, ah! soon, no sound may break
The dream in which we lie.
Quiet worlds of Sleep and Death!
But the passing of a breath,
But the beating of a heart,
Hold your shadowy realms apart.
One by one, alone and slow,
To those Silent Lands we go.

Dost thou tremble, timid soul?
The moonlight floods the sea;
The while waves murmur as they roll
A song of peace to thee.
The dawn will come, when night is o'er,
With twinkling feet along the shore.
To him who clasps his Father's hand
No terror holds the Silent Land,
Though one by one, alone and slow,
Into its mystic realms we go.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy to the daughter and our sister, expressing the hope and trust that God will graciously give her strength as a balm to her grieved heart.

Resolved, That we cherish the memory of our loved brother by preserving this memoriam in our grange records, on pages set aside to his memory; that a copy be presented to Sister Sarah A. Little and that our charter and hall be draped in mourning for 30 days.

Resolved, That a copy of this memoriam and resolutions be sent to village papers, the New York Farmer and Grange Bulletin for publication.

In the National Grange Monthly, May 1932, is a sketch of Sarah Little which we reprint here:

"Few patrons in the United States can equal the Grange record of a well-known New York woman, both in the length of her Grange experience and in the variety of angles which her service to the Order has comprised. In fact this story of her Grange life is offered in part as a challenge to any other Patron in the country who can equal or excel it.

The subject of this sketch is Miss Sarah A. Little of Clyde, New York, in Wayne County, who is the lone survivor of the entire charter membership of Clyde Grange, No. 33, which was organized January 8, 1874. Miss Little is just past 82 years of age, very well and active, and residing on a farm owned by three generations of her family five miles south of the village of Clyde. Miss Little was the second secretary of Clyde Grange, serving in that capacity for three years, and later filled the same office several other terms. The first session of New York State Grange was held in 1874 and when the second annual meeting convened at Syracuse in 1875 Miss Little was one of the attendants. From then on for 25 years she never missed a session of the State Grange until her father's death in 1899.

"For the years 1878 and 1879 she served as lady assistant steward of the New York State Grange, and in 1884 was again elected to that position, serving four years. During her long-continued attendance upon the sessions she served on many State Grange committees notably that on constitution and by-laws at the 1875 session, which framed the procedure under which the new organization was to operate. In 1890 when a standing committee on women's work was appointed, she became its chairman and occupied that position many years; this committee later developed into the home economics committee of the State Grange and now designated as the service and hospitality committee.

"Miss Little took the Seventh Degree of the Order at one of the early sessions in Washington, D. C., and recalls the presence of several of the original founders. There was little in the degree as given at that time to remind one of the beautiful ceremony at Rochester in 1930 at which this life-long Patron was again present. Following the Madison session, Miss Little has been presented with her Golden Sheaf certificate and is very proud of its possession, not unmindful of the fact that she has eight years to her credit as a Grange member, in addition to the 50-year requirement of a Golden Sheaf Patron.

"Miss Little was born in the stagecoach era of 1850, when Millard Fillmore was President, and the Malcolm postoffice at Tyre in Seneca county near her present home received its name from her father, Malcolm Little, who was the second master of Clyde Grange in 1875, while Benjamin Wood, the first master, was the grandfather of the present Clyde master, Richard P. Hunt. Among her treasures Miss Little values highly a copy of the address of State Master George D. Hinckley of Fredonia, which he gave at the Syracuse session of 1875, which she first attended. To her belongs the distinction of being one of the first women ever appointed on a state Grange committee and she was the only one at the time, serving with four men. She has the further distinction of having even made a motion at that 1875 State Grange session, which was quite a daring thing for a woman to do at any public gathering in 1875.

"At the 50th anniversary of Clyde Grange, February 23, 1924, Miss Little was called upon to present the history of the half century and at the dedication of the new Clyde Grange hall a little more than a year ago she was honored as the only surviving charter member. She still retains much interest in her farm, operated by Mr. & Mrs. Patrick Mulcahy, finds great delight in treasured pets, two yellow cats, while her chief diversion is writing poetry.

"When Miss Little was a young woman it was a great fad with her to secure the autographs of prominent people, and her book includes among other well-known names, those of General U. S. Grant and Brigham Young, the Mormon pioneer and leader. Her uncle married Brigham Young's sister. Miss Little offers no recipe for longevity, but does not hesitate to express her belief that a part of her continued health and activity is due to the fact that she has always taken a keen interest in life and has endeavored to participate vigorously in its affairs, while she slyly hints that belonging to the Order of Patrons of Husbandry and entering energetically into all its work may have had something to do with keeping her always young and happy."

As Sarah has said, "My work in connection with New York State Grange and Clyde Subordinate Grange was about the most important work in a public way that I ever did. I held the position as chairman of Women's Work Committee for years and served in many other capacities." In a letter written by Sarah Little May 3, 1935, little more than a month before her death she says, "Do you remember that I am really, truly old folks, eighty-five last November, crippled more or less with rheumatism. I prove the saying that old age is dark and unlovely. I keep

MARY JANE LITTLE, born 17 May 1828 at Tyre, Seneca, New York, is the first child of Malcolm and Catherine (Turner) Little. She married 8 September 1846, Eber Inman, son of Eber and Mary (Forester) Inman. He was born 25 July 1822, at Junius, Seneca County, New York; died 15 August 1893 at Tyre. She died 1 January 1919 at Clyde, New York at the home of her daughter Hortense Little Syron with whom she had made her home for nearly twenty two years. She was past ninety years, and one of the oldest residents of her locality. On Sunday, January 5th prayer was said at her late home, and funeral at the Dutch Reformed church in Tyre was conducted by the Reverend C. M. Boughton. She was buried beside her husband in the Ridge Road cemetery across the street from the church, and only a few miles south of her childhood home.

ELIZA ANN LITTLE, born 22 March 1836, at Tyre, Seneca County, New York. She was married 23 December 1852 to Morris Conklin, he was born 2 June 1830, Middleburgh, Vermont. They moved to Alma, Harlan County, Nebraska where he located a soldier's homestead, and it is understood that they later settled in Denver, Colorado.

EDWIN SOBIESKI LITTLE, oldest son of James Little and Susannah Young was born 23 January 1816 in Aurelius, Cayuga County, New York. Very little is known definitely of his life. He probably helped his father on the farm, went to school and had good opportunity for reading at home, for it has been said his father had a fine library for those days. Edwin was between six and seven years old when his father was killed in an accident.

We next hear of the family in Mendon, New York where the Young family lived. Edwin's mother, Susannah Young being alone no doubt felt need of comfort and guidance from her own kin. In 1828 Susannah moved to Spring Water Valley in Livingston County, New York. There Feramorz left his mother to live with a Chamberlain family. Susannah had married again, a William B. Stilson, and they with the other children returned to Mendon.

In 1832 the Young family were baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and this included Edwin Little and his mother. "In 1833 the Young family, brothers and sisters went to Kirtland, Ohio" where the Saints were gathering. It is not known if Susannah and Edwin went to Kirtland, but the statement above quoted from Utah History by Tullidge seems to indicate they did. Any way we know that Edwin was always near his mother. In 1842 when James, and later Feramorz arrived in Nauvoo, Illinois they found their mother and brother there.

On 22 March 1842 Edwin married Harriet Amelia Decker. Their son George Edwin was born 6 August 1844, in Nauvoo. They went through the trials and persecutions that fell upon the "mormons" in those days. They were faithful to the religion they had espoused and accepted the new doctrines put out by their leader and Prophet. When the Nauvoo temple was ready Edwin was one of the participants in its ceremonies, and was baptized for some of his known relatives who had died before the true church of Christ had been restored to earth.

Edwin with his wife and child was in the exodus from Nauvoo in 1846. It is said that he helped the band of Saints cross the Mississippi river on the ice. His own wagon being the last broke through the ice and he was thrown into the cold water. From this soaking he developed pneumonia from which he never recovered.

We quote from Utah Historical Quarterly page 74, 1946. An article on the Spirit of the Pioneers, Biography Diary of Lorenzo Dow Young.

He says; "The camp arrived at Richardson's point, fifty five miles from Nauvoo. It remained there a few days and several brethren found work. "

"Here Lorenzo's nephew, Edwin Little, was taken very sick with lung fever. He was removed to a house about two miles from camp, but he continued to grow worse and died on the 18 March 1846. Journal History for March 18, 1846 says, "At 7:20 A. M. Edwin Little died and was buried at dusk on the divide between the Fox and Chequest rivers. "

EDWIN SOBIESKI LITTLE was born 23 January 1816 at Aurelius, Cayuga County, New York the eldest son of James Little and Susannah Young. He married 22 March 1842 at Nauvoo, Illinois, Harriet Amelia Decker, daughter of Isaac and Harriet Page (Wheeler) Decker. She was born 13 March 1826 at Phelps, Ontario County, New York; died 31 May 1917 in Salt Lake City, Utah. He died 18 March 1846 and is buried at Richardson's Point, Iowa.

- 83-C 1. George Edwin Little, born 6 August 1844 in Nauvoo, Illinois; died 27 September 1915 at Tetonia, Idaho. (formerly called Haden.)

Harriet Amelia Decker, widow of Edwin Sobieski Little, married the second time 22 September 1848, Ephraim Knowlton Hanks, son of Benjamin and Martha (Knowlton) Hanks. He was born 21 March 1826 in Madison, Lake County, Ohio. He died 9 June 1890. In this marriage she had seven children.

Marcelus Hanks, Ottis Hanks, Marcia Amelia Hanks (Hyde), Harriet Page Hanks (Duboce), Clara B. Hanks (Felt), Charles Decker Hanks, and Perry Isaac Hanks.

HARRIET AMELIA DECKER, daughter of Isaac and Harriet Page (Wheeler) Decker was born 13 March 1826 in Phelps, Ontario County, New York. She is the third child in the family of seven children and of Dutch decent. Her grand parents, Peter and Hannah Snook Decker were emigrants from Holland, and among the first settlers of Ontario County. The family made several moves while Harriet was still a young child, first to Cattaraugus County, New York then to Portage, Ohio, later to Franklin and Kirtland, Ohio.

While at Portage an important event came into their lives which was to have a far reaching influence on their future. The Gospel message reached their family, and being people of honest purpose and pure living they recognized the voice of the Good Shepherd calling and all joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Harriet was nine years old when she was baptized. This new church had been organized only five years earlier by the Prophet Joseph Smith. The Decker family became intimate associates and staunch friends of Brother Joseph. Harriet has said that the Prophet was one of the most gentle, loving, humble, and companionable men she ever knew.

The Deckers traveled with the Saints to Missouri, and there were partakers of the mob violence which forced the Saints to go to Illinois. Under these conditions Harriet's opportunity for formal education was limited, but under the guidance of a mother who was an expert housekeeper she and her sister became fine home makers. She developed into a beautiful and charming young woman with the grace and dignity which comes through ancestries of refinement and culture.

At Winchester, Illinois, Harriet met Edwin S. Little and after a year of courtship they were married at her father's home. Joseph Young performed the ceremony. Edwin was 26 years old and Harriet Amelia only 16, and though young, with her training in the arts of home making, cooking, sewing etc. she was prepared for her responsibilities.

Their marriage was short lived, for in four years he was taken from her by death. It was in February 1846 in the exodus of the Saints from Nauvoo, Edwin had helped his uncle, Brigham Young, to get many of the people and their wagons across the Mississippi river. His own wagon being the last broke through the ice and plunged into the cold water. Edwin gained the shore, but contracted a severe cold which turned to pneumonia from which he died six weeks later. He was buried in Iowa about 55 miles from Nauvoo. She was a widow now at the age of 23 years and left with an infant son 18 months old. It was in one of Brigham Young's wagons that she made the memorable journey to Utah with the pioneers who reached the Valley in October 1847.

Just ten days after her arrival Harriet met her future husband. She was assisting in preparing dinner at the home of Captain Rosencrantz for some of the Mormon Battalion, who had also arrived the same month. Among them was Ephraim Hanks. A mutual affinity sprung up and ripened into love. They were married in September 1848 by Brigham Young at the home of Lorenzo D. Young. This home was a small log house located where the historic Beehive house now stands.

Ephraim K. Hanks was a man of strong characteristics. He was a pioneer organizer and blazed trails for thousands of Utah people to follow, he carried the first U. S. mail from Laramie to Salt Lake City. He was a man of great courage and faith, a diamond in the rough.

To this union was born seven children.

A quotation from her obituary sums up her story.

"Grandmother Hanks was an ideal old lady, whom it was the greatest of pleasure to visit. She was like an exquisite cameo with her silver gray hair and keen black eyes which sparkled when she was animated. She always dressed in perfect good taste. Her great love for flowers and all of God's wonderful works, and her keen insight into human nature made her loved by all. She sent you away from her presence with an impulse to do better things, and with a feeling that life was beautiful and worthwhile.

She died in Salt Lake City in 1917 at the age of 91 years. Knowing that she had fulfilled a worthy and noble mission here on earth we also know that her welcome on the other shore will be everlasting and eternal."

Word has been handed down, and passed on to us by Lucile Little, a granddaughter-in-law of Feramorz Little, that he was named after the Persian Prince in the story of Lalla Rookh. Since all members of the family may not be familiar with the story we give it here in a condensed form.

The story of a Persian Prince who was to marry the Princess, Lalla Rookh of Delhi, India, is told by the Irish Poet, Thomas Moore.

It was arranged that the royal couple was to meet at Cashmere, and from there would travel to Bucharia. To enliven the tedious journey the bridegroom had sent, among the attendants, a young poet of Cashmere who should be permitted to her pavilion to recite the stories of the East. Feramorz, the young minstrel, was graceful and heroic, breathing music from his very eyes. To relieve the pauses in his recitation of love stories he carried in his hand a "kitar" such as Arab maids of old listened to in the moonlight gardens of Alhambra.

In the course of their journey the princess falls in love with the poet, and decides that though the heart she has to offer the king of Bucharia might be cold and broken it should at least be pure. She must forget the short dream of happiness she had enjoyed. Feramorz was not to be admitted to her presence again. However, the princess hears from a distance the melancholy defiance of the poet's lute and song, which convinces her that he is as enamoured and miserable as herself. As they near their destination they see ruins of an old tower which only the poet can explain. He is sent for, and to Lalla Rookh appeared so pale and unhappy that she repented her cruelty in having so long excluded him, and readily consents to hear the story.

As they ascended the barren mountains, which separates the countries the heat was intolerable and their encampments were limited to a few hours of repose, and Lally Rookh saw no more of Feramorz. Her ladies saw the blight that had fallen upon her spirits find her cheeks. She was pale and inanimate, neither the coolness of the atmosphere, the countless water-falls rushing from the high mountains, nor the gay processions that met her entrance into the valley, nor the magnificence of decorations along the roads in her honor could charm away the melancholy of her spirits.

It was evening when they arrived at the city, the marriage was fixed for the next morning. The morning was fresh and fair, and the princess and her party soon arrived at the magnificent palace of the monarch. At the end of the hall stood two thrones, on one of which sat Aliris, the youthful king of Bucharia. On the other was in a few minutes to be placed the beautiful princess. Immediately upon the entrance of Lalla Rookh the monarch descended from his throne to meet her; but scarcely had he time to take her hand in his when she screamed in surprise and fell at his feet. It was Feramorz himself that stood before her. Feramorz was himself the Sovereign of Bucharia, who in disguise had accompanied his young bride from Delhi, and having won her love as a humble minstrel now amply deserved to enjoy it as King, and Lalla Rookh, in memory of their delightful journey never called the king by any other name than FERAMORZ.

FERAMORZ LITTLE was born the 14th day of June 1820, in Aurelius, Cayuga County, New York. He was the fifth generation from Thomas Little who left London for Ireland in company with William, Prince of Orange, in 1690. Feramorz's grandfather, William Little Jr. had three sons, Moses, Malcolm and James. Last mentioned (James) was Feramorz' father. His mother, Susannah Young Little, was a sister to Brigham Young.

His father, James Little, was accidentally killed in November 1822. After the tragic death of her husband, Susannah Young Little and her three small sons moved to Mendon, Monroe County, New York, where her father, John Young Sr. and all her brothers and sisters lived. In 1829, Susannah Little married William B. Stilson. In 1829 Feramorz left his home and went to work for General Solomon Chamberlain who lived in Spring Water, New York, where he stayed until 1837.

Feramorz left New York State in the year 1842, and 1844 arrived in St. Louis where for the first time in ten years he met his family again. That same year, William B. Stilson died and from that time on he cared for his mother and her children.

In the year 1844, he went with his mother's brother Edwin and his brother-in-law Charles F. Decker to the Mormon City of Nauvoo. In 1846, on a second visit to that city, he married Fannie Maria Decker, on February 12, 1846, in the home of his Uncle, Brigham Young, who performed the ceremony. He then took his young bride and went to live in St. Louis where he was in business for three years before coming to the Salt Lake Valley in 1850.

He contracted with the U.S. Post Office Dept. through Samuel H. Woodson to carry mail from Salt Lake to Fort Laramie, Wyoming. They were to meet the East mail there on the 5th of each month. He carried on this work for four years with his brothers-in-law, Charles F. Decker and Ephraim K. Hanks, and they suffered many hardships and terrifying experiences.

One morning when they awakened from sleep they found fresh bear tracks of a huge grizzly, they shuddered and felt it was a miracle that they were still alive. In the winter of 1852-53 Feramorz and his two companions, a Frenchman and an Indian nearly lost their lives. Early in December they left Fort Laramie for Utah with the mail. Little had shortly before put his ankle out of joint and it was swollen badly, so he was obliged to do camp duty on crutches. Quoting from Levi Edgar Young, found in Utah in Her Western Setting, by Milton R. Hunter we learn more of this trip.

"The Little company continued on until it began to storm. They were soon on a trackless wilderness of snow, with no guide marks but a few distant peaks which they recognized. Blinded by the drifting snowstorm they wandered too far south of the South Pass into what the mountaineers called the 'Bad Lands'. They were destitute of sagebrush or anything that would serve as fuel. The only vegetation was a short bunch-grass. This was sufficient to sustain the animals if they could endure the piercing cold wind.

"Night came on and camp was made on a hillside. It was not only very cold, but the wind was blowing hard. The men were in danger of freezing, for it was impossible to make a fire. Their supper consisted of raw meat and a little bread.

"In the morning the storm was raging in all its fury. They packed their animals and traveled on, now knowing where they were. The snow was very deep, but fortunately they reached some timber before night, and camped in an old Indian lodge. About six feet of snow was cleared away and a fire made. After a good sleep they traveled on, and finally reached a trading post on the Green River, kept by two Frenchmen.

"From here the party went on to Fort Bridger, they had been snow-bound for days, but Little and his men decided to continue their journey to Salt Lake City. Streams were frozen over, the storm raged at times, and, notwithstanding Little's weak ankle, they reached the Weber River in a starved condition.

"The camp was finally seventeen miles from Salt Lake City. Mr. Little, after careful consideration of all the chances of success or failure, concluded it was better for himself and companions to use what strength they had left in making a desperate effort the following day to reach the city. It was too cold to sleep much.

"In the morning, they all prepared the best they could to take the desperate chances of the day. No one could be expected to render assistance to another. Life or death hung on the issue of that day's exertions, for the chances were against their living through the cold of another night without shelter. The mail was cashed. The men pushed on, and on January 20 they arrived at Salt Lake City."

In 1854 and 1855 under contract with Governor Brigham Young, Feramor Little built the Territorial Penitentiary. In 1856, he left on an emergency call to help companies of saints in dire distress on the plains. Because there was great need for strength in number and growth in population for this small pioneer band, and following the advice of the church leaders, many prominent men, took other wives and reared large families to the benefit of the communities. And on the day July 18, 1858, Feramor Little married two lovely young women, Annie Elizabeth Little (daughter of Colonel Jessie Carter Little) and Julia Anna Hampton. In 1865, he and President Young purchased the Salt Lake House, a hotel, and he remained its proprietor for seven years. In the years of 1868-69 and 70, with Lew Hills and others, he helped construct the first railroad through Utah. It was known as the "Utah Central," and connected with the Union Pacific and Utah Southern.

In 1872 and 1873 he and his daughter, Susan Claire Little, were among those chosen to join the George A. Smith group of Saints to go to the Palestine Country and a prolonged tour through Europe, Asia Minor, and into Egypt.

In 1876 Feramor Little was elected Mayor of Salt Lake City, and served three terms until 1882, and during his tenure of office, constructed the Salt Lake and Jordan Canal, improved the streets, and extended the water works.

Also the "Mill Farm" owned by Brigham Young was purchased by the city, and became known as "Liberty Park."

In 1867, his wife Julia died and a few years later Annie Elizabeth was separated from him and married Robert Dye.

His wife Fannie died in June 1881, and he married again in 1882, Rebecca Mantel.

On August 14, 1887 Feramorz Little died, leaving a splended fortune to a large family. His funeral was thronged with mourners, and many great and good things were said by those who loved and respected him.

FANNIE MARIA DECKER LITTLE, was born 24 April 1830 at Freedom, Cataraugus County, New York. She was a daughter of Isaac and Harriet Page (Wheeler) Decker and the wife of Feramorz Little whom she married 12 February 1846, at the home of his uncle Brigham Young in Nauvoo, Illinois. She was only sixteen years, but knew what she wanted and said to Brigham Young. "If you don't marry us we will get someone else to do it."

After the marriage she went with her husband to St. Louis, Missouri where he was in business, and where he also took care of his mother and her children. In 1850 they traveled across the plains to the valleys of the mountains where she worked and endured with him the hardships common to all in the territory in those early days. She was in every sense, a kind mother, a loving wife, and a true woman. She was loved by all who knew her for her gentle disposition and goodness of heart which made her one of the best of companions and truest of friends! Though she did no public work, her frequent, quiet acts of kindness and generosity will cause her memory to remain for many years to come.

Her death on the 28 June 1881 came rather suddenly and unexpected after a brief illness caused by poison carbuncle on the back of her neck near the spinal cord at the base of the brain. She was the mother of nine children - six of whom were living at her death, the youngest being fourteen years old. At her funeral were beautiful music and floral tributes and words of consolation and comfort drawn from the assurance held forth in the gospel of a glorious resurrection and a happy reunion in a brighter and better world.

Through her own efforts she attended the University of Deseret (which after statehood became the University of Utah) and received a Normal diploma. She then began a career of teaching. In 1899 she received her Bachelor of Science degree from the University of Utah, and was considered one of the best educated women in Utah in her day. For ten years she served as one of the Board of Regents of the University.

In 1893 she founded the Author's Club in Salt Lake City, and it is still following much the same program as she had planned it. Also in 1893 she was a delegate from Utah to the National Council of Women held in , where she gave an address before that body of women.

Rebecca Ellen was also active in church work - the Latter-day Saints Church - She was president of the Ensign Stake Relief Society, and later served on the Relief Society General Board, from 1905 to 1909.

Nellie, as she was called, had on the 3rd of July 1882 married Fera-morz Little, who was then Ex Mayor of the City. They had two daughters, Nellie Vivian and Sadie Catherine. Rebecca Ellen died 29 May 1909 in Salt Lake City, and was buried there 1 June 1909.

JAMES AMASA LITTLE the youngest son of James Little and Susannah Young born 14 September 1822 at Aurelius, Cayuga County, New York. He was named after his father, but in mature years took the name Amasa as a middle name. As he himself has stated. It seems that he was born to sorrows and hardships which began early. When still a babe in arms he was left fatherless by the death of his father through an accident. Any recording of his early childhood has been lost so we pass along till his seventh year when he was bound out to a couple named Bouton who lived at Ira in Cayuga County. They were good Christian people but as James has said, they were married late in life and had no children of their own to tone down the austerities of their characters. Sperry Bouton was a kind hearted man but quick tempered and excitable under the influence of his wife who had a melancholy turn of mind and was apt to find much fault with trifles which was the cause of many severe beatings for the boy. He has said that he has no recollection of any affection ever manifested for him by either of them. As he grew up he longed intensely for somebody to love. There was a void in his young heart and nothing in his surroundings to fill it. The fault finding and beatings caused an increasing discontent and he longed for the time of release to come. As he was nearing his 16th birthday a change came when one day Bouton flew into a passion and was about to administer another beating. James decided he had born quite enough, and took a stand in his own self defense. He was relieved now of much abuse but took no advantage of the circumstance and continued diligent in his duties and labors.

The Boutons were conscientious in sending him to school until his 11th year then he began to work and went to school about four months through the winter and received a good education for those days. He learned rapidly in school, and at an early age resolved to play less and read more, and to use every facility for improving his mind. He loved stories of travel, history, and biography and before 16 years of age he had studied Grecian and Roman history and was much interested in Plutarch's Lives, and Milton's

"Paradise Lost." The Boutons were strict in the observance of the Sabbath day and attending church. The boy missed probably only one or two times a year attending the Presbyterian church at the town of Lysander, Onondaga County. He says in their neighborhood, there was no profane or vulgar language, no sabbath breaking and property was safe anywhere. These early habits of associations have exercised a great influence for good all through his life. He remained with the Boutons until spring of his 17th year then he hired out on his own. He taught school when 18 years, and had his first romance which ended in disappointment because he was penniless and the girl had a small inheritance.

He was ambitious to make a home of his own so in the spring of 1841 after visiting relatives in New York, he took a boat for Milwaukee. Here he again met with a sad disappointment. He worked all summer for a "long faced praying Methodist", who in the fall cheated him of all his earnings by taking bankruptcy. A Year later he made his way to Nauvoo where his uncles and his mother and oldest brother Edwin were. He recalled that his mother had visited him once while at Boutons and that she and husband, Stilson, were "Mormons." He was very prejudiced against the "Mormons." He found his family at Nauvoo in poverty and sickness, and he himself contracted the chills and fever.

His stepfather, Stilson was a soldier in the army at Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Missouri. In discouragement James also enlisted in Company A, 3rd Regiment of Infantry on 23rd November 1843. Though he felt reckless and indifferent as to his fate he was not disposed to make a wreck of himself by getting into bad habits. He believed nothing could be gained by humiliating manhood. He had no sympathy with gambling and other vices which commonly characterized military life. With the first rumors of war in the spring of 1844 his regiment was ordered south to Fort Jessup. Shortly after this he learned of Stilson's death. In October 1845 he was made "Army Postmaster" and from there on remained at General Taylor's headquarters. He served in that capacity to the close of the war in the summer of 1848.

About September 1848 he returned to St. Louis where his brother Feramorz and he were in joint grocery business. He having furnished money for the enterprise while serving in the war with Mexico. Here in St. Louis he also found his mother and her husband Alonzo Pettingall who was a faithful Latter-day Saint and desired to convince the prejudiced sons of the true principles. But as James was a confirmed skeptic and infidel so far as the Bible and religion were concerned it was difficult to give evidence. Often this winter his mind was filled with questions: "How is it that I am a thinking active, dual being of mind and body?" What am I here for? I must pass away as others do, what is my future destiny? I believed there was a great overruling power, but of his attributes of dwelling, had no conception." One night as he lay in deep meditation he was impressed to pray. His effort was about this, "Oh God, If there is a God, how can these questions be answered? Where can I obtain knowledge of myself?" A voice said distinctly, "Mormonism, Mormonism." He was not startled in the least, but was deeply impressed, and perhaps more ready to listen to his step-father who sincerely wished to give him correct ideas. Anyway under the influence of his step-father and their discussions his conception of the character of the Bible rapidly underwent a change and and he came to understand it as he had not done before. In February 1849 Pettingill became ill and it was soon evident that the end was approaching. James was much impressed by his calm resignation and firm faith in the principles he had advocated. This led to further study and a decision to be baptized.

The incident of his baptism is quoted from his own writings. He knew the Saints were a slandered, persecuted people and that if he joined them their destiny must also be his. "A feeling lurked within me to wish that my baptism be a little quiet. Elder Augustus Farnham was president of the St. Louis Branch. He had made arrangements to meet me at Cheateau's pond in the outskirts of the city about 9 o'clock on a Sunday morning. I quietly got a change of clothing from my room and with it under my arm started for the pond, but I was to go through a curious and to me a novel experience. I had walked but a little distance when some intelligence began to reason against my being baptized bringing forcibly to my mind the unpopularity of the "Mormons," the great sacrifice I was making, and especially forced on me the idea that there would be no one at the pond to baptize me. This influence so wrought on me that in a short time I turned around to go home. I went back but a short distance and another power began to advance reasons why I should go on to the pond to be baptized. So strong was this influence also that in a little time I turned around to go to the pond. Again the opposite influence seemed to increase its efforts to induce me to return. It was so powerful that I again turned back. After going a short distance a voice appeared to come from above me, clear and distinct, 'Go thou down to the pond and thou shalt find someone there to baptize thee.' With great resolution to obey I again started for the pond. The opposing influence seemed to redouble its efforts and again I turned about to go home. There was no further opposition, and I returned my clothing to my room and went to the Saints meeting. There I found Elder Farnham who informed me that he had been to the pond and waited for me. I was afterwards baptized by Elder Farnham without any unusual occurrence, and confirmed at the waters edge.

Not long after baptism a desire came to gather with the Saints in the mountains, and as if to drive him out the impression came that he would die of the cholera if he stayed. His mother was anxious to go; so a wagon and yoke of oxen was fitted out with provisions and necessary articles for the journey. Taking his mother and half sister Cornelia Stilson they left St. Louis quite as soon as the grass began to grow. They traveled northward to the Iowa cross road from Nauvoo arriving at Kanessville about the first of June 1849. Here they found plenty of people traveling west and were organized in groups of tens, fifties and hundreds for the trek across the plains.

The most serious difficulty encountered was the stampedes of their cattle. These sometimes occurred while traveling, but generally while encamped with the cattle in a corral formed by the wagons. Stampedes were ever sudden, unsuspected and dangerous. They were so dangerous and frequent that they overbalanced the fear of Indians. They found the best remedy was to travel and camp by tens and tie up their cattle on the outside of the wagons. Among the ten of James Little's group was John Lytle and family whose eldest daughter he married. They encamped near the mouth of Emigration canyon on the evening of October 16, 1849. Their first intimation of being near civilization came next morning when they found their cattle in a stray pound, in search of food the cattle had found a grain field.

In Salt Lake City (village) James found a one room adobe house for his mother & sister and within a few days he began to work for his uncle Brigham Young. On the 16 December 1849 Susannah, his mother got up a little dinner and invited her brother Brigham Young. On that occasion James Little and Mary Jane Lytle were married. Soon he found a house with two rooms one for his mother and one for himself. Shortly after his marriage Indian troubles arose at the Provo colony in Utah County. James acting as lieutenant under Daniel H. Wells, Lt. General of the Nauvoo Legion, with 100 others were sent down to quell the hostilities and make it safe for future settlement. The winter was unusually severe the snow deep and the weather extremely cold throughout the campaign.

Late in the winter of 1849 a mountain of iron ore had been discovered by the Southern Exploring Company and late in 1850 George A. Smith left Salt Lake City with a party of one hundred, traveled 250 miles south for the purpose of developing the iron industry. The town established in January 1851 was called Parowan. James Little and wife were among this first group. Their first child was born 10 June 1851 and died in September of same year. Their second child was born in August 1852, then they moved to Cedar City, and James was sheriff of Iron County.

In 1854 he was called to fill a mission to England so his family moved back to Salt Lake City. While on his mission he was associate editor for the Millennial Star, a church publication, and worked in the office with Franklin D. Richards, president of the mission. The latter half he was made counselor to Orson Pratt who had taken Richards' place as mission president. James did considerable traveling and preaching throughout England and Scotland. On the 14 February 1857 he took steamer for the return trip to Boston Harbor, having spent a little over two years and eight months, but not yet was he free to return home. He had been appointed Frontier Emigration Agent for the church. In this capacity he worked till 12th of July. Only when he had seen the last of the companies both ox-team and hand-cart outfitted and on their way across the plains could he turn his attention to getting off his own team.

The following year he with all other citizens of Salt Lake City left their homes not knowing if there would be a return, or if the U.S. Army would try to take possession and thus force a burning of their city. About 1862 a call came to settle St. George and in another five years to go to Eagle Valley, Nevada and again in 1871 the family moved to Kanab. James had in the meantime taken two more wives, on 21 December 1858 he married Annie M. Baldwin an English girl who had crossed the plains in the first hand-cart company two years previously, and on the 19th of November 1864 Mary Elizabeth Tullidge a daughter of John Tullidge from whom he had taken some singing lessons while in England.

In Kanab he went into the sheep business and acquired a ranch in Garfield County. True to duty's call on the 20 October 1875 he left his ranch, and on horseback started for Salt Lake City in answer to a call for a second mission. This time to the Eastern United States. His specific assignment was to get acquainted with the leading journalists and to do what he could to open up an influence in the favor of his people. He spent much time writing and seeking publication. In April 1876 only two months after his return he was called to preside over the North Western States mission which comprised Iowa, Nebraska, Dakota and Minnesota with headquarters at Council Bluffs. His absence from home during the winter had brought losses to his business and to leave again in spring would bring hardship upon his family, never-the-less he decided to fill the call regardless of the sacrifice. He faithfully performed his duties in the mission and returned to Salt Lake City August 5, 1877. On the 9th President Young sent for him to come to his office and talked to him about doing some writing for the Church. On the 13th a desk was set up in President Young's office and James Little began his work on a compendium of the Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. On the 27th he called at the home to see Brigham Young who was ill. "There was a remarkable look of purity and innocence about him," said James. President Young died Wednesday 29th, August 1877. One of the greatest men of the age had passed away. James Little then went South to his families on the ranch and in Kanab and found them much in need of common necessities. At President John Taylor's request he again went to Salt Lake City in October and on the 8th resumed work on the Compendium. Later, after an interview with President John Taylor and showing him the manuscript which met the president's approval, he asked permission to complete the work at home so he could be with his family. To this President Taylor consented. The Compendium was published in 1882. James Little is the author of, "From Kirtland to Salt Lake City" as well as the biographies of many prominent men of the church. He had at the time of his death a complete history of Brigham Young stored in his trunk.

In 1890 when the "Manifesto" against plural marriage came out his wife Annie, and two youngest children, Malcolm and David, went to Mexico. The next summer she returned to Salt Lake City and took back her daughter Harriet. The husband went to Mexico later after finishing a piece of literary work he had started. James Little and family settled in Colonia Diaz in the northern part of the state of Chihuahua. Their oldest daughter, Mary Jane Little Johnson, had already made a home there three years earlier.

On the 22 December 1895 James A. Little was ordained a Patriarch by an apostle, Francis M. Lyman, and gave many blessings. After the death of the wife, Annie, May 5, 1906 he returned to Kanab and resided there till his death 10 September 1908. He is buried there. His entire life has been spent in the advancement of truth and service to his church.

MARY JANE LYTLE (LITTLE)

MARY JANE LYTLE, is the second child of a family of nine children of John and Christina (Whitner) Lytle. She was born 6 August 1831 in Middlebury, Portage County, Ohio. Her maternal grandparents George and Sarah Whitner were of Pennsylvania, and her paternal grandparents Andrew Lytle and Sarah Davidson were of Ohio.

When very young her parents moved to Missouri with the Saints where they went through the drivings and mobbings inflicted upon the saints at that period. In February 1839 they crossed the Mississippi river to Quincy, Illinois. Later they went to Commerce and built the beautiful city of Nauvoo where Mary went to school and remembered that the Prophet Joseph Smith was a great favorite with the children. He sometimes stopped to shake hands with them on the playground, or to play a game of marbles with the boys.

Mary's father was one of the first police, or body guards for the prophet in the early years of Nauvoo, and he was always a welcome guest at the Lytle Home. Mary knew of his power and authority, and saw a child instantly healed by the laying on of his hands. She recalled the time of the Prophet and the Patriarch going to Carthage to stand trial, and saw the bodies of the martyrs as they lay in the Mansion House. Her father was one of the guards that night. Though only a child she was one of the mourners to attend the funeral. It was indeed a dark day and one of mourning for the whole church.

Mary's father and family left Nauvoo in 1846 with the Saints who were able to leave at that time. They traveled to Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Winter Quarters, Nebraska where they remained till 1849. In June they started on the journey across the plains. It was very rainy and muddy and they suffered many inconveniences.

She first met her future husband, James A. Little, at the crossing of the Missouri river. A Mr. Robert Porter had lent her his horse to ride. She came to the crossing of the river with herself and horse decorated with wild roses. She stood in the end of the boat with the bridle over her arm when she first met James A. Little, his mother, and his sister Cornelia Stilson. It was there they fell in love. She was young, had dark eyes and black hair, and fair skin. He afterward told her that as she stood in the boat with her horse she made the prettiest picture he had ever seen.

As they traveled across the plains there were disastrous stampedes and many dangerous accidents, but at night when they camped and made big bonfires the young folks sang, danced and played games. They made their own amusements and were happy in spite of hardships. Each morning Mary's mother strained the milk from their two cows into a churn brought along. Each night the jostling and shaking of the milk in the churn had formed small granules of butter which made a small pat for breakfast while sweet buttermilk and johnny cake was served for supper.

They arrived in Salt Lake City on the 17 October 1849. The Lytles moved into a house built by Uncle Andrew Lytle who had come earlier.

On the 16 December 1849 Mary Jane and James A. Little were married by Brigham Young at a small dinner party prepared by Susannah, James' mother. They began married life in one room of a log house. She had a feather bed, pillows and quilts, and a pole bed was set up in the corner of the room. They secured a few dishes at a very high price. Mary cooked over the fireplace with a bake oven and a camp kettle. Food was very scarce.

In the late fall or winter of 1850 the Littles were called to go with George A. Smith and company to Iron County where Parowan was founded in January 1851. That journey, says Mary, was worse than crossing the plains. There were no roads. The men had to literally hack and hew their way through brush and rocks with axes and shovels; they filled up washes and gulches, and with chains let down their wagons over cliffs and river beds and pulled them up on the other side.

At Parowan, Mary a young girl away from her family, felt it was hard to fight both elements and Indians. She tells of an experience one day while her husband was away. She was just taking salt rising bread from the bake oven when an Indian came in wanting the bread. They usually fed the squaws and children, but flour was scarce and precious. She gave him part of her loaf but he was not satisfied, he raised his gun and demanded all of it. Mary had been taught by her husband that Indians admired bravery so she must never let them see she was frightened. Remembering this she grabbed her broom and hit the Indian chasing him out of the room. She thought she must die of fright. Relief came when the Indian came in again laughing and said, "Wino Squaw." He afterward told her husband how brave she was.

At Parowan Mary's first son, Feramorz, was born 10 June 1851, and died three months later. After the birth of her second son in 1852 they were called to help settle Cedar City. There they built a three room adobe house and Mary was happy with friends she had made there. She was contented to stay, but this was not to be. In the spring of 1854 they were called to Salt Lake City, and at the April Conference James was called on a mission to Europe. He left in May with Franklin D. Richards, president of the British Mission.

At first Mary lived in a room of her father's house, but soon he was called to go to Carson City, Nevada and was obliged to sell his house to get teams and other equipment. She then procured a room in the home of F. D. Richards. After thirty two months in England, and several months service as Emigration Agent in Missouri and the frontiers, James returned home in 1857. The following year Mary and James were with the "Mormon" people when they vacated Salt Lake City at the approach of Johnston's Army. They moved south as far as the mouth of Provo canyon. Their fourth child was born there in a wagon box.

James served a year as warden of the State Penitentiary. He was kind but firm with the inmates and was well liked. In 1861 at a call from Brigham Young James took his second wife to St. George. Mary remained in Salt Lake City for the time being, but moved to St. George in 1864. Dixie was a hard country to live in before there were houses and trees. The heat was oppressive and the hot ground burned the children's bare feet.

The Littles were next called to Eagle Valley, Nevada where Mary's last two children were born. In 1871 when the Nevada settlement was abandoned James took his three wives and twenty children to Kanab, Utah. It was a hard struggle to live for the husband was called on two more missions. Kanab and Little's Ranch in Garfield County were Mary's home for more than thirty five years. About 1906 she went to Ogden to live with her daughter Claudia. In her last illness she was tenderly cared for by Claudia and a daughter-in-law Emma Evans Little. She passed away 23 March 1921. She was the mother of five sons and four daughters, thirty six grandchildren, many great grand, and at her death one great, great grandson..

JAMES AMASA LITTLE, born 14 September 1822, married 16 December 1849, Salt Lake City, Utah, to Mary Jane Lytle, daughter of John and Christina (Whitner) Lytle. ANNIE MATILDA BALDWIN, daughter of David Baldwin and Elizabeth Ann Coles was born in Birmingham, Warwickshire, England 28 March 1839. Her father was a journeyman baker, but under the keen business ability of the wife business increased rapidly and he was able to take in a partner and became a master baker. In 1849 the father emigrated to America intending that the family should follow soon as he could send them the means. But fate destined otherwise. He arrived in St. Louis during the terrible cholera plague, contracted the disease and died 21 June 1849. His son Henry Thomas who had accompanied him, died 20 May 1851 in Springfield, Illinois.

So it fell to the lot of Annie M. to pioneer the family's emigration. She had full and firm faith that she could get through to Salt Lake Valley with the handcart company. She left England the 3rd of March 1856 with a company of emigrants who sailed on the "Enoch Train." Six weeks on the water and they landed at Boston, Massachusetts, continued their journey by train to Iowa City where the company was furnished their hand-carts. Only 17 pounds were allowed, so many cherished articles brought from home were disposed of. This company of converts were ready to make the first trip by hand-cart - to walk the 1300 miles from Omaha to Salt Lake City, not because of mob-violence but a free will offering to worship God and help build up the Lord's Kingdom in the "Valleys of the Mountains." It was the supreme test of their faith and endurance that enabled them to wade the rivers, climb the mountains, face the Indians and push the carts, the endless miles and often on empty stomachs, for the food supply ran out though they had gone on rations.

This first handcart company, under Captain Edmund Ellsworth left Council Bluffs June 9, 1856 and arrived in Salt Lake City September 26th. President Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Lieutenant General Daniel H. Wells and many citizens as well as William Pitts brass band went out to the foot hills to welcome them, and escort them into the city.

A few days after her arrival, she went to live at the home of Charles F. Decker where she remained till June 1857. Then she went to live in the home of Feramorz Little. This was her home until she married James A. Little 21 December 1858. The ceremony was performed by President Brigham Young in an upper room of his house.

In February 1862 with her husband and small daughter she traveled to St. George in southern Utah because he had been called to colonize there. In Dixie she endured with her husband all the hardships incident to settling that barren country. From the first with great faith and determination she grasped the difficulties that surrounded her and with her own hands carded, spun, and wove the cotton and wool into the necessary clothes for herself and family. Being a hard worker and ambitious she took upon herself too much labor which gradually undermined her health. In 1867 they moved to Eagle Valley. When that colony was abandoned her husband took her to Payson to live with her mother until he could again become settled. While there her health rapidly improved. In June 1872 he brought her to Kanab which was home until 1890 when they moved to Mexico. In all their troubles and privations she bore her full share and struggled very hard in order to live during his long absence on his missions. She died 5 May 1906 at Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua Mexico. She had nine children all living at the time of her death.

MARY ELIZABETH TULLIDGE

MARY ELIZABETH TULLIDGE (older spelling Tillage) born 18 April 1832 in Weymouth, Dorset, England was the oldest daughter of John Tullidge and Jane Elizabeth Daws. On her paternal side she is of Italian descent. Her father's great grandfather was one of two brothers who came from Italy to Abbotsbury, a town about twenty miles from Weymouth. They bought an estate and settled there. The father of her mother's grandfather, Harry Daws, came from Denmark; so on the maternal line she was of Danish descent.

Her father was a prominent musician in England and in Utah. He composed and arranged the first psalmody which was used for many years by the Latter-day Saints Church. A copy of this edition is in the Church Historian's library.

Her brother Edward was a noted writer and historian. Among his writings are: A History of Utah, a History of Salt Lake City, the Life of Brigham Young, and the Life of the Prophet Joseph Smith, a biography of Franklin D. Richards, and Women of Mormondom. He also wrote a five act play, "Ben Israel, or From Under the Curse."

Mary Elizabeth came from what was called the middle class. Her grandfather and also her uncle Edward were gentlemen shoemakers - that is they had a large shop and hired men to make shoes for sale. Her father went to Blandford Boarding School and received a good education then was apprenticed to a musician and became a composer and professor of music. He had a fine tenor voice and sang with the leading singers of the day. Because of his work he went to London and was away from home much of the time for several years, and as Mary Elizabeth has said, spent most of his earnings living up to the better class with whom he associated so that her mother kept a grocery store to support and educate the family. When older, Mary Elizabeth, who had grown tired of genteel poverty, was apprenticed to a dress maker that she might add to the family income.

When Mary Elizabeth was about four years old, she went to live with her great aunt Jane Pucket at Sutton, England. However, she was not a favorite with her aunt, for she was full of life, naturally independent, and perhaps strong-willed while her aunt Jane was of the olden type - very religious, a thorough Puritan, and somewhat old maidish, having had no children. When about six years old, Mary Elizabeth fell into disgrace and was sent home. Her sister Jane, who had a milder and more amiable disposition, took her place and became a great favorite. At her great aunt's death she received some property.

Mary Elizabeth went first to a "Mams" school and when eight years to a private school kept by a very refined lady. Mary Elizabeth was studious by nature and fond of learning. She was a great reader of Milton, Shakespear, and the Bible. She was religious, independent, and somewhat radical and high strung—so much so that through life she was considered proud and haughty; yet she felt that her nature was not so. She was easily ruled by love, but never by tyranny.

At twelve years she entered public school and at fourteen was chosen pupil teacher. At fifteen she was chosen to go to Borough school of London - a finishing school for teachers, but her mother would not allow her to go. She was much disappointed for she greatly desired to become a teacher. Mary Elizabeth then proposed learning dressmaking, and though her mother opposed it, she carried her point and was apprenticed for a two-year period.

Just before completing her course a strange disease broke out in the town, and Mary Elizabeth became one of the seriously afflicted ones. Many died and doctors wondered at her recovery. They concluded it was due to the mother's good nursing, but Mary Elizabeth felt it was a blessing from God, that through faith and the authority held by her brother Edward who was an Elder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, she had been restored to life and health. He had laid hands on her in administration and rebuked the disease. Edward and his companion performed these administrations secretly to avoid the derision of unbelievers.

Edward had talked much to his sister, who was a willing listener, about the doctrines of the church he had joined, but now after her illness and slow recovery she seemed to have forgotten his teachings, and he was away. The spirit worked upon her and she felt that she must affiliate with some church; so she joined the Independent Church where she had been teaching a Sunday School class for years. Yet she felt that in this act she was a hypocrite, for she had received no change of heart such as she had heard so much about. She had a very good soprano voice and had learned to read music so she sang in the church choir. When her father returned home and gave many concerts, she was his principal treble.

Mary Elizabeth had many suitors in her girlhood days, but none seemed to suit her, a fact which neither she nor her friends could understand at that time. She has since said, "I feel now the wisdom and ever provident care of our Heavenly Father. I was one of the chosen ones. My future home was to be in the valleys of the mountains, and my husband one of the servants of the Lord." In 1856 when she was twenty-four years old her parents and part of the family went to Liverpool. There two important events in Mary Elizabeth's life occurred. Through the preaching of the Elders, and particularly Orson Pratt, President of the British Mission, she was converted and baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and second she met James A. Little, who was to become her husband. He was a missionary and editor of "The Millennial Star." Her brother Edward was junior editor.

In 1859 the Tullidge family received some money from grandfather's estate. Mary Elizabeth and Jane, who had also joined the church, decided to use their portion in emigrating to America. On the 30th of March 1860 they left father, mother and brothers and started on the journey. They sailed on the ship, "Under writer" with 590 Saints. The voyage was pleasant though they encountered two gales and much rough weather. The Saints felt secure in the care of their Heavenly Father; so sang and were happy. They arrived in New York May 1st after thirty days on board ship. Their journey continued through Albany, over Lake Ontario, to Niagara Falls and on through Detroit and Chicago to Florence, Nebraska. There they gave a concert to help the poor who were traveling by hand-carts.

The journey across the plains began 14 June 1859. Mary and Jane engaged passage with a man named Holden. Because they had much baggage which they wished to go on to Salt Lake City, they walked much of the way. On Sunday the 2nd of September the company was met in Emigration Canyon by Elders George A. Smith, Lorenzo Snow and Franklin D. Richards. who held a meeting with the Saints. Mary Elizabeth's cousin, Henry Bowring, and his two wives had come to meet the girls and took them home that evening while the company came in next day.

In Salt Lake City the girls soon became active in social and church life. They were invited to join the Tabernacle choir (old tabernacle), and Mary Elizabeth also became a member of the dramatic association and of the theatrical choir under A. C. Thomas. She took part in the dedication program of the Salt Lake Theater on the 6th of March 1862.

In 1862 her parents and brother and his wife arrived in Salt Lake City. On the 19th November 1864 Mary Elizabeth and James A. Little were united in marriage by Heber C. Kimball in the Endowment House. She became his third wife. From that time on her life was mostly on the frontiers. Her husband had earlier been called to help settle Eagle Valley, Nevada to which place he took her in January 1867. In 1871 the move was to Kanab, Kane County, Utah where she lived the remainder of her days. Her first house was a shanty made mostly of willows covered with canvas, for lumber could not be had at that time. Later her husband built her a brick house.

In November 1891 because of persecutions heaped upon polygamists James A. Little went to Mexico. His wife Annie had already gone there the year before. For fifteen years Mary Elizabeth did not see him again and heard little from him until after his wife Annie died in 1906 when he returned to Kanab.

For many years Mary Elizabeth was very lonely and in poor health but she took comfort and pride in seeing her two older sons called on missions to labor in the vineyard of the Lord teaching His Gospel and gathering souls to the Restored Church. Her son, John, spent nearly two and a half years in the Southern States Mission, and Edward went to the Isles of the Sea - to far off Samoa.

In July 1897 Mary Elizabeth went to Salt Lake City to attend the Jubilee celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the Saints entry into the valley. She saw the unveiling of the Brigham Young monument which stands in the intersection of Main and South Temple street, and saw the stores all elaborately decorated with bunting and electric lights. The windows were blazes of light. It was a magnificent sight after living in a small country town. It seemed to her that all the stars had dropped from heaven and settled on the buildings. She visited with her sister and relatives in the city till September then returned to her home in Kanab.

Mary Elizabeth was a talented woman and gave freely of her time and efforts. She wrote articles for "The Women's Exponent," and speeches of welcome for visitors and returned missionaries. She was secretary of the first organized Stake Relief Society in Kanab. She worked as Sunday School teacher and as Primary President.

In 1906 when her husband returned she took him in and cared for him his last two years till he passed away on the 10th of September 1908 at the age of 86 years. She lived six years longer and died in December 1914 at the age of eighty-two years. She is buried in the Kanab cemetery.

CHARLES HENRY OLIPHANT, son of Susannah (Young) Little and Richard Oliphant, was born 15 November, 1825, in Canandaigua, Ontario Co., New York. This place is about five miles from Hill Cumorah, the famed hill of the Golden Plates.

His first recollection was of grief at being separated from his mother when not yet four years old. He had been sleeping with her but now her marriage to William B. Stilson in 1829 ended that feeling of security.

The family moved from Mendon to Spring Water and Conesus, Livingston County, and then in the fall of 1831 to Rochester, Monroe County, New York. In this city he spent his early years in the home of Ezekial Fox and his wife, Lucretia, and was known by their name.

Mr. Fox was a horticulturist and from him young Charles gained a thorough knowledge of horticultural business, which he later used to help make the desert blossom as a rose. He remembers that he went to school for six months, but his education was gained chiefly through his own efforts and study. His uncles, Brigham and Joseph Young preached the gospel of Jesus Christ to him and he grew up without prejudice against the saints. In the Fox home he was not happy and endured much abuse. They gave him a bad reputation which kept his father from making his acquaintance.

One day in August 1842 when 17 years old he left the Fox home and apprenticed himself to the carpenter and joiners trade. It was the winter of 1844-45 while working for Lauren Parsons that he first met Agnes Britton who on 11 June 1846 became his wife. They had nothing to begin with, but she continued her work for George Parsons while Charles finished his apprenticeship.

His uncles, the Youngs, and his mother and older half brother Edwin Little had before this time joined the new church organized by the Prophet Joseph Smith and had gone with the Saints to Nauvoo, Illinois, and then out west to the Rocky Mountains. Charles remained in Rochester till 1852, then a spirit of unrest seized him, he longed for his family. He wrote a letter to Brigham Young in Salt Lake City and from the answer learned that his mother, his brother, James A. Little and sister, Cornelia Stilson had arrived in that city in 1849, and Feramorz in 1850. He wrote his mother that he planned to start for Salt Lake City the following summer-1853. He was afterwards informed that she had received this letter just four days before her death and was made happy that he was gathering with the church.

He made this journey by mule team, and lost his two oldest children from scarlet fever on the way while at St. Louis, Missouri. He arrived in Salt Lake City 25 September 1853. In May 1855 he and his wife were baptized members of the Church.

In the fall of 1855 he called the first horticultural meeting ever to be held in Utah. This meeting was the initiatory step to the incorporating of the Deseret Agricultural and Manufacturing Society, by the legislature the ensuing winter. Charles was an active board member and correspondence secretary. In the spring of 1856 President Brigham Young laid his hands upon Charles' head and blessed him and set him apart to a calling of growing trees, shrubs, and everything of this kind to beautify and enrich the country. Charles H. Oliphant established a large nursery in Salt Lake City and grew fruit trees and flowers, creating in the hearts of the people a love for the beautiful things of the earth.

In 1858 to 1860 he filled a mission for his church. He labored in the state of New York. During his absence on this mission, Francis F. Fox, a son of his former foster parents came to Utah and persuaded the wife, Agnes, to leave with him. This rash act she later repented and was returning to Utah when death took her away 30 August 1868 at Wautoma, Waushara, Wisconsin. Her children were left with a sister there and remained in Wisconsin. On this same mission he met Sabina Augusta Dollinger, whom he married 1 December 1861 at Salt Lake City.

After living in Salt Lake City for eleven years he was called to Southern Utah where he labored incessantly along his line. In 1864 with his wife, Sabina A. Dollinger, known as Aunt Saby, he traveled south by mule team, scattering his stock of trees and shrubs along the way from Salt Lake City to Dixie, then to Eagle Valley, Nevada. There he built a house and worked hard to build up his stock of trees. It was here he met Lucinda Abigail Judd, who he married in the Salt Lake Endowment House the 11th of April 1870. The following spring when the Eagle Valley mission was abandoned by the saints, the Oliphant family left behind all they had worked so hard to acquire. Their house was left in the hands of another party to sell which he did, but skipped with the money. In 1871 Oliphant with his two wives moved to Kanab, Utah where the town was just being laid out. He bought two city lots and built two houses-one for each wife. Before the house could be built, Lucinda's first child was born, 6 April 1871 in a wagon box set upon a frame. They called her May. She was one of the first white babies born in Kanab.

He again began to grow trees and shrubs and for a few years the nursery was profitable, but the floods came and washed out channels and made it very difficult to get water on to the land. The family now six children suffered hardships and struggled for maintenance. In the late summer of 1880 the second wife, Aunt Saby died and was buried in Kanab. After her death Lucinda moved into her house because it had more rooms. In this place she bore four more children. The struggle went on. The children learned early to labor and take their share of responsibility and work. There were ditches to be cleaned and weeds to keep down among the growing trees and in the fall the young seedlings must be budded.

In the summer of 1889 Lacy Stilson, a half brother, visited Kanab and persuaded Charles to move to Orangeville, Emery County, Utah. In the fall of the same year with the aid of eleven mule teams and wagons he moved his family, household goods, and nursery stock to their new home where he spent the remainder of an active life. With the wonderful perseverance and ambition which were his striking characteristics; he continued to work and take an active interest in everything until the last. He has often been heard to say, "I would rather wear out than rust out, and prefer to be dead than unable to work."

Charles Oliphant was a firm believer in education and improvement, honesty and virtue, and upheld his convictions by every word and deed of his life. Progression was his watchword. He was a man of intelligence and refinement, and a sincere believer in the principles of the Church of Jesus Christ. When he joined this church in 1855 it was after thorough investigation and conviction of the truth. He placed his trust in a Supreme Being, and through dark and stormy days his faith never faltered. There was confined in him the gentleness and sweetness of a woman with the strength of a noble man.

His presence was a flood of sunshine and during his sickness he was always cheerful. Though his health had been failing through the summer he was confined to bed only five days, and surrounded by his faithful wife and children. His noble spirit took its peaceful flight 16 October 1902. His large and beautiful funeral attested the esteem of his towns people.

LUCINDA ABIGAIL JUDD

LUCINDA ABIGAIL JUDD, daughter of Zaddock Knapp and Mary Minerva (Dart) Judd, was born 18 October 1853, in Parowan, Iron County, Utah. When she was about three years old her parents moved to Santa Clara, Washington County, Utah. They had lived here only a short time when the Indians began giving them trouble and they moved to Harmony for a few months then returned. The men had built a fort with walls twelve feet high, but even so the Indians tried by cunning to get in when they knew the men were away working ten miles up the creek building a dam to get water for their crops of cane, cotton and wheat.

In the early part of 1862 they had rain almost continuously for three weeks which caused floods that washed out the town of Santa Clara. In the spring of 1865 her parents sold their home and moved to Eagle Valley, Nevada. There they again lived in a fort. It was here she met Charles Henry Oliphant and was married 11 April 1870 in the Salt Lake Endowment House.

In 1871 the Oliphant families moved to Kanab, Utah. Lucinda's first child was born there the 6th of April 1871 in a wagon box. The husband bought two city lots and built two houses-one on the west lot with four rooms for Aunt Saby and the one on the East lot for Lucinda, a small brick with two rooms. Here five of her children were born. She endured the struggles and hardships and was truly a Helpmate and companion to her husband and children. When Aunt Saby died in July 1880 Lucinda moved to the larger house where she became the mother of four more children. For nineteen years she lived in Kanab and labored and struggled to care for and rear an upright honorable family.

In 1889 the family moved to Orangeville, Emery County, Utah where they started anew. June 1890 their oldest son died with an intestinal trouble and beginning on August one child after another and two or three at a time came down with typhoid till all had been ill save the mother who was preserved to care for the afflicted ones. All were in a weakened condition and it took the whole winter to restore them to health and strength once more. Three more children were born to this wonderful mother, making thirteen in all. The last, a little daughter, Ila, lived nearly a year then passed on to the realms of over there.

The last twenty five years of her life, Lucinda was crippled with swollen joints and lived mostly in a wheel chair, but she had learned to be patient and in this handicapped condition could joke and even be gay. On the 9th of March 1929 ended the life of this noble woman and pioneer mother-a daughter of one of our Mormon Battalion Stalwarts.

WILLIAM LACY STILSON, born 20 September 1833, Wellsville, Columbiana Co., Ohio, is of Mormon parentage and was in the persecutions and drivings of the saints from Ohio to Missouri, and thence to Illinois. He lived in Nauvoo and remembers well the Prophet Joseph Smith, and on one occasion rode with him in his buggy in company with Brigham Young, his uncle. He wanted to go with the Mormon Battalion as drummer boy, or otherwise, but was not permitted to do so. In 1848, he drove two yoke of oxen with wagon across the plains to Salt Lake Valley for his uncle Brigham Young. He witnessed the early settlement of Salt Lake City and himself took up city lots therein. In 1852, he went to California and engaged in digging gold about twelve miles north of Hangtown. While there he had the small box which nearly cost him his life. From there, he went to Petaluma, Sonoma County. There he drove a four-horse stage coach for about eighteen months. He returned to Salt Lake City by way of San Bernardino and the south route in 1857, just in good time to join in the Echo Campaign to scare off the United States Army and hold it in check. He was with "Eph" Hanks, Lott Smith and other famous scouts. He was often sent to carry express messages forward and back to Salt Lake City from Echo Canyon.

In Salt Lake City, 8 May 1859, he married Cyrena Martha Lytle and the next day started for Omaha with his half brother Feramorz Little. At Laramie he swam across the Platt River with an important message and, of course, had to swim back to camp. Many a good swimmer has lost his life attempting to swim the same stream. He and his wife lived at Willow Creek (now Draper) Salt Lake County, for about two and one half years. Then he moved to Manti where he lived about four years, during which time the Black Hawk war was on. He enlisted in the cavalry and was 2nd lieutenant in the Manti company of Minute Men under Captain George Sidwell. From there he moved to Eagle Valley, Nevada. When the colony was broken up they moved to Kanab, Kane Co., Utah. This was their home for the next eight years until he moved to Orangeville, Emery County, Utah where for a time he was interested in a sawmill. Here he secured a good piece of ground and planted an orchard and built a small house where he and his wife lived comfortably in their old age.

CYRENA MARTHA LYTLE STILSON has proved herself to be "an helpmeet" in all her husband's movings and changes. She has gone with him, ever patient and thoughtful; a loving and prudent mother to their children; always ready to do her part in providing for the wants of the family; always willing to feed the hungry stranger who may have sought shelter and food under her roof. Surely she has filled the measure of her creation and her reward like that of Sarah, the wife of Abraham, will be in her posterity who bid fair to becoming numerous.

CORNELIA ANN STILSON, born 22 May 1836, Little Beaver, Beaver Co., Pennsylvania, is the only daughter of Susannah Young to grow to maturity. As a child she lived with her mother in Nauvoo, Illinois, then in St. Louis, Missouri. In 1849 when 13 years old, with her mother and brother, James A. Little, she crossed the plains in a wagon drawn by oxen, arriving in Salt Lake City in October of the same year. At the early age of 16 years she was an orphan without the love and guidance of a mother.

On the 17th of March 1854 in Salt Lake City she married James McKnight, son of John and Rebecca (Henderson) McKnight. He was born 11 December 1828, Rathmullen, Donegal, Ireland. He died 6 April 1906, at Port Townsend, Jefferson Co., Washington. She died 28 June 1865, Kingston, San Bernardino Co., California. Records in the Genealogical Archive show that James McKnight married three other wives: 5 March 1857, Alvina Mackley; 20 December 1862, Harriet Painter; 18 July 1863, Mary Ann Fielding.

"Cornelia grew to womanhood, was a spirited lady fair to look upon and capable, but unhappily married. In order to free herself from a smooth-tongued, tyrannical husband she went away to California where she died." (From Stilson record).

DANIEL T. MCMILLAN, eldest son of William and Nancy (Little) McMillan, born about 1817 in the state of New York. The place is not definitely known, probably Junius, Seneca County, for Sara Little has said that Nancy lived near her grandfather. The old home in Tyre (formerly Junius) was owned by three or four generations of Littles, Sara being the last. Lucas County, Ohio marriage records show he married 5 February 1848, Lucinda Teadman. In a letter written by Nancy, his mother, 5 October 1851, she says, "Daniel is in California. He went one year ago last April (April 1850) and writes that he will be home next March. He dislikes the country and the way they have to live, but wrote he would bring home a thousand dollars. He has a wife. She was willing to let him go and when he comes back they want to be independently rich. He has forty acres of good land one mile east of us. It is a log house and 30 acres cleared with some fruit trees on it. He left her four head of cattle and forty dollars, also household furnishings worth over two hundred dollars. He was superintendent in our country house for two years." What became of his wife or when Daniel returned has not been learned. Lettie Thorp has written that when she was a little girl she went with her Aunt Jane Eliza to visit Uncle Daniel in Topeka, Kansas. She says he married Kate, a widow with three children.

LETITIA (LETTICE) MCMILLAN, born 21 October 1819 in the state of New York, is the second child and first daughter of Nancy and William McMillan. Nancy says, "Lettice, for years, was a comfort to her parents and to her brothers and sisters and it seems she is now reaping her reward." She married 12 August 1842, Hiram Hubbard, who holds the distinction of AMANDA MCMILLAN, born about 1828 in the state of New York; moved with her parents to Ohio when she was about five years old. They settled on a homestead in Springfield Township, Lucas Co. Here she grew up knowing the hardships of pioneer life and developed into a whole-some, dependable young woman who taught school and took in sewing, or went out to sew by the day. It is said of her that she had many warm friends. She was a member of the Methodist Church. On 3 February 1853, she married Warren W. Copper at Toledo, Ohio, Reverend D. W. Ocker being the minister who officiated. She died 25 March 1855, leaving one daughter.

- 172-C 1. Sara Cooper, born about 1854, Lucas Co., Ohio. She married a man by the name of Davis.

WILLIAM JAMES MCMILLAN, born 1 January 1830 has the distinction of being the 6th and middle child in the family of Nancy & Wm. Mc Millan. He was born in the state of New York and came to Ohio with his parents when three years of age. In a letter of 1851 his mother says of him: "William James has been a faithful son. He worked at home last year. He is now in a mill in Toledo and has $14.00 per month. He was here to work in the harvest. We do his sewing and knitting. He let us have $20.00 this summer. He is called smart. There is work in him and it is not hard to get it out. Last year they cleared ten acres and put it into wheat. We had one hundred and ninety bushels of wheat from it." In 1864 he is listed as nursery man and in '66 as foreman of Toledo Nursery. In 1869 he became superintendent of the Forest Cemetery in Toledo city. On the 6th of May 1868 he married Nancy Malisa Lewis, daughter of John and Caroline (Hubbard) Lewis. By 1873 he had built a two story brick house on the "west 40" of the old homestead and moved out there. In 1880 he is listed as landscape gardner in Toledo. About 1889 he moved to Indianapolis, Indiana. They had three children.

MALCOLM MC MILLAN born 2 May 1832 in Steuben County, New York was about one year old when his parents settled in Springfield Township, Ohio. It was a new country and the land had to be cleared of timber before farming could begin. Here the little Malcolm played and worked and grew up a strong, husky, and dependable workman with a love for the soil that made farming his choice of occupation through life. He was only 17 years when his father died and much of the family farm fell on his shoulders. He had earlier lived with his sister and worked for her husband, Hiram Hubbard who said of him, he is the best work hand I ever had. He is good with a team and careful. In 1851 he was at home and worked the farm himself.

On 26 September 1860 he married Harriet Louisa Jane Vanderhoef at Toledo, Ohio. His daughter Louise has described him thus, "My father was one of those easy going, pleasant men, always good natured and prided himself that his word was as good as his note." "Mother was a very proud, ambitious woman, always ready for a new adventure. She was much interested in everything around her. She was a good housekeeper, an excellent cook, and a fine seamstress."

They had six children all born in Adams Township. In March 1886 the family moved to Kansas, and later to Guthrie, Oklahoma where he died. 15 January 1910.

The wife had gone to Las Cruces, New Mexico in December 1909 to visit the daughter Louise. After his death for the next 14 years she made her home with the daughter.

It is the duty of the wife to be the friend, companion and source of comfort to her husband, to be the manager of his household, and to be the mother of his children. It is the duty of the husband to be the provider for his family, to be the protector of his wife and children, and to be the head of the household.

STATUTE LAW

By good visiting and other means, it is the hope of the Trustees of the Central Institute of New York

It is the duty of both to cherish and ever to manifest mutual affection, to preserve an inviolable fidelity, to delight each in the society of the other, to cultivate a just sense of their respective duties, to train wisely all who may in their household be brought under their influence, to remember that an interest and reputation as in affection they are to be henceforth one indivisible, and to see to it, that what God hath joined together, man put not asunder.

REPORT

THIRD GENERATION

(44-C)

MARTHA MARIA LITTLE, born 8 April 1837, at Cape Vincent, New York was the older of two daughters of John Wildridge Little and Elizabeth F. Dickey. A granddaughter, Harriette A. Montague, has given some memories of her.

She was a short woman about five feet two inches, always neatly dressed around the house, and expensively and appropriately dressed for church and society. She belonged to the Methodist Church of Depauville, and to the order of the Eastern Star. She held the chair of Martha in that order.

She liked to travel, she and Harriette's mother went to the Chicago World's Fair in 1893, and she made several trips to Keene, New Hampshire to visit her brother George.

She liked to entertain and was always ready for unexpected company. Her husband, Richard Terry, was devoted to her for over fifty years and said he gave her everything she wanted and wished he could do more. She was thrifty, an old fashioned virtue. Grandfather used to say she could save dollars where he could save only pennies.

She and her sister Helen Little Terry married brothers and spent many summers with their parents at the cottage and tent at Thousand Island Park in the St. Lawrence River, they were charter members of the summer colony. They all liked to attend the lectures and concerts at the tabernacle hearing some of the best entertainment that was given at that time. It was about 1880-90 that the Chautauguas began and later swept all over the eastern United States.

In the Civil War Martha Maria Little Terry was treasurer of the Circle which sent aid to the soldiers of Depauville.

Her family and friends admired and loved her. Her granddaughter, Harriette Terry Montague remembers her with affection.

MARTHA MARIA LITTLE, daughter of John Wildridge Little and Elizabeth Filomile Dickey, was born 8 April 1837, at Cape Vincent, Jefferson County, New York; married 21 September 1854 to Richard Terry, son of Gershom Case and Christina (Goldsmith) Terry. He was born 21 November 1830 at New Port, Herkimer County, New York, died 1907 at Depauville, Jefferson County, New York. She died 4 April, 1905, same place.

- 194-D 2. Harriette Antonette Terry born 19 February 1857 at Depauville, New York, died 29 April 1901 at Belleville, Jefferson County, New York.

HELEN ELIZABETH LITTLE, born 24 June 1838 in Cape Vincent, Jefferson County, New York, is second daughter of John Wildridge and Elizabeth Filomile (Dickey) Little. She was married 19 August 1855, and her marriage certificate, which has been preserved, deserves description as a comparison of then and now.

The sea of life at the bottom of the certificate is represented by ocean waves over which spans an arch of stone masonry. This arch at the left rests on the Bible, and on the right rests on a book of Statute Law. The keystone at the top of the arch has in large letters the word MARRIAGE. On the seven stones on left side of the arch it says, "IT is the duty of the husband to be the friend, counselor, and guardian of his wife, shielding her from danger, providing for her, and cherishing for her an unalterable affection." On the stones of the right side of the arch it says, "It is the duty of the wife to be the friend, companion, and solace of her husband, reverencing and obeying him, and putting on the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit which is in the sight of God of great price."

Below the sea it reads, "It is the duty of both to cherish and ever to manifest mutual affection; to preserve an inviolable fidelity, to delight each in the society of the other; to cultivate a just sense of their respected duties; to train wisely all who may in their household be brought under their influence, to remember that in interest and reputation as in affection they are to be henceforth one individual and to see to it that what God has joined together man put not asunder." From the Bible and from the Statute Law spring branches of a tree which extend upward along the edges and frame the wording of the certificate. Near the top on the left branch is a pair of birds billing and cooing, on the right is a nest with the birds caring for their young. The largest leaves of these branches also carry messages.

Daniel Terry and Helen Little were happily married and devoted to each other. A letter dated 6 January 1858 - about two and one half years after marriage and written by the husband is full of sentiment as well as news. In telling of a new Year's ball he attended he says, the only drawback to his enjoyment was her absence. He did not feel himself at liberty to mingle with the gay throng and enjoy himself; so stood to one side an onlooker. He mentions that the young roudies were away at other parties, the crowd was quiet and orderly, willing to let others have a good time. Then he makes this significant statement. "The reason is that there was intelligence and refinement among the female portion of the company which is all that is ever necessary to make the rudest male a gentleman."

He mentions in the same letter that his company had reorganized their Lyceum, and that a Mr. Hart and himself were appointed disputants on the question, Resolved, that the Mormon Religion ought to be tolerated in the United States. Mr. Hart had the Negative. It might be interesting today to know the result of that debate, but we have no information. His letter continues, "And now my own love when may I look for you? Will you be prepared to come as soon as you are well enough? If the cars are blocked by snow Mr. Carter has started a stage, perhaps I will go out with him when you are ready and bring you back."

Their residence was in Depauville, New York, and later Watertown. They had one daughter who grew to womanhood, but never married. In the years after her parents death she spent much time in genealogical research and gathering family history.

HELEN ELIZABETH LITTLE daughter of John Wildridge and Elizabeth (Dickey) Little was born 24 June 1838 at Cape Vincent, Jefferson County, New York. She married 19 August 1855 at Adams Center, New York, Daniel Goldsmith Terry a brother to her sisters' husband and son of Gershon Case and Christina (Goldsmith) Terry. He was born 29 January 1829 at Southold or Cutchogue, Long Island, New York; died 16 February 1894 at Watertown, Jefferson County, New York. She died 2 February 1905, same place. They had one daughter.

195-D 1. NELLIE CHRISTINA TERRY

Written by Harriette T. Montague

Alone she sat alone - that worn out word, so Idly spoken and so coldly heard,
Yet all that poets sing or grief hath known
Of life laid waste, knells in that word - "Alone."
E. D. E. N. Southworth

Nellie Christina Terry was born October 27, 1856 at Depauville, Jefferson County, New York. About 1858 her parents moved to Watertown, New York and she lived there nearly all her life, except for three or four years when the family lived in Smithville where her father, Daniel Terry, was a partner in a General merchandise store owned by George Babbit. At Smithville she started in school taking sewing and A B C with Miss Rundle.

The pretty curly haired Nellie devoted her life to her parents and family. She was completely unselfish, asking only to help others to have a good time, and to have a little leisure to work at her genealogical studies.

After the death of her mother in 1905 (her father had died earlier) she worked and cared for herself for fifteen years. She tried taking care of sick people, and worked as attendant at three different Insane Hospitals. The following recommendation has been preserved:

Watertown, N. Y.,
Apr. 25, 1900

Herman E. Everts, Esq.

Kings Park, L.I.

My Dear Sir:-

Miss Nellie C. Terry of Watertown, N. Y., is a young lady I have known since childhood. You can rely on her for faithful service in any capacity you may place her. She is intelligent, industrious and lady-like and can be trusted. I hope she may succeed, as I believe she will, if she enters into the service of your hospital.

Yours very truly,
W. F. Porter
Mayor

Nellie never married, but cared tenderly for her parents in their older years. When left alone she traveled some from one library to another doing considerable genealogical research. She spent a good deal of time in Baltimore, Boston, New York, and Philadelphia where she searched the genealogical records and made many notes.

In 1919 or 20 when she had become partially deaf and blind she came to live with Harriette T. Montague a daughter of her double cousin Wildridge Goldsmith Terry. During her six years in this home she helped with the house work and mending, and was a cheerful companion. In these days she had time to arrange and rewrite her genealogical notes and letters into notebooks. These are carefully preserved and of great interest to the families of Little, Terry, Brown, Montague, Seaton, Pennell and others.

In 1926 her cousins Nat T. Frame, Dr. W.G. Terry, Roxey Frame Chamberlain, R.S. Terry, Sade Little, and George Fred Little and Harriette T. Montague contributed to a fund and placed her in the Henry Keep Home for the aged where she was happy and tenderly cared for. She died there and was buried 8th January 1930 and the Terry lot in the Brookside Cemetery, Watertown, New York.

We the family, owe much to her for the information contained in this book. She made a brave beginning and left much for us to build upon.

WILLIAM H. LOVETT son of Charles and Fanny Ann (Little) Lovett was born about 1839 in Canada, probably Erin in Province of Ontario, married Laura Richardson 10 June 1869 at Arcanum, Dark County, Ohio; ceremony performed by A. P. Garsuch, Justice of the Peace.

A letter dated 1901 written by Albert E. Little says "this year I met my cousin William H. Lovett who is like a brother to me for he was raised in my father's house. He lives in the state of Indiana and has a large family." Up to date we have found none of them.

MARGARET MOFFATT GIBSON, daughter of James Gibson and Letitia (Little) Gibson was born 15 December 1833, Oakville, Ontario, Canada. She was convent trained and had all the graces, and learned all the little refinements belonging to French ladies of that day as taught by the Nuns of the Sacred Heart institutions. She had a great wealth of long brown hair which she always wore smooth. Her youngest sister Fanny says, "It was my delight to take down her hair and brush it while she held a book in her hand and I recited my lessons for the next day, or reviewed for an exam. I owe much to my sister Maggie in my character forming years." Always on Sunday afternoon while she was home we gathered in a family group and read the poets and some books. Margaret was an expert seamstress. Fanny says, "I cheerfully ripped apart old dresses of the older girls, for she made from them such dainty frocks for me."

In August 1854 at Hamilton, Wentworth County, Ontario, Canada she married William Henry Sutton, son of Robert I. and Jane A. (James) Sutton. He was born 8 January 1827 at Fredrectan, New Brunswick. Much of his life was spent in contracting. He was a doting husband. His wife has written in a letter: "Mr. Sutton was one of the most indulgent and kind husbands that ever blessed the lot of any woman. We were too happy for this world. He was a handsome man, dark complexioned, and very well educated. He was a member of the Masonic Order and was buried by them."

His death came early from an over exertion in jumping from a buggy too hurriedly which caused the bursting of the outer coating of an artery. After an illness of eight months he died 28 April 1865, at Brantford, Canada. Margaret remained his widow for 7 years, then married Levi Howell son of Daniel Howell and Elizabeth (Shakelton) Howell. He was born 12 April 1815 at Jerseyville, Ontario, Canada and died 24 May 1904 same place. Later when 84 years Margaret went to Vancouver, British Columbia to be with her sister Fanny Patrick, and there died 15 March 1924 buried in the Ocean View Cemetery 17 March. She had no children.

like the name of Henrietta so adopted her mother's name and signed herself Jane Letitia. Jennie, as she was called was considered dashing and a beauty, she liked to change the style of her hair from time to time and was fond of pretty clothes. She did not like books but loved to sew, and one time while a young girl took one of her mother's dresses which she admired and cut it down for herself. She did use her hands to very good advantage. She drew a good salary as milliner and for some years was in charge of the ladies department of Mr. Wilson's store at Simcoe. Jennie had a will of her own. A phrenologist once told her that she could undertake and lead to success any business she chose. On the 2nd of October 1877 she married in Brant County, Augustus Wilson, son of William Wilson and Maria Lodes. He was born 4 May 1830 at Simcoe, Norfolk County, Ontario, Canada. He was a continuous resident of that city for 81 years where he was active in business and civic affairs. He was an adherent of the English Church, and in politics was a member of the Conservative party. He died 5 July 1910 and is buried in St. Johns Woodhouse Cemetery. She died 17 August 1916 buried in same place. No children.

WILLIAM MOSES GIBSON born 6 September 1835 or 38 probably at Oakville, Ontario, Canada was the oldest living son of James and Letitia (Little) Gibson. As a boy he disliked school, and it was difficult to get him to finish his apprenticeship at the foundry, however when a volunteer fire brigade was started he joined and was much interested. It was said of him: If you don't know where to look for him you'll find him dusting the fire engine. That he had the power and determination to stick is evidenced by his having worked with success for one firm for sixty two years. He served in different capacities, the later years as traveling salesman for that part of the business devoted to fire apparatus. His plan was to have a story telling evening with the firemen in their halls before he called on the City Council. He was then prepared to tell them what their city urgently needed, and he generally left satisfied.

In January 1915 a newspaper from St. Paul, Minnesota carried this item:

OLDEST EMPLOYEE IS GUEST AT BANQUET

William M. Gibson Has Been 62 Years With One Firm Honored by Friends.

William M. Gibson, 471 Ada Street has a record which perhaps is held by no other resident of Minnesota.

He has been in the employ of one business firm continuously for 62 years. He began with the Waterous Engine Works in 1853 and has been with them up to the present time, serving principally in the capacity of traveling salesman. He is known throughout the Northwest as 'Dad Gibson, veteran salesman.' In appreciation of his record, Mr. Gibson was tendered a banquet Saturday night at the Commercial Club by over 100 representatives of General Contractors from various parts of Minnesota and adjacent states.

Mr. Gibson was presented with a cane and an umbrella, and enough roses 'to start a greenhouse', as he himself put it.

At his death there was a question as to his age and birthdate; so in order to collect insurance the 6 September 1835 was made the legal birth date.

ELIZABETH LETITIA GIBSON born 30 June 1849 at Oakville, Ontario Canada was next to the youngest child of James and Letitia (Little) Gibson.

She was delicate all through her girlhood. She started going to a public school, but was not happy, so her heart grew lighter when she was placed in a private school. Though she did not distinguish herself in the ordinary studies she liked music, and having a sweet soprano voice gave much pleasure to her friends for many years. She loved a crochet needle, a tatting shuttle, and new embroidery patterns to copy.

On 27 November 1871 she married Walter Scott Echlin, son of James and Jane (Robertson) Echlin. He was born 1852 in Dundas, Ontario, Canada. He was a faithful church worker, was well respected and had some ill health. They were always lovers. In the 30th year of their marriage he suffered such severe burns in an explosion in the Waterous office at St. Paul, Minnesota that he succumbed after 13 days of suffering. He died in 1901.

Elizabeth then lived with her sister Margaret until Mr. Howell's death when she went to Vancouver B.C. to her sister Fanny, and Margaret went to live with their sister Mrs. Wilson at Simcoe. At the death of Mr. Wilson in 1910 and Jennie's failing health Elizabeth returned to Simcoe. After Jennie's death in 1916 Elizabeth persuaded Margaret, though 84 years old to sell the home and go to Vancouver where the climate was milder. There they had an apartment next to Fanny and the three sisters shared a sweet companionship in their declining years. Elizabeth died 11 October 1939 age 90, Margaret had preceeded her by 15 years. They are buried in the Ocean View cemetery. She had no children.

FANNY WOLCOTT GIBSON, born 28 June 1856 at Hamilton, Ontario, Canada is the youngest child of James and Letitia (Little) Gibson, and came along later in life when the other children were grown up. She was the intellectual one of the family. While yet a young child she loved to play school with her dolls - they were her pupils. She attended the public schools, and being somewhat precocious advanced rapidly and entered the Principal's room before many of her classmates. When four of the students were prepared to take the County Board examination for teachers' certificates the principal hinted that she had better wear a longer dress (she was under the required 16 years of age). She donned her sister's skirt and passed the tests, but continued to go to school. She loved the children and played with the little ones at recess and when a monitor was needed to substitute for an absent teacher she was called to fill the place to the delight of the little ones who had grown to love "the big girl." In the middle of the term in another school a teacher was released and the trustees applied to Fanny's principal for help. He asked would she like to take the position and so began her career. She held this school for three years till her certificate expired then she went to college.

When her father lost his sight it was a sore trial to her mother. Fanny says; "One evening as I sat studying mother was sitting before the grate lost in thought. She spoke to herself in her grief, 'I've raised a family and now I'm left alone.' (father had retired earlier) I went over to her and told her she had me beside her. She said, 'You will go away like the others.' I told her I would never leave her and father so long as they needed me. 'But you'll forget' she insisted. At that moment my mind was made up and I did keep my promise."

When Fanny wished to go to Ottawa to study she arranged for her parents to stay with Elizabeth, which pleased them. When she was offered a good job in Jerseyville the mother lived with her there at Mrs. Howells, the older sister.

It was at the age of thirteen while attending a confirmation class at their church that she first met Samuel Patrick her future husband. He also was a member of the class and they were confirmed at the same time. He had been apprenticed by his father to Mr. Heath who carried on a flourishing business in making heavy wagons for farm purposes, but Samuel wanted to improve so came to Brantford to work with the Hext Brothers who made fine carriages and buggies. He boarded at Thomas Hext near the Gibson home which he passed on Sundays when he went to church. Often they met and he chatted with her father as they walked along. Her father liked him because he was quiet mannered, always well groomed, and regular in his habits. He and Walter Echlin (Elizabeth's husband) became good friends and they occasionally came in for supper. When his time was up he arranged to go to Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Before leaving he asked permission to talk to Fanny alone and asked her to become engaged to him. Her reply was that she was sorry he had thought so far ahead, for she felt altogether too young to bind herself to anyone, but she would be glad to have him call when he visited his family in Woodstock. He did call on her, and the travel, the change and success in business had built up a fine young man. As he walked to school with her before leaving again for Milwaukee he made a deep impression on her.

Samuel's older brothers had taken up land in Nebraska and were prosperous farmers so Samuel applied for and obtained a position in Omaha. Later he went to Idaho to work for the Union Pacific railroad system. The country was new and rough and comforts nil, but the salaries extraordinary. Through five years of pioneering he sent his checks each month to the bank at Omaha. Then returned to work for his company again. He bought property and built a nice cottage with grounds but still Fanny was not ready to marry. She was keeping her home promise and he would not accept freedom from their engagement. They corresponded but letters were far between in those early days. He came to see her altogether three times.

At her mother's death she expresses this beautiful thought in a letter to her uncle John Wildridge Little. "With father, mother, home gone, I feel alone indeed, but pray the Father that He will make my heart submissive to His will and enable me to take up the duties of life with a renewed energy, and with a heart purer and brighter for the remembrance of having known a father and mother's love and influence."

She and Samuel Patrick were engaged about seven years. Finally married 29 December 1886. On their wedding journey to Omaha the porter brought in some books - among them a cook book which reminded her of a child's ambition. She had said if I can't teach I'll be a cook. She bought the book and was now to fulfill that desire.

While still a young teacher she became interested in missionary work and was about to go to India with a couple who were returning to their field after a home visit. She took her problem to her father who gently persuasively explained that she was really an Anglican not a Presbyterian, that she was doing a good work in helping the young people with their education, and above all that the thought had not come from her own heart. If ever the Lord had a very special work for her she would really feel and know that she had a call to serve. Such a call came after she and her husband and daughter had moved to Vancouver, British Columbia in 1902. The minister of the Holy Trinity Church called on the family and learning that she was interested in and had done Sunday School work he promptly asked her to help him. She took the children up to ten years, the Sunday School grew by leaps and bounds. She also organized a class for Orientals. When the Anglican Women's Mission Society of the Diocese decided they must do something for the Japanese women and children their first concern was to get someone with educational experience and Anglican missionary sympathies. Her Sunday School work had given her a good record, so when the Rector said, "Mrs. Patrick, it surely is a call from God and you should try to obey it." The memory of her father's words brought a thrill to her and she felt that she really was called to serve. For eleven years from 1909 to 1920 she worked every day. The Missionary Society work grew, they now have a house and church with a Japanese clergyman. Most of the congregation grew up from children. In a meeting of the Missionary Board a resolution was passed embodying the appreciation of the church for her work, and their satisfaction that so sound a foundation had been laid. When Fanny went into this work her sister Elizabeth relieved her by looking after the house work at home.

While residing at Omaha they made trips westward, on one occasion while visiting Salt Lake City she met Feramorz Little and the strong resemblance to her uncle John Wildridge Little was so striking that it gave her a start.

Mr. Patrick died the 22 October 1932 and buried from The Holy Trinity Church 25 October age 84 years. For the remaining eleven years Fanny lived in the home of her daughter Grace and son-in-law Edgar Shane. "How kind and thoughtful they are" she had said, "no words of mine can express." She died 9 September 1948 at Vancouver age 87 years, is buried in the Ocean View cemetery.

ALBERT E LITTLE born 12 September 1853 at Erin, Ontario, Canada, is the son of Robert Dee and Ann (McCutcheon) Little. Here is a son's ideas or memories of his father after being away from home about thirty-five years. "Father started off in life with an uncompleted grammar school education; but he finished up with an education well above the average. He was just naturally smart and understood human nature very thoroughly. His philosophy on life was sound, although he didn't always stick to it. The best was never too good, although at times too expensive for him. He exhibited boundless energy in business as a grain merchant; but his ventures elsewhere at times were not too profitable.

Though father was a rather stern man with his family, he had the faculty of keeping the family pretty close to him, and his greatest joy was to assemble them all at a family reunion and have a picture taken. He regretted his lack of education and saw to it that all of his family got the best education each individual would take. While never overly religious, Father was an ardent worker and believed strongly in the good the Church could do. Most of his work consisted of finance, and he was a mighty good collector. He always lived in a small town and did not have an opportunity to engage in activities outside his own business. Had the opportunity been present he would have succeeded, as he was given to reading good books and did considerable reciting and some dramatic work. I was associated with him in business for a few years, and the association taught me much of sound psychology. They have 7 children all but one grew to maturity."

ELIZABETH LITTLE, called Dollie, daughter of Robert Dee and Ann (McCutcheon) Little was born 7 May 1862 in Garafraxa, Wellington County, Ontario, Canada. She was the seventh of the family of eight children. A brother, who was a twin and born two years earlier, had passed on after a brief span of eight days, and a brother who arrived four years later died at the age of about one year; so Elizabeth grew up as the youngest member of the family, two brothers and three sisters older. She recalls that just before her father's passing the family had gathered around him, and he requested them to sing, "Shall We Gather at the River." He loved music and had been choir master at the Methodist Church at Garafraxa, and was called upon to lead the singing wherever there was a group to lead, and he used a tuning fork to get the pitch. After his death in 1870 the family moved to Erin, where she grew to womanhood.

An ambitious young man from Meaford, who had finished his apprenticeship as a tin-smith came to Erin looking for business opportunity. During his years of training, guided by his father, his earnings had been carefully saved, so he was now able to purchase a small hardware establishment. He and his father came to Erin one morning, made the deal, and that very afternoon young Sutton took over and served his first customers. In Erin he found not only a business opportunity, but also the lovely young woman who was to become his companion through life. Frederick George Sutton and Elizabeth Little were married on the 10th of November 1885 in a ceremony in her home. News of the wedding had spread through the town and neighbors gathered about the house to give the departing newly-weds the heartiest good wishes and rousing cheers.

Returning from their honeymoon to Meaford, which is situated on the Georgian bay, they made their home in a little white house in Erin. Their daughter Annie Mary was born here, and when she was two years old they built a brick house of their own on Main street just two doors from his fathers home.

In 1912 they sold their home and the hardware store and moved to Regina, Saskatchewan, Canada. On this occasion the people from the town and countryside presented the family with a hundred pieces of gold, and a kindly address by one of the prominent citizens. The daughter Annie Mary cherishes this written tribute of esteem among her souvenirs. The Suttons lived in Regina with their two children for about eight years then Dollie's sister Helen (aunt Ella she was called) wrote of favorable conditions in Detroit, and the need for skilled workmen; so again they moved. In Detroit he found employment with the John W. Ladd Company manufacturers of creamery supplies. He remained with this company until he retired, and was awarded a silver plate engraved with his name and complimentary tribute.

Beside caring for her family in Erin Elizabeth Little Sutton was a leader in social affairs. She was president of the Women's Institute who met to promote the welfare of the community in furthering educational projects and good will among the people. At Regina she was president of the local branch of women's Christian Temperance Union, and was proud of the white ribbons worn by the members. Her daughter Annie Mary treasures a cameo pendant which was a gift to her mother when she retired from the presidency. In Detroit Dollie was chairman of a group in the Narden Park Methodist Church. She directed the plans for teas, concerts and other fund raising projects. Dr. M. R. Reed paid her a beautiful eulogy for her efficient and loving service during his pastorate.

The home of Mrs. Sutton always welcomed ministers of the Gospel. In Erin they would come at the beginning of their pastorate and always felt the sincere welcome accorded them gave encouragement to their work and love for Christianity among the flock.

Elizabeth died 31 May 1941 in Detroit, Michigan, and was buried 2 June in Erin, Ontario, Canada. Four years later 12 May 1945 he died in Detroit, and is buried beside her.

FRANKLIN EUGENE CONKLIN, son of Morris Conklin and Eliza Ann Little was born 14 November 1853, Clyde, Wayne County, New York. Married

He died 7 March 1916 at Denver, Colorado.

GEORGE EDWIN LITTLE was born at Nauvoo, Illinois August 6, 1844. He was the son of Edwin Sobieski Little and Harriet Amelia Decker. His birth occurred at one of the most dramatic epochs in the history of the Latter-day Saints. Less than two months previously our beloved Prophet Joseph Smith and his brother, Hyrum had been martyred. George's mother often told of the sadness which prevailed throughout the city when the bodies of the leaders were brought home. Both of George's parents passed through many persecutions for the love of the gospel. While in Winchester, Illinois Marriet met Edwin Sobieski, and after a year of courtship they were married, he at the age of twenty-six years, and she sixteen.

The blood of the Prophet failed to ebb the tide and fury of the unrelenting mob. In the dead of winter the Saints were driven from Nauvoo. With his parents baby George was taken with the first company of emigrants, which was headed by Brigham Young. George's father Edwin S. Little aided in conveying the Saints across the ice covered Mississippi River. The last wagon was crossing when the ice gave way, throwing the wagon and all its occupants (including Edwin) into the river. All reached shore safely, but that night there rose a terrible storm. George's mother had four posts put up and a canvas stretched over them for a covering. This was not adequate. In order to protect her baby from the storm she kneeled over him all night. In spite of receiving the best care possible under the circumstances, the husband contracted pneumonia and died six weeks later, leaving Harriet a widow at the age of twenty, and his son George, who was then eighteen months old. He was buried at what is now Keosauqua, Iowa.

The mother drove the yoke of oxen the long wearisome trek across the plains, they were members of Captain Jedediah M. Grant's Hundred which arrived in the Great Salt Lake Valley October 2, 1847. George was now three years old. Their first home in the valley consisted of the wagon in which they had crossed the plains. Not only was food scarce and difficult to obtain, but so were cooking utensils and other commodities. Just ten days after their arrival in the valley Harriet met Ephraim K. Hanks and subsequently fell in love with him. The following September 1848, they were married. He was a man of strong character, and made a good husband for Harriet as well as a father for George. Although he provided a home for her, financial conditions were not much improved. George, even as a small boy was required to make his own living. He herded cattle on the side of the mountain near Emigration Canyon. Many times his only means of sustenance was the sego lily bulbs he could dig from the hillside.

Once he was without shoes and had no prospects of obtaining any. He told his mother that his feet were sore from going barefoot and that he just had to have shoes to wear to church. His mother said she was sorry, but that if he got shoes they would have to come from the Lord. He took her at her word and asked the Lord to send him some shoes. He never once doubted that he would get them. Sunday morning he told his mother that he was going out to get his shoes. To her surprise he returned with a new pair that just fit. Upon his mother's inquiry he informed her that the Lord had left them by the road for him. She being more practical refused to let him wear them until she took them to the bowery, where meeting was held, to ascertain if any one had lost them. For three consecutive Sundays President Brigham Young held them up in Church in an effort to establish an owner. At the end of that time when no one claimed the shoes he handed them to George and said, "Here, my boy, the Lord has sent them to you."

On one occasion the boy George was hauling wheat from the southern part of the state. He saw an antelope and reached for his gun, but the trigger caught on the wheel and an accidental shot shattered his right wrist. He was taken to a nearby Indian camp and laid on a blanket in a tepee. A squaw drew the shot and sucked the poison blood from the wound, then put a poultice of herbs on it. When a doctor wished to amputate the squaw shook her head and said, no. She nursed him until he was past danger. Many years later an old Indian squaw came to his house begging for food. When George came to the door, she looked up and exclaimed, "Queagan's Papoose." They embraced each other for joy at meeting again. Her eyes were dim and her hair was gray, but she recognized him as the boy she had nursed back to health. Ephraim K. Hanks, stepfather to George was called by the Indians "Queagan" meaning bear, because he had broken a vicious horse to ride and had clung on like a bear; so George was known as "Queagan's Papoose."

In 1859 the Pony Express came into existence. This was a system of overland mail transportation extending from St. Joseph, Missouri, to Sacramento, California. The distance was 1960 miles. Ponies were employed in relays of ten miles each. George, though only fifteen years of age, wanted to ride with them. He was a very courageous lad and his early years of hardship had prepared him for the difficulties he would encounter in such an adventure. His mother objected because of his youth, but his stepfather, whom he called "Pap Hanks" interceded in his behalf and he was permitted to ride. His first route lay between Salt Lake City and Rocky ridge.

His quick wit, courage and fast horses were responsible on many occasions for saving his life. Indians were a constant menace. The plains were uninhabited, except for Indians and wild animals. At night he could hear the howl of wolves, and sometimes they would follow him.

Upon one occasion while carrying the Wells-Fargo mail, which contained a payroll, he was ambushed by two men who stepped in front of him with guns in their hands as he came into a clearing. His horse was well trained and high spirited. As they grabbed for the reins he spurred the horse which leaped free of the men and sped forth at such a pace that pursuit was futile.

From the starting point to the journey's end, the Pony Express ride was continual, lasting twenty-four hours. Although the horses were changed during the course of the ride, the riders themselves had no rest except as they rode. George often told that they not only ate on their horses, but learned to sleep on them as well. If the horse slowed to a canter the rider would awake immediately, knowing that danger was near. It might be a bear, a wolf, or an Indian.

One winter there arose such a severe blizzard that those expecting important mail were fearful of the Pony Express being able to get through the mountains. In fact, as the storm grew in intensity they abandoned all hope. The blizzard was too much for George's horse; at the foot of Little Mountain he gave out, and George was forced to abandon him. With his jack knife he cut open the mail bag and removed the letters. He stuffed them inside his shirt, then proceeded to wade through the snow and blizzard to the next station at Mountain Dell, where he spent the remainder of the night with his step-father, who was station keeper. At daybreak he mounted a fresh horse without saddle and rode bareback the ten miles to the city. As he came riding in those who had despaired of getting their mail were so overjoyed at this heroic act that they hoisted him to their shoulders and carried him through the streets shouting his praises.

The Pony Express system lasted for eighteen months. In 1861 it was superseded by the telegraph and stage coach.

The days of Express riding over, George looked to other interests. He soon met and fell in love with pretty, curly haired Martha Taylor, daughter of George Edward Groves Taylor and Ann Wicks. After a year of courtship, though not yet eighteen years of age, he and Martha were married at the home of Emaline B. Wells, January 5, 1862.

As their family grew they moved about a good deal, never quite satisfied. In 1890 when the call came to settle the Teton Basin in Eastern Idaho the family gladly responded and seemed to thoroughly enjoy pioneering a new country.

They homesteaded one hundred sixty acres of land, where they engaged in the raising of horses and cattle. George erected a picturesque log house for his family, which stood for many years after he had passed on. He engaged in various enterprises to make a living for his large family. He erected and operated the first saw-mill in the basin. For some time he was employed by the government carrying mail in two districts. His wife was an helpmeet who never shirked her duties as mother besides doing what she could to make the living. For years she was Post Mistress for their community.

George Edwin was ever a kind and loving husband, father and friend. He was admired by all for his congeniality, good humor, and generosity. No one was ever turned away from his door hungry as long as there was a crust to share. Many travelers made his home headquarters while sojourning in the valley. They always found a hearty welcome.

When George Little and his loving wife Martha, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on January 5, 1911, the family presented each of them with a gold watch. He died of pneumonia 27 December 1915 at their home in Haden, Idaho. Almost nine years later, he was united once again with his faithful companion. This time never to part.

MARTHA (TAYLOR) LITTLE

Martha Taylor was born in Spilsbury, Lincolnshire, England, August 5, 1843, the daughter of George Edward Groves Taylor and Ann Wicks. Her parents accepted the Gospel in England, through the preaching of Latter-day Saint missionaries. They were baptized when Martha was six years old; she was baptized at the age of eight. Her father was called to preside over a branch of the Church. Although the family had eight miles to walk each Sunday, they always attended faithfully.

In 1851 Martha's father married in polygamy to Jane Baxter. Soon after this her parents separated, and in 1854 Martha, with her mother and sister, Maria, set sail for America. The father brought the other sister, Margaret, at a later date; the brother, Joseph Edward, had preceded the family to Salt Lake to make a home for them.

Martha and her sister and mother remained one year in St. Louis, Missouri, working at anything they could get to save enough money to take them to Utah. The mother did practical nursing; the two little girls did housework, spinning, knitting, acted as nursemaids, or any work they could do. Many times Martha told of working for a man and his wife who had her digging a garden. She was given a certain space to dig and care for, but was not equal to the task. Being under-nourished and not strong, she fainted before her task was done.

In 1855 they started across the plains with ox-teams. The mother, being delicate, was permitted to ride most of the way but the girls had to walk. Although the journey was long and tiresome they never lost faith or regretted leaving their home and friends in England. Supplies were meager and often they were hungry. Martha has told of lying on her stomach and crying, many times, because it pained so much for want of food.

She was living in Salt Lake at the time of the Cricket Plague, when those pests devoured the young crops of the hard-working pioneers. The Saints would surely have perished had not the seagulls been sent by divine providence to devour the crickets. The faith and prayers of the saints had been rewarded. Although many of their crops were destroyed, enough was left to subsist upon.

One day Martha was sent to the home of Heber C. Kimball to borrow flour. There was a pan of biscuits sitting on the table. She wanted one so badly that she left the house with tears in her eyes. All her life she feared famine because of passing through these times of severe want.

When Johnston's Army came into the valley, the family was again separated. Martha went to live with strangers in Provo who did not treat her very kindly.

From there she went to live with Emaline B. Wells, who treated her as a daughter. One day she was washing outside. As she rubbed the clothes on the board, her long golden curls would bob up and down, making quite a picture. On this particular day, Harriet Hanks and her son, George Edwin Little, were visiting with Emaline B. Wells. Harriet noticed Martha washing and asked who the pretty girl was. Her son, George, became interested and inquired further concerning her. They were made acquainted and their courtship began. George and Martha were married the 5th of January, 1862 at the home of Emaline B. Wells. Later they were sealed for time and eternity in the Salt Lake Endowment House.

Martha was a devoted wife to George and became the mother of his fourteen children - eleven girls and three boys. All lived to maturity to raise families of their own, except one daughter, Fannie, who died at the age of fourteen.

The family moved around a great deal until 1890 when they made their final move, this was to the Teton Valley in Eastern Idaho. At last they seemed to find the place they really belonged. They helped to pioneer the valley and loved it dearly. George E. Little owned and operated the first sawmill in the Teton Basin. They built a log home at Haden, Idaho, (later called Tetonia). They also kept a Traveler's Inn.

The nearest railroad was eighty miles and the nearest store was forty miles from their home. They were very resourceful, either making or growing most of their necessities. They even made their own soap and candles.

Martha Little lived a useful and busy life. Besides caring for her large family and keeping the Inn, she was also the Post Mistress. People came for their mail day or night or Sunday, whenever convenient to them, making it necessary for someone to be there at all times. In addition to her home and business responsibilities she was very active in the Church. For fifteen years she was a teacher in the Sunday School. After acting as President of the Ward Relief Society for twelve years she was called to act on the Tetonia Relief Society Stake Board, which office she held for an additional twelve years.

She was ever willing and anxious to lend a helping hand to others, going out amongst the sick and needy. Whenever death visited a home she was the first to be called, helping to prepare the body for burial as well as consoling the bereaved family.

She made many Temple clothes, specializing in the making of Temple aprons, of which she presented one to each of her thirteen children. Most of her children who have passed on, were buried wearing those very aprons. (At the compiling of this history, November 1948, only five of her fourteen children are still living).

While President of the Relief Society, Martha Little was instrumental in obtaining the only organ known to be donated to the Church by Andrew Carnegie. The Relief Society was trying to raise $50.00 to buy a small organ. They sewed carpet rags, made quilts, sold suppers at dances, charging 25¢ per place, and in numerous ways endeavored to raise the stipulated sum, which at that time seemed enormous. A friend of the family, a Mr. Morris, suggested that a petition be made to Mr. Carnegie to furnish them with an organ. In due time they received as a gift from Mr. Carnegie not a $50.00, but a $500.00 organ. A more particular account of this acquisition is related in an interesting article by Estella (Little) Pehrson.

On the fifth of January 1911, George and Martha Little celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, at which time each was presented by the family with a gold watch and chain. George E. Little died of pneumonia at the family home in Haden, Idaho, nearly five years later, December 27, 1915.

In September 1924 Martha Little left the Teton Basin for the last time in life. She went to Salt Lake City with her grandson, Clifton Bevan, to witness his marriage in the Salt Lake Temple. Soon thereafter she became very ill and was taken to the home of her daughter, Marcia Paul.

For seven long weeks prior to her death she suffered intensely, but met it bravely and cheerfully, with the same heroic spirit she had exhibited throughout her life. She knew the summons had come and she was prepared for it. Her husband was waiting to welcome her to the other side. Just prior to her passing she spoke his name and said that she was ready to go with him.

She died November 4, 1924, at the age of eighty-one years, having lived a colorful and useful life. She was taken to the Teton Valley where she was buried beside her beloved husband. In her declining years she had become almost blind, but never ceased to be active. She still did much needlework, feeling, rather than seeing the stitches.

We as her descendants, might well emulate her exemplary life.

JULIETTE CHAMBERLAIN LITTLE, daughter of Feramorz and Fannie Maria (Decker) Little, their third child of nine and the oldest daughter to live to maturity. She was born 23 January 1853 in Salt Lake City, Utah, where she grew to womanhood.

On 20 August 1873 she married Adelbert Roundy in Salt Lake City. He was a business man in the city, a member of the Crockery Firm of Little and Roundy Company which was located on Main Street near First South street.

About 1900 with his wife and youngest daughter, Dorothy, he went to Sidney, Australia as a representative of the United States Glass Company of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. He went for one year, but remained for seventeen years. During that time he made three trips to the United States, and his wife, Juliette, made as many as eleven visits to the homeland. Adelbert Roundy retired from active business about 1920, and returned to Salt Lake City. Because of failing health he spent some time in California, but finding no improvement came back to Salt Lake City where he died 20 May 1921.

Juliette was left well fixed financially and able to enjoy luxuries in her declining years. She "dressed like a princess," traveled some and visited her daughter in New York City where she enjoyed concerts, theaters, and other entertainments. With her daughters, Dorothy, and husband she spent a delightful two months in the Hawaiian Islands.

Juliette, (or Jet), as she was called in the family, had a pleasing personality, cheerful and happy. She had dark hair and eyes, was rather short and in later years plump. In being introduced to the compiler she laughingly remarked, "Yes, I am well named, Little and Roundy." She passed away 26 April 1929 in Salt Lake City nearly eight years after he husband's death. They are buried side by side in her father's plot in the City cemetery.

SUSAN CLAIRE LITTLE CLAWSON, was born in a small house, which still stands, and is now used for a toolhouse in the Country Club golf course. This was then the farm owned by her father in the mouth of Parley's Canyon.

As she grew up the family lived in Sugar House; then in a lovely home on 3rd East and South Temple, and lately the large estate built by Feramorz Little on 2nd East and First South. Her girlhood and young womanhood was very colorful and interesting. She was graduated from the University of Deseret, (now the U. of U.), also a talented pianist and French student; she also spoke some German and Latin. She was very popular and enjoyed a large circle of friends and kinfolks. The opportunity to go to Europe and the Holy Land with her father in the George A. Smith party in 1873, was greatly appreciated and enjoyed, and her letters from these countries were so interesting. In 1876 she was married to Hyrum Bradley Clawson Jr. They had six children, two of whom died in infancy. She worked in M. I. A. and Relief Society work and acted as Counselor to Annie Wells Cannon in Pioneer Stake Relief Society Board. Her husband died in 1914 and she 28 July 1918. They had been very devoted to each other and their family and their church work.

NETTIE VIOLA LITTLE, born 28 July 1864 in Salt Lake City, Utah is the youngest daughter of Feramorz and Fannie Maria (Decker) Little. She grew up in a home of plenty, and with the best of advantages to be had in those early days when the founding of the city and the state was only two decades back.

At the age of twenty-one years she married John Mortimer Reinsimar and became the mother of five sons and a daughter, two of which died in early childhood and another in young manhood. In March 1932 her husband passed away and she was alone in her big home. For nearly five years she lived a widow, but a woman so lovely and gentle as she could not be overlooked. A tall, handsome, elderly gentleman as lonely as she sought her hand in marriage.

So on the 22 January 1937 with the approval of her three sons, and his two daughters she was married to Sereno Bayard Tuttle. The marriage took place in California. Though she was seventy-two years and he seven years her senior they were happy, and young in spirit - ready for adventure.

In October of the same year they took their belated honeymoon vacation, an automobile trip of 3865 miles through the beautiful picture gardens of Nature. A description of the scenic wonders on their trip was written for their friends, and is here quoted.

"A wonderful panorama spread before us, as we drove, under cloudless skies with warm invigorating weather, through six states - first to the mines, deserts, and forests of Nevada, to Lake Tahoe, in its beautiful forest setting at sunset. Then on to massive, deep Yosemite Valley, where they have substituted a "Fire Fall" for its seasonally dried up water falls, by pushing a huge bonfire from Glacier Point, at nine o'clock P.M. for a 3200 foot drop to rocks below, the red sparks and coals showing for the whole distance - a wonderful, beautiful sight!

Then, drove on to Mariposa Grove of Mammoth Sequoia redwood trees, where we drove our auto through Wawona, a live tree 33 feet in diameter; on to and over the Oakland- San Francisco and Golden Gate bridges, the largest of all bridges, giving us grand views of the cities, the bay, and the ocean. Then we saw the beautiful Stanford Chapel with its many glorious stained glass windows, at Palo Alto; next was the calm, soothing drive, south along the shore of the Pacific so appealing to us "land lubbers", for a nine day stay with my daughter Marion Tuttle Lowe, in Westwood Village in Los Angeles, a new, restful section of L.A., near Soldiers Home grounds, and the location of University of Southern California.

There on 11 October I celebrated my 80th birthday. Then we drove on through Blythe and Prescott, Arizona to the south rim of Grand Canyon of the Colorado. As we looked across the canyon we could see Bright Angel Point, 15 miles distant, and looking down a mile below us we saw the foot bridge across the river. We drove for 32 miles along the south rim with its wonderful, most colorful and awesome views, from many points, and ahead we caught glimpses of the Painted Desert in the distance south and east.

We saw two white tailed squirrels in the Kaibab Forest, we hear the only place in the U.S. where they are to be seen. Then on we went via Flagstaff and Holbrook to the petrified Forest, once a majestic, living, growing part of Nature, now leveled, hardened, and broken, strewn for miles are rock stumps and pieces of logs, some several feet in length and diameter; then on to the Painted Desert, along which we drove for three miles, viewing the most extensive array of bright pastel shades of reds, pinks, blues, yellows, greens, whites, and browns that can be found the whole world over, we are sure. Bryce Canyon has the same shades and colors, but shown in pinnacles and cliffs, and so more lacy, delicate and beautiful.

Then we drove over to Gallup and Albuquerque, where we attended Church for the first time on the trip, we had 'restrained' ourselves, while, enjoying delightful rides through Nature's wonderland. Then we drove back to Gallup and north to Cortez, Colorado near Mesa Verde Park and near where Colorado, Utah, Arizona, and New Mexico meet with right angle corners, the only such point in the U.S. No good road over there or we would have driven over and tried to kiss in four states at once: - simple there, but seemingly an impossible osculatory feat.

Then on we went to Monticello and Blanding in Utah and to the Edwin Natural Bridge where we slept in our car, 50 miles from a living human being, they told us. There we enjoyed a splendid radio concert, free from static, and heard Hoover's speech to young Republicans, October 26th, as plain as if he were there with us. This came over our Zenith Auto Radio, a present from brother Walter and Bill. Our trip continued on through Moab to Green River for the night, and home next day, after a perfect trip in glorious weather, through grand scenery, and over paved roads, all but one 30 mile detour, which made us think of the man who wanted to know where that town 'detour' is located, he had never yet been able to find it.

We arrived home feeling well and rested and able to repeat the trip. Funniest thing we saw was an Indian woman herding sheep down in New Mexico, shading herself with a white parasol. Nettie says to keep her complexion fresh.

Wish you could have enjoyed the trip with us. Words cannot tell of the grandeur of the canyons or beauty of the deserts, plains, hills, forests, lakes and river. We can never forget them, especially the Painted Desert of Arizona, Earth's brightest spot."

A Merry Christmas and Happy New Year!

From Rene and Nettie

Nettie died 18 June 1940 and is buried in the Mount Olivet Cemetery, Salt Lake City, Utah. Sereno lived to marry again.

FRANK CLIFFORD LITTLE, youngest of twelve children, a son of Feramorz and Fannie Maria (Decker) Little was born 25 January 1868 in Salt Lake City, Utah. Six of the children died in infancy. Only six grew to maturity.

Frank, along with his brothers and sisters were given the best opportunities for education in those early days. He attended first the regular "Ward schools" then two years each at the St. Marks Episcopal Church school and the Collegiate Institute. After one year at the University of Utah he and a half brother, Brigham, attended a business school in San Francisco for a year.

Frank had ample opportunities for acquiring culture through travel. When about six years he accompanied his parents to New York City at which time his father and older sister Claire with Orson Hyde and others set sail for the Holy Land. The mission was to dedicate that land for the gathering of the Jews. Frank recalls that at fourteen years he traveled with his parents and other members of the family, in a private car to Omaha, Nebraska to attend a railroad convention. His father was Superintendent of the Utah Central Railroad. They lived in the car while stopping as well as on the journey. When seventeen he and his older brother James took an extensive tour going to San Francisco, Fresno, Los Angeles and on to the City of Mexico where they stayed two weeks or more visiting many places of interest. Returning they visited Houston and Galveston, Texas, where they took a boat for New Orleans. They found this place most interesting and remained six weeks. Continuing the journey they visited Phoenix and Maricopa, Arizona. On the last lap they stopped at the Golden Needly Hotel in Sacramento, visiting with a friend of their father.

Frank spent two summers on his father's 14,000 acre ranch in Idaho on the Blackfoot River.

On 17th of January 1897 he married Catherine Minerva Andersen, at Moroni, Utah. The ceremony took place in old Moroni Opera House and recreation hall. George Simpson, Justice of the Peace performed the ceremony. A wedding dance followed. They made their home in Moroni. His occupation was mining and prospecting. He spent a fortune trying to "strike it rich." This work took him away from home much of the time, and the rearing of their four children was left to the mother. The children looked forward to his visits at home. He adored his family and was always kind. He spent much time reading to them and helping them with their school work. He was extremely interested in what they were learning at school. He was always loved by children and the children of the community know and love him. He is proud of his grandchildren and is finding joy in being a great grandfather.

Catherine was a wonderful homemaker and manager and an excellent cook. There wasn't too much money, yet she kept her family well fed and dressed. Her home and family, and the neighbors were her chief interests. If there was sickness or accident in the neighborhood she was always called in and she gave freely of her services. Even the doctor would call on her when he needed a good practical nurse.

Her third child, Catherine, died at the age of nine years. This left a void and grief which was hard for the mother to bear. Then when her second child, Claire became afflicted with a brain tumor at the age of seventeen, just as she graduated from high school with the highest honors, it was more than she could bear. She lived a few years caring for her afflicted daughter, but died at the age of fifty seven years. After the wife's death the father spent years of devotion and time in loving care of this girl. She suffered fourteen years and everything that could be done for her comfort was done.

Frank is small of stature, and so lives up to his name, he is kind, humorous, well educated and even now at eighty five years is good looking.

ELLEN LORILLA LITTLE was born 26 November 1859 in a little cabin at the mouth of Parley's canyon near Salt Lake City, Utah. She is the daughter of Feramorz Little and Annie Elizabeth Little. Lorilla's maternal grandfather was Colonel Jesse C. Little who played an important role in the westward trek of the Mormons who had been expelled from Nauvoo, Illinois. Their homes had been burned and their property confiscated, they were destitute with a long journey over an unknown trail before them. The leader of these people, Brigham Young, wrote to Jesse C. Little, who was in the east at the time assisting missionaries in their departure, and giving aid to emigrants going west. We quote from chapter four of Heart Throbs of the West volume II by Kate B. Carter, published 1940 by the Daughters of the Utah Pioneers.

"President Young, writing to Jesse C. Little, urged him to intercede with the U.S. government for help in reaching the Great Basin, suggesting the Mormons be given contracts to construct stockade forts, or to freight materials along the Oregon Trail." * * * * "War with Mexico was declared, and President Polk was anxious to take possession of California, and so the Mormon Battalion was called into action - 500 men to serve for one year." While it was a severe hardship to lose so many men needed for the journey it did supply much of the means to make possible the trip across the plains.

Lorilla's girlhood was spent in Salt Lake City. She lived on First South street between First and Second East just opposite the present fire station number one. She was of a polygamous family. Her father lived in a mansion identical to the "Amelia Palace" built by Brigham Young. She was the oldest of her mother's children and very close to her mother. She had a happy girlhood and young womanhood. Beside her elementary schooling she attended the University of Deseret, and studied under Dr. Karl G. Maeser.

On 26 October 1882 she was married to William Joseph Horne in the Endowment House by John R. Winder. For a time they lived in a home located near the old Saltair depot. At the death of her father, Feramor Little, she was left a farm in Granger on Redwood road near 33rd south. She persuaded her husband to give up his work as railroad engineer; so in 1889 they moved to the farm where they had a happy and busy life rearing their five girls and three sons.

In 1909 they moved back to the city where they built a house at 1902 South Main street on a five acre lot inherited from his father. Whether on the farm, with long distances to travel by horse and buggy, or in the city Lorilla and her husband were interested and active in community affairs, and were regular attendants at church.

She served as Ward President of the Primary Association, and in 1900 became Counselor to the Granite Stake President, Rena Wheeler. When Granite Stake Primary Board was reorganized on 27 August 1911 Lorilla was chosen the president and served in this position until 1922 when she was forced to resign because of serious illness. She gave seventeen years to Primary work and loved it. It was really her life. She felt that she was inspired in choosing the members of the board, and seemed to know who would fit into each position. Many prominent women were associated with her.

In the early years she made her visits to the various wards by horse and buggy, later her husband took her in their car, one of the first in Salt Lake City. She would never have been able to carry on without the support of her good husband. He was always willing to help her and take her wherever she needed to go.

Lorilla put her whole heart and soul into her work, and being a good manager and housekeeper her home work was never neglected. She was hospitable, kind, and gracious. She was a real executive, but very prayerful and humble in all her callings. After an illness of over a year she passed away on the 27 March 1923, in Salt Lake City.

William J. Horne was born in Salt Lake City, a son of 1847 pioneers. His father, Joseph Horne, was captain of the second company to arrive in the Salt Lake Valley. When only thirteen years old he helped haul granite from the canyon for the construction of the Salt Lake Temple. At nineteen he was employed by the Utah Central Railroad, and was engineer until 1890. For twenty two years he was employed by the legal department of the American Smelting and Refining Company where he worked until his retirement in 1931. He had also been a member of the first board of trustees of Granite School District, and was county commissioner for a term. He was a former secretary-treasurer of the North Jordan Canal Company. After seventy nine years in Salt Lake City, and active service in civic and business affairs he passed away 6 January 1939 at the home of his daughter, Lorilla Horne Bennion.

JAMES LITTLE, born 19 August 1852, at Parowan, Iron County, Utah, is the son of James Amasa and Mary Jane (Lytle) Little, who had been called by Brigham Young to help settle that part of the state. They lived in a fort for protection from the Indians. In 1854, when the father was called on a mission to England, the family moved to Salt Lake City, until he should return. Here young James began his schooling. Here too he saw the entire population of the city move out at the approach of Johnston's Army. He saw that all animals were driven away and the homes of the people bedded with straw ready for a lighted match to burn the city should such drastic measures be needed to maintain their rights as citizens, and freedom to worship God according to the revealed principles of their martyred Prophet. Never again would they submit to the plundering, drivings, and persecutions of the past. Neither would they build a commonwealth to be taken over by another people. The family at this time moved to Provo Canyon until it was safe to return. There in Provo in a wagon box in 1858, his brother Phineas was born.

In 1862, when James was ten years old, he drove an ox team all the way to St. George, because duty's call demanded they help build the new settlement there. After five years a call to move came again. This time to Eagle Valley, Nevada. While in Nevada, James had charge of a four-mule team and freighted vegetables and lumber to Pioche, a mining camp.

To protect themselves from the raids and hostilities of the Indians the whites of Rose Valley, Spring Valley and Eagle Valley, organized a military company called "The Nevada Volunteers." At one time, the Utes, Piutes, and Navajos made a compact to kill off all the whites, but an Indian boy living with the whites, learned of their plot and told his white father; so the Volunteers were ready when they came. There were many skirmishes and in one of them our James was injured.

In 1871, because there was misunderstanding about the state boundary lines, the Eagle Valley mission was released. James's family then moved to Kanab (meaning willows), so named because of the many willows growing along the creek. Again they lived in a fort. Under Brigham Young, James took a contract to carry mail from Kanab to Panguitch. One sack tied to the back of the saddle, going out weekly. It was a dangerous route in winter, for the snow fell very deep over the divide. "The Kanab Cavalry" of which James was a member was organized--with two captains--Francis M. Hamblin and Andrew Gibbons and John R. Young, Chaplain, to go into Arizona to rescue some Mormon families from the Indians. With only a few skirmishes with Indians, who tried to steal their horses, they brought the families to Kanab, and the boys were released at House Rock, Arizona, 20 May 1874.

In 1875, James went to Salt Lake City and found employment with his uncle, Feramorz Little. He hauled rock for the Salt Lake Temple, worked on the farm and also worked on the Utah Southern Railroad, of which his uncle was President. Later the same year, he returned south to look after his father's sheep business. The father had been called on a mission to the Eastern United States.

On the 24 August 1877, at Spanish Fork, James married Emma Priscilla Evans, daughter of Thomas David and Priscilla (Merriman) Evans; the ceremony being performed by Bishop George D. Snell. Because of her mother's illness, she remained at Spanish Fork until December, then went to Kanab. On 8 February, 1878, they were endowed and sealed in the St. George Temple, soon after the dedication of that Temple--the first Temple to be erected in Utah.

In the spring, they moved to "Littles Ranch" in Garfield County. It was a lonely but picturesque spot, nestled against the pine covered mountains. Here they carried on farming, stock raising, and dairying, and made a good living; but in winter when deep snow quieted most of the activities, they moved to the centers where the children could go to school, sometimes Panguitch or Beaver on the north, or Glendale on the south. After 1887, they made their home on the ranch the year round. Here six of their children were born and grew up, all sharing and helping with the work; proving the old saying, 'many willing hands make light work.' When the girls married and left home nest, the work became too strenuous for the mother, so they bought a place in Glendale and rented the ranch, later selling it to their son, James A. Little.

James Little had been County Commissioner in Panguitch and served on jury duty at Beaver. His hobby was prospecting and mining, which he enjoyed in spare time. He was proud of his nine children and 33 grandchildren. After a short illness, he died 21 April 1919, at Glendale, Kane County, Utah, where he is buried.

Emma Priscilla Evans

Thomas David and Priscilla (Merriman) Evans were handcart pioneers of 1856. Their daughter, Emma Priscilla, was born to them in a 'dugout' at the home of Colonel Stephan Markham in Spanish Fork on December 31, 1856. Her childhood years were spent in the poverty and privations of pioneer life, but the faith of her parents and their teachings, has been shown in her devotion to the Church activities all through her life. She was only twelve years when she first became associated with the Relief Society, a women's organization effected by the Prophet in Nauvoo, and now an international women's organization. It was her duty to gather the "Sunday Eggs" and other donations for the benefit of the poor.

In 1872, when the Young Ladies Retrenchment Society was organized in Spanish Fork, by two of President Young's wives, "Aunt Eliza and Aunt Zina", Emma was made its secretary. In 1875, when the Young Mens Mutual Improvement Association was organized in Spanish Fork by Junius F. Wells, the Retrenchment Society was changed to Young Ladies Mutual Improvement Association and Emma was retained as secretary, until her marriage. She also taught a Sunday School class and sang in the choir; so it was only natural she should continue such activities through her married life. After settling in Glendale, she served as Relief Society President for nine years. After her husband's death, she went to Ogden to help nurse "Grandma Little," until her death three years later. During this time, Emma and her sister-in-law, Claudia Little Robinson, became interested in genealogy and family history. They studied the names and notes gathered by Father Little when he was in New York State on his mission in 1875.

PHINEAS HOWE LITTLE, the fourth child of James A. and Mary Jane (Lytle) Little, was born 2 June 1858 at the mouth of Provo Canyon, where citizens of Salt Lake City had gathered as exiles when it was feared the Johnston Army would invade their city. He was born in a wagon box set on logs, where the hiss of rattlesnakes could be heard all through the night. As a means of relief from the menacing danger of these slithering, coiling creatures, the people turned loose their hogs, and were happy to find that soon the fields were cleared and they could go about in moderate safety.

Negotiations had been made with the Army officers and General Albert Sidney Johnston had agreed to by-pass the city and form camp in Cedar Valley, forty miles southwest, but the people who had suffered much in the past from treachery, were taking no chances. The historian, Bancroft has given a good description of the Army's entering Great Salt Lake Valley on the 26 June 1858. "The rays of the rising sun slants athwart the bayonets of the 5th Infantry as forming the van of the Union Army, it approaches the outskirts of Salt Lake City, at dusk is still heard in its streets the rumble of caissons and baggage wagons. But no other sound is heard, save the murmur of the creek; nor is there sign of life in the city of Saints -- Zion is deserted."

"Thirty thousand of the Mormons had left their homes in Salt Lake City, taking with them all their movable effects, and leaving only a score of men, with instructions to apply the torch if it should be occupied by troops." Bancroft also said that during the two years occupancy of Camp Floyd, not a house was distrubed nor a citizen harmed or molested.

The Saints returned to their homes in Salt Lake City, but the family of Phineas was not to repose for long. They were called to return to the south to help settle St. George and Eagle Valley. When only ten years Phineas helped his older brother drive a four mule team hauling lumber to Pioche and bringing back family supplies. About 1871 the family moved to Kanab, Kane County, Utah.

Here his father, older brother and himself went into the sheep business, their summer range being the Buckskin mountains - now called the Kiabab forest. While tending sheep his companions were mostly the Piute Indians. He learned their language, and joined their sports and they became his staunch friends. When they came to his camp hungry he fed them; if they came hungry and he was away they helped themselves, but always left a mark to tell him who had been there, and contrived in some way to repay him.

After shearing in spring the wool was sacked and hauled to Panguitch for sale or exchange for clothing or other supplies. On one such trip Phineas met a pretty young clerk at the store, and later renewed acquaintance when she came to Kanab to visit an aunt, Mary Clayton. The acquaintance grew to warm friendship. On 12th of March 1880 Phineas Little and Mary Elizabeth Cluff were married in Panguitch where seven of their ten children were born.

In 1903 they moved to the Big Horn basin in Wyoming. For five years their family home was a sheep wagon and tents while a company of men worked on the project of bringing water from the Yellowstone River to a tract of land in the basin. Often the mother cooked for eighteen to twenty men besides her family of eight. To these laborers the going was over parched ground and beds of prickly pears, but to those who should come after, it meant fields of waving grain and many fine homes.

In 1908 Phineas moved to Oakley, Idaho where he bought a livery stable, and his wife leased a rooming house. Later they went on to a farm.

In 1920 Mary moved to Ogden with her youngest son who had served in World War I and returned in poor condition of health. The husband being a frontiersman by nature cared not for city life; so after many years of toil and trials together they drifted apart. He died 28 July 1934 at Porterville, Morgan County, Utah, and was buried the 1st of August in Ogden. She died at Ogden, Weber County, Utah 24 April 1949.

Mary Elizabeth Cluff Little

I, Mary Elizabeth Cluff (Little), was born February 25, 1861, at Provo, Utah, a daughter of David Cluff and Annis Hulda Elmer. My mother was forced to work hard to support her three children -- my sister Hulda, my brother Elijah, and myself. Elijah died on June 28, 1867, and although I was just six years old, I remember how he was dressed.

For a time we two girls lived with my father and stepmother while mother worked. However, she soon obtained a position in Salt Lake City, with a Mrs. Chrisman, and we again went to live with her.

After a few years mother married again, to William Welch. There were two children born to this union - Nancy Matilda and Achsa Jane. My stepfather loved liquor, and soon began to think we two girls were a burden to him, so mother put us out to do housework, and she took in work at home. I remember nothing of pleasure in my childhood; never expected any gifts at Christmas, on birthdays, or any other occasions.

My grandfather Elmer came to see us one day when I was thirteen years of age, and asked mother to go with him to Panguitch, Utah, and since my stepfather was willing, she went. Until this time I had never been in a Sunday school, or meeting house. I had worked for one woman who didn't think it was wrong to smoke, or drink wine. She smoked a pipe and each morning a man brought two glasses of wine - one for her and one for me, for I had learned to smoke and drink too.

I thank God that my grandfather Elmer came and took us to Panguitch, for it wasn't long til I was teaching a Sunday school class, and singing in the choir, and serving as secretary to the Young Ladies M. I. A.

Always I had a longing for a father, so mother let me go to Provo to visit my uncle Harvey Cluff. He sent me to school at the Brigham Young Academy, but before the first term was finished I grew so homesick to see mother I left school and went home. This was a great mistake I later learned. I worked for a few years more, then when I was nineteen years old, in 1880, I was married to Phineas Howe Little.

We lived in Kanab, Utah for about twelve years then moved to Panguitch. I devoted myself to the family. After eighteen years in Panguitch on the 8th of March 1903 we left for Cowley, Wyoming. I drove a covered wagon all the way while my sons and their father drove the cattle. We arrived three months later. My husband was a contractor, building canals and railroad grades. He hired several men, for whom I cooked in addition to my family. Our shelter was tents. This work lasted six years, then we moved to Oakley, Idaho where my husband bought a livery stable, and I ran a rooming house. We lived here about eight years until 1917, then sold our business.

While in Oakley I worked in the church, which seemed good after so many years away from it. I was a counselor in the Relief Society for some years.

We moved to Ogden about 1920. While here I did much genealogy and temple work. I loved this work and it gave me great satisfaction. The last eleven years of my life I lived with my son James A. Little.

While my family were small I wrote these lines.

Six happy boys at play on the shed,
Mother calls, "Its time for bed!"
Six smiling faces rosy with racing,
Soon under the covers each other are chasing.

Mother retires with a sigh of relief,
Thinking still they are under one roof,
When a cry from one corner,
"Some medicine, please, to try this aching tooth to ease."

A call from the cot, "I'se 'bout to freeze,
Tum fix the tuvvers, if you pease."
Eyes heavy with sleep, and about to sneeze,
Mother wonders what's coming next to tease.

Winters come when summers go,
Children are shut in from the snow.
Some pull on the apron strings,
Some on the toe,
Many a trial the mother will know.

There's a pull on the purse strings, to keep them in clothes,
Money comes in and away it goes.
Yet the pull on the heart strings, I plainly see,
Is when the branches pull off from the old family tree.

ADA LITTLE, born 6 May 1860 in Salt Lake City, Utah, is the daughter of James Amasa and Mary Jane (Lytle) Little. Her parents had come across the plains together in the same company, and were pioneer sweethearts. They were married shortly after arriving in the Valley in 1849.

Ada was three or four years old when her mother was moved to St. George where the father had taken his other family in 1861 at a call to help build up Southern Utah. The next call was to Eagle Valley, Nevada where Ada's two youngest sisters were born. In 1871 the Little family moved to Kanab. The climate was warm and dry, the heat was often oppressive to all the settlers. In those early days shoes were scarce and the children went barefoot. To relieve her feet from the burning sand Ada would throw her sunbonnet ahead and jump to it, then throw again and jump. She was almost a young lady before she had a pair of shoes.

One day a stranger came to Kanab - Alfred D. Young had come to visit his aunt Rhoda who had been like a mother to him after his parents died. Ada and Alf met and fell in love, and when she was fifteen years old, and he twenty two they traveled in a white-top spring wagon in company with her half sister and companion, Elmer Johnson, to Salt Lake City to be married in the Endowment House. The ceremony was performed 29 November 1875.

They were both small people, so were called the "Little Young couple." Ada weighed ninety pounds, had red brown hair and dark eyes. She had spunk and was sometimes called a spitfire. Alf was short and had brown hair and blue eyes. They were both amiable.

They began their married life in Kanab where their first child was born and died in 1877. They moved to Panguitch, Utah where their next two children were born. Then opportunity opened for work at a large lumber camp at Flagstaff, Arizona. Ada was the first white woman to live in Flagstaff. For a while they lived in a covered wagon. When the first room in the fort was built Ada moved into it. Crude as it was with its dirt floor and straw mattress on the floor for a bed they were thankful for this shelter, for soon another daughter was born to them. Financially they did very well while working here for John D. Young. Alf acquired forty mules and two large wagons, but homesickness crept upon them - the desire to be near and associate with their relatives and friends was a strong pull drawing them back home.

So after eight years they returned to Kanab where he went into the sheep business which flourished and grew until he was known as "The sheep king of southern Utah." While this kept the husband away much of the time Ada was busy running a hotel and livery stable. Drummers advertised their goods in her hotel windows. Alf and Ada had a lovely home and eleven children had come to share it, but tragedy struck their group, through the communicable diseases that come in childhood five of their children lost their hearing.

In order that these handicapped children receive an education they moved to Ogden where the State School for the Deaf and Blind is located. Alf bought a forty acre farm and orchard at Kanesville, Weber County, Utah. They built a big two story brick house on this place, also barn, an ice house and other buildings. Two more little girls were born to them at Kanesville making a family of thirteen, four sons and nine daughters.

In 1910 the husband and father died from acute indigestion leaving Ada with four children yet at home to care for. During the war she helped at the Thomas Dee Hospital while the flu epidemic was raging. In 1919 she became ill with a heart condition. She went to California for a time, but returned without improvement. The doctors could do nothing for her. In 1920 she became very ill, not expected to live. The Elders were sent for, and they administered to her, and through the power and the authority of the Priesthood which they held she was restored to health and lived another four years. She did temple work for her dead kindred, and it was a comforting thought that her life had been spared to do for those departed spirits what they could not do for themselves, and what was so necessary to their salvation and progress through the eternities.

Ada passed away 5 February 1924 in Salt Lake City, and buried in Ogden, Utah.

FANNIE MARIA LITTLE was the daughter of James A. and Mary Jane (Lytle) Little, born in Salt Lake City, 4 May 1862. As a child she moved to southern Utah with her parents and shared with them the hardships of early pioneering. In 1867 she went with them to Eagle Valley, Nevada, but through unfair taxation they with the others of this colony moved back to southern Utah. They came to Kanab in 1871. It was here she met William Thomas Stewart, whom she married in 1879, she being the second wife as he had buried his first about four years before. When her first child was four months old he married a plural wife who was quite a number of years older than she and had the advantage of more schooling. This wife was very self confident and soon became the dominating element in the family, which was a considerable trial to her. Fannie showed literary talent but her short life gave little opportunity for development. When her second baby girl was five days old she passed peacefully away 21 December 1883, at the age of twenty and one-half years.

CHARLES LEO LITTLE, youngest son of Mary Jane Lytle and James Amasa Little was born 14 February 1865 in St. George, Washington County, Utah. His paternal grandparents were James Little and Susannah Young a sister of Brigham Young and a pioneer to Salt Lake Valley in 1849. His maternal grandparents were John Lytle and Christina Whitner who also were pioneers of 1849.

When less than two years old Charles' father moved to Eagle Valley, Nevada with his three families, and in 1871 when Charles was six years old they all moved to Kanab, Utah, about four miles north of the Arizona state line. It was here that he grew to manhood. He recalls that when ten years old he spent the summer with his older brothers at the sheep herd which caused his mother some anxiety.

When sixteen he started out alone on horseback to go to Flagstaff, Arizona to work for his brother-in-law, Alf Young. He traveled through an Indian country, and the Navajoes were on the warpath at the time. As he slept in his saddle blankets at night he probably had reason to wonder if he would reach his destination in safety. He has felt that it was not luck, but Providence that cared for him. Charles Leo worked at getting out and hauling logs. It was a great responsibility for a young boy to drive eight span of horses, but his work developed a strong healthy body and a taste for roughing it in the out of doors.

His opportunity for formal education was meager, but he did get two years at the Brigham Young Academy when he was twenty-two years of age.

On the 17 October 1890 he married in the Latter-day Saints Temple at St. George, Almera Woodard Johnson. For a few years they made Kanab their home, then in 1897 moved to Fredonia, Arizona. In 1900 new colonies were founded in Big Horn, Wyoming under the leadership of an apostle, Owen Woodruff, and the Church was encouraging people to settle there. Charles Leo felt impelled to try his fortunes in this new country. His wife a frail little woman with six small children was opposed to traveling a thousand miles by team and wagon to an unsettled new country, but responded to her husband's judgement and prepared for the journey. They left Fredonia on the 17th of May 1901 and arrived at Burlington, Wyoming on the fourth of July. After resting for a week they continued the journey to Byron. The crossing of the Shoshone River at high flood season is an incident all his family well remembers. The mother with her children around her in the wagon, the father managing his four horses and two wagons coupled together prayed fervently to their Father in Heaven for his protection and guidance as they drove into the swollen stream led by Charles Shumway on horseback. Their hearts almost stood still when in mid stream they saw the horses drop out of sight. Nature asserted itself, the horses finding themselves beyond their depth began to swim until again they reached a footing. The crossing over safely the family heaved a sigh of relief and breathed a prayer of gratitude for their deliverance, and continued the journey.

For a time they lived in tents until a log cabin could be built. Because of an unfortunate situation and conditions for watering his land within a year he moved to Lovell where he built another log cabin and remained till about 1905. Then he took up a homestead near Penrose. After this was put under cultivation he also engaged in sheep raising. Pioneering in this unsettled country was really a trial for the mother, but through all the hardships she was always a faithful wife and companion and stood by him in all his undertakings.

In 1906 an epidemic of typhoid broke out and Almera contracted the disease. A year later her daughter Dora and son Ross were afflicted. Through the faith and prayers of the family all were restored to health. However, the mother's health continued poor, and after having pneumonia three times the doctors advised moving to a warmer climate. So on the 3rd of October 1915 Charles Leo left Wyoming and came back to Utah, settling on a ranch three miles north of Neola in Duchesne County. After six years he sold out and moved to Delta, Millard County where he resided till his death except for two years spent in St. George where he took his wife for her health, and that she might do temple work. She had been an active participant in church work all her life, and though he took little part he was a true Latter-day Saint showing his religion in everyday living and helping his wife rear their children as upright, honorable citizens and God fearing men and women.

Almera Johnson Little passed away 19 August 1937 at the home of her daughter Almera Hopkins at Provo, Utah. Charles Leo then went back to Delta where he lived alone another ten years except for visits to his children. He died 10 October 1947 at the age of eighty two years. He is buried beside his wife in the Delta cemetery.

CLAUDIA AUGUSTA LITTLE, born 22 July 1867 in Eagle Valley, Nevada, is the daughter of James Amasa and Mary Jane (Lytle) Little, and a granddaughter of Susannah Young, sister to President Brigham Young. Her grandparents, John and Christina Lytle, were driven by mob violence from their home in Missouri, and crossed the plains by ox team in 1849.

Eagle Valley settlement consisted of a fort built of logs. The log cabins, set close together, had dirt roofs and no floors, and one room for each family. When four years old her parents moved to Kanab in southern Utah about four miles from the Arizona state line.

James A. Little, Claudia's father, was an educated man and had taught school in the state of New York. He wished his children to acquire an education, so in those early days organized a family school for them. In 1884 Claudia became instructor in the primary grades of the Kanab District School, which position she held for two years.

January 27, 1886 she married John W. Robinson of Kanab. They are parents of five children.

From Claudia's own writings are gathered the incidents here related. The same year as her marriage she was stricken with typhoid fever, and her condition grew very serious. She and her family had faith that she could be healed through administration, and by the power of the holy priesthood. They recalled how Jesus, the Son of God, and his apostles had gone about healing the sick in their time by the authority they held. She knew that since the restoration of the gospel in 1830 that we too in our day had the same power and authority among us. The ancient apostles, Peter, James, and John who had received their authority direct from their Lord Jesus had themselves conferred the Melchizedek Priesthood upon our Prophet and his companion, Oliver Cowdery. Since then this priesthood has been delegated to the faithful and worthy male candidates of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Claudia's family sent for Jacob Hamblin, a member of their community, and a faithful man. He was known as the apostle to the Indians because of his call to labor among them, who because of his fearless and honest dealings with them had won the highest respect of these native Utahns. Jacob Hamblin and others laid their hands upon Claudia's head and by the authority they held rebuked the disease, and pronounced a blessing upon her, and through their combined faith in Jesus Christ she was miraculously healed.

Some years later Claudia's husband developed a bad heart, her son John had asthma, and a daughter Rose was hard of hearing, caused by scarlet fever. They heard of many wonderful healings made by the power and authority of the priesthood under the hands of Patriarch Blackburn who lived in Loa, Wayne County, Utah. This place was about two hundred miles from Kanab, and though the trip must be made by team and wagon Claudia decided to travel to Loa, for she felt her family needed such help. They stayed in Loa one week and the afflicted ones were administered to each day. The daughter's hearing improved, and the son was healed and grew to be a strong man. The husband passed away soon after they returned home in 1904. Through this sad incident she found comfort in the thought that she had done the best she knew, and must submit to God's will. Not always can we expect our wishes to be fulfilled. A call by death is a call to a greater life beyond, and lies in the hands of God. Our faith must be tried to see if we will continue to walk in the path of right, and acknowledge God's hand in all things.

In October 1905 Claudia sold her property in Kanab and moved to Roy, Utah, a short distance from Ogden. Here she bought farm land and operated a small grocery store as well as a Post Office. After much sickness in this place and the death of her son Chester and daughter Claudia she moved to Ogden. With the help of her son John she built a new home in the 9th Ward. Here she cared for and nursed her aged mother through a lingering illness of about three years until she died in 1921.

Alone now, her children in homes of their own her thoughts turned to those who had passed on before and she became interested in genealogical research and temple work. In 1922 she married Isaac D. Cooper, and for a time they lived in Salt Lake City where she had access to the fine Genealogical library and spent much time searching out her kindred dead. Together they did considerable temple work to make possible, to those who would accept, the salvation of those departed souls who had died without a knowledge of the true plan. While in Salt Lake City she was instrumental in effecting a family Genealogical Organization which brought others into the interest of the work, and laid the beginning of this family history.

She was an active worker in her church, having served as teacher, and as counselor in the Young Womens Mutual Improvement Association, and also of Relief Society.

Left alone again she went to Carlin, Nevada to live with her son Jack. After a few years her health improved and she went back to Ogden to visit her children. While on this visit she met an old friend and neighbor and in a few months, on September 1932 she married John M. Brown. They settled in Ogden and spent many happy days together. He passed away in September 1938. She died 5 September 1941. They are buried in Ogden.

MARY JANE LITTLE (called Janey), born 31 December 1859 in Salt Lake City, Utah is the daughter of James Amasa and Annie Matilda (Baldwin), Little. When she was three years old her parents were called by President Brigham Young to help colonize Southern Utah. They lived in St. George till Janey was eight years old then moved to Eagle Valley, Nevada. Four years later when she was twelve her mother and children lived one year in Payson with her maternal grandmother, Elizabeth Coles, Baldwin Cutler.

This year has been remembered as one of the happiest in her girlhood days. It was one of special privilege, and appreciation for the opportunity it afforded to go to school, and to know her grandmother who was a brilliant woman with a wealth of experiences, culture and refinement; and a character firm in honesty and honor. She expected others to live according to the same high standard, for she knew these were the principles taught by her religion. She was a midwife and so called out all hours of night or day to serve her fellow sisters. Janey has said, "I used to go to her room early in the morning to see if she had been called out during the night, I often found her on her knees in prayer." Her faith and teachings left a deep impression on Janey's young mind that stayed with her always. Here she had access to good books and made good use of her time in reading. Her mother had taught her not to read trashy books, and good books were not always available on the frontiers.

Returning to southern Utah they settled at Kanab in Kane County. Janey had a beautiful voice and loved to sing. When about thirteen years a Mr. Thompson, music teacher from Salt Lake City, heard her sing, and talked to her mother with an offer to give her musical training if she could come to Salt Lake City. It seems this could not be. She did, however, get a little instruction from John Tullidge, Aunt Lizzie's father, and learned to read music. Later she conducted a vocal class for young people having only a tuning fork to rely on for pitch. Through many years she sang in the ward choir, and at funerals and entertainment.

When about fifteen years of age she met Elmer Wood Johnson who was first attracted by her innocent face, sweet voice and pretty curls. In the fall of 1875 when she was nearly sixteen years they traveled by team and wagon to Salt Lake City to be married in the Endowment House, for not yet was a temple built in Utah. At this time the Salt Lake Temple was up to the top of the basement windows. Janey and Elmer were married 22 November 1875 just before Thanksgiving Day. On this trip Janey saw for the first time a train and steam engine, and attended her first theater.

They returned to Kanab and lived nearby in Johnson for three years. Their eldest daughter, Heva, was born here. In 1879 Elmer was appointed Sheriff of Kane County. That winter he took another wife. He married Julia Anna Orton and brought her home to live in the same house. Was that a test of loyalty to church and husband? When Elmer was called on a mission next summer his family was left in poor circumstances. Julia kept house and took care of the two little girls while Janey clerked in a store. After eighteen months in the Southern States Elmer contracted chills and fever and was honorably released to come home. Together the two women lived and loved and worked, they planned and made their baby clothes alike and all done by hand. They accepted this plurality as a true principle of their religion, though each may have had misgivings in her secret heart as to the happiness it could bring in this earth life where all are so human and subject to its frailties.

In 1887 after Elmer had spent a term in jail along with many others for this practice he moved his families to Mexico. In September Elmer, Janey and their four children started out in a covered wagon. Julia was to make the trip after the expected baby arrived. The journey took nearly three months time, they arrived at Colonia Diaz late in November. Already this colony had been formed two years earlier, by groups who had come for the same reason but had found a not welcome sign. After their long tiresome trek in hopes of finding a place of peace and rest they were threatened with expulsion from the state of Chihuahua. The governor had issued such an order, however, the Lord is ever mindful of his own: The Church Colonization Company speeded up its negotiations for the purchase of land for a colony. In the meantime a Mexican land owner, Jose Maria Holgin invited the Saints to move onto his property nearby, and besides he furnished cows for them to milk. Elmer missing this episode pitched a tent near the center of the colony land and later in the spring bought two and one-half acres on which he built his adobe house and lived there for the next twenty four years.

On 22 January 1888 their fifth child was born in the tent, and well she might say, "The heavens wept when I came to earth," for it rained continuously for about two weeks. The tent became soaked and leaked necessitating pans spread over the bed to keep mother and babe dry. Conditions were not easy to bear, but they had a testimony of the gospel and pioneer blood in their veins which gave them the courage to do and dare.

In 1889 Julia and her three little girls had been moved down, and each wife now had a house of her own. Though each was a good housekeeper and thrifty it soon became apparent that Elmer's stock on the range was not sufficient to raise the family; so Janey and the older girls worked out a small candy business. Before long they supplied not only the colony but found market elsewhere. She also sold cookies, and exchanged a live yeast for flour which furnished much of their bread.

One can hardly recall Colonia Diaz and its entertainments without remembering Elmer Wood Johnson. In the home dramatics he was always an actor. At the age of fifteen years when he lived in Salt Lake City he had joined the dramatic club and played in the Social Hall along with Junius F. Wells, ? Olsen, and others. Had opportunity afforded development of this talent he might have become a great actor for he loved the work. He and all his family were musical, he sang in the choir, usually called for the square dances while John Earl played the fiddle.

From 1910 to 1912 the Mexican revolution had been devastating the country. Natives became bold and lawless and harassed the peaceful colonists. One man while working on his farm was shot and killed for not yielding to a demand, another was shot for trying to explain to an unreasonable officer. On July 28, 1912, a runner from the stake Presidency at Colonia Juarez brought word that the Mexican Colonies, should be evacuated, her people were to go to the U.S. lest more serious situations developed. The rebel forces were approaching, the colonists must leave immediately. So cattle and all the stock were turned loose, grain in the bins, fruit trees loaded with ripening fruit, and gardens in their glory all were left behind. In four hours Elmer and his two families with seven hundred other residents of Colonia Diaz had packed into their wagons food, bedding and the most necessary articles and were moving toward the border. When this train of wagons reached U. S. soil their minds were relieved but their hearts were filled with fear-hundreds of independent souls thrown upon the mercy of strangers. Within two weeks after encampment seventeen babes were ushered into the world. The U. S. government furnished tents and rationed food. After a month or so finding it impossible to return to their homes in Mexico Uncle Sam arranged for free transportation for these refugees. Elmer and Janey with her family went to Idaho where their oldest daughter and family were homesteading. In October Elmer filed on 320 acres of dry land.

Stripped of all they had accumulated in the thirty six years of married life they again attempted to build a home, but misfortune continued. Years of drought followed and crops were uncertain, her two sons died in the flu epidemic of 1920, a son-in-law had earlier been killed in an accident while away from home working. He left a wife and three small children. Through it all Janey's faith never faltered, she could still say, God knows best-we must endure. Through her strenuous life of pioneering and moving about she was never too busy to teach her children the beautiful things of life. She taught them to pray always, to acknowledge God's will in everything, and the value of going to church, and to keep the Sabbath day holy. She taught them to sing and be happy, and truthful regardless of consequences.

The last few years they lived in Salt Lake City where they celebrated their golden wedding in 1925, and Janey passed away 12 January 1932. Elmer followed her in death four years later. He died 6 May 1936. They were laid to rest in the city cemetery at Salt Lake City, Utah.

LORIN JOHNSON was a faithful son, he had stayed with and helped his parents through the exodus from Mexico and settling on dry farms in Idaho. He was ambitious to improve his life and gain some of the cultural advantages. He had a fine voice which he wished to train and cultivate, so for that purpose he went to New York City, but his desire was not to be fulfilled. He took the flu and died 1 February 1920.

The following letter to Lorin's father quoted from Mission President G. W. McCune tells of his sad ending in New York.

Mr. Elmer W. Johnson
R. F. D. ##
Idaho Falls, Idaho

It was indeed a shock to learn of your son's death, and I want to assure you of the united sympathy of all who had the pleasure of meeting this good young man during his brief life in New York.

It was December 29th. when a stranger appeared at our office wanting a check cashed. He had no identification, but it required only a word or two of conversation to impress me with the fact that Lorin Johnson was a clean and honorable boy and worthy of our confidence. Accordingly I cashed the check, after which I wrote to his Bishop suggesting Brother Lorin as one whom I would like to have associated with us in the missionary work here.

Last Saturday I received a letter from Bishop Smith in answer to my letter. Bishop David Smith speaks very highly of your splendid son. I immediately sought to find Lorin, but alas! he had passed away.

I am sincerely your brother in the Gospel.

CHRISTINA LITTLE, the second daughter of James Amasa and Annie Matilda (Baldwin) Little was born 12 January 1863. There is a controversy as to the place. One story says that a band of weary pioneers camped on the Santa Clara River to establish a Mormon settlement, and that there in a willow shelter she was born. These same pioneers moved on to settle St. George, Washington County, Utah. Her birth is recorded as occurring there.

When about eight years old her father was called to help settle Kanab Kane County, Utah. The family had in the mean time lived in Eagle Valley, Nevada for some years; so her childhood and youth was spent amidst the trying conditions of real pioneer life, but her natural happy disposition helped her to retain many happy memories of her early life.

She was very dark complexioned, and was conscious of her dark skin. Because of this self consciousness she insisted on wearing a sunbonnet. She loved music, and sang in ward gatherings when very young. Later she was soloist in the ward choir. She often told of singing at a social while barefoot, wearing a white dress, and the inevitable sunbonnet. After singing the first verse Jacob Hamblin walked over and removed the bonnet, saying, "we can hear the beautiful music, let us see your face. Do not try to hide what God has made so lovely." This incident had a great influence on her life.

Her brother Lorin says of her. "She was always a worker, from childhood, always helping with the carding of the wool and the weaving, working in the garden, or doing any work around the house."

An intellectual and devoted father started to teach her early in life. Her education was thorough as far as it could be under pioneer conditions. At the age of fifteen after an illness she went to the St. George Temple where she labored for a year as official ordinance worker. She gained much of spiritual value, but never completely regained her physical health. In 1875 when Leonard John Nuttall was called to preside over the Kanab Stake of the Church, he moved his family from Provo to Kanab. Among his family was Leonard John junior who found his soul mate in Christina Little. They were married on 11 March 1880 in the St. George Latter-day Saints Temple. She was seventeen and he twenty one. Her hope chest was furnished with homespun clothing and linens which were woven by her mother, but her best dress was woven by herself from wool she had dyed, carded and spun.

For three years they lived in Kanab, then her husband accepted a mission call for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and this in spite of severe loss to crops and property from a flood. The day after Christmas Leonard and Christina with their two small daughters left Kanab in a lumber wagon for Salt Lake City. There he secured work as time-keeper for the state legislature and earned enough money to take him on his British Mission, leaving in May 1884. Christina stayed with his parents in Provo, and until her death cherished the nickel that was left her. In August, three months later, their younger daughter died. The following winter Christina attended the Brigham Young Academy, and the next fall returned to Kanab where she taught school for $25.00 a month. She and her little girl lived with her mother. She again prepared a trousseau while waiting for the return of her husband. Among other possessions acquired was a choice cow and a sewing machine.

In June 1886 Christina went to Salt Lake City to meet her returning missionary husband. Their plans were to go home to Kanab, but at the suggestion of Seymour B. Young, who told them it was time enough to go home when they were sent. They remained in the City where Leonard John worked on the Salt Lake Temple building for seven years.

In September 1893 they moved to Provo, on the 16th of April 1894 they moved to a farm in Lake View just north west of Provo. This was home the rest of her life, with just one vacation, a trip to Colonia Diaz, Old Mexico to visit her parents there in 1904. Seven more children were born on the farm, making fourteen in all. Two sons died in infancy leaving six girls and five boys.

In June 1907 the husband was called on another mission, this time to the Central States. There he labored for twenty eight months while his wife struggled to overcome the circumstances of those trying times, and to keep alive the flame of spiritual growth, and educational ambition in the family. All their children attended the Brigham Young University, seven of them graduating from high school or college, and eight of them have taught school.

The home of Christina and Leonard John Nuttall had a hospitable atmosphere, and as the children grew up it was the scene of many social gatherings. Her outstanding gifts were faith, cheerfulness, and the ability to see the bright side of every situation. Her hobby was making things grow in the soil. Her leisure time was spent in needle work, or reading good books. Her public service was mostly among the sick, although she filled some teaching and executive positions.

Christina Little Nuttall passed away 7 March 1918, and was buried March 11th, her thirty eighth wedding anniversary.

Her husband married again 16 September 1931, Anna Louisa Glade. They spent eighteen years together working in the St. George and Salt Lake Temples. He died 14 October 1949 just before his ninetieth birthday.

LORIN AMASA LITTLE, born 29 April 1864 at St. George, Washington County, Utah is the son of James A. and Annie Matilda (Baldwin) Little. When very young his father's families moved to Eagle Valley, Nevada, then in 1871 when he was seven years old his mother and five children went to Payson, Utah where they lived with grandmother Cutler for a year until the father could move two other families to Kanab and become established there. That year in Payson was the only period in which he received formal schooling. From the age of nine to twelve he and his brother Charley herded sheep with their father.

At the age of twelve he began his work with cattle-riding for his brother-in-law Elmer W. Johnson. With the exception of a year or so when he carried mail his occupation for many years was riding and looking after cattle.

When about sixteen or seventeen he carried mail from Kanab to the top of Shumburg Mountain in the area of what is now called Zions National Park. Here the mail bag was sent down over the fourteen hundred foot cliff on a wire attached to a cedar tree growing near the edge and stretched diagonally to the bottom where it was fastened to another tree, and another mailman waited to exchange the bags. The mail was hauled up the wire by means of a pulley and turning a windlass at the top.

One of his first treks across the country with cattle was in company with John Stewart who drove seven hundred sixty head of cattle and one hundred wild horses to Colorado. They trailed them through Castle Valley, across the Green and Grand rivers, through Moab and around the northeast corner of the Recell mountain to the D. P. Cattle Company. This drive had taken them from June to late fall.

Another interesting experience came to Lorin while he was working for James (Jim) Andrus on the Canaan Ranch. They had gathered a thousand head of steers and trailed them to Milford. From that point the cattle were shipped by railroad to Evanston, Wyoming. There the steers, and saddle horses were all sold to Beckwith and Quinn Company for $33000. Payment of this sum was made in twenty dollar gold pieces, the most gold he has ever seen. The men returned by train taking their gold in two suitcases which were so heavy it required two men to carry each case. The gold was deposited in a bank in Salt Lake City.

Lorin remained an employee of the Canaan Ranch for several years during which time he broke all their wild horses into useful animals. Later he was foreman for the Pipe Springs Ranch in Arizona which was church owned and managed by E. D. Wooley of Kanab. Thousands of head of cattle were sent from Idaho and Utah to this ranch as a means of preserving their property from government confiscation during the raids on the "Mormon" polygamists.

Before this time on December 31, 1887 Lorin had married Eliza Ann Pugh in the St. George Temple. They reared ten children.

In 1898 he decided to move northward so drove his own hundred head of cattle to Cache Valley and stayed for a year. After scouting about through Idaho and Wyoming for a suitable place to make a home he shipped his cattle by train to Canada arriving in Lethbridge 14 May 1900. At Taylorville, 70 miles south he bought a house and quarter section of land where he raised grain, horses, cattle and sheep and lived for the next twenty years.

Lorin has felt the lack of education, but would not let that stand in the way of giving his best to the service of his church, and receiving the commensurate growth and progress for his efforts. He worked in the auxiliaries - was superintendent of Sunday School, and president of the Young Mens Mutual Improvement Association. In 1908 he received a call to go on a mission to Great Britain which he filled with honor and was President of the Bristol Conference the last half of his twenty-eight months service. He has said he gained a strong testimony of the truth of the Gospel as taught by his church, and felt richly blessed for all sacrifices and efforts made to share with others the truths he had learned, and the knowledge he had gained of a Divine Father's love for his children on earth.

After he had left home and was on his way to England a prairie fire in the vicinity of his home broke out, and before it could be brought under control had burned all his hay, chickens, pigs, harnesses and stables - every thing at the barnyard except a fine stallion and a new saddle, though the horse had his hair singed off before they could get him out of the stable. After Lorin's arrival in England President Penrose said to him, "so you are the man who had a fire, are you?" "Yes," was the answer, "I'm the man." Then President Penrose made him a promise that the loss would be made up to him one hundred percent, and Lorin testified that in two years after his return home he was better off financially than he had ever been before.

Three years after his return from England he was called to visit the scattered saints in the Stuckler district about three hundred miles northward from Cardston, Canada. He was to bless babies, baptize children and give instructions and encouragement to all. During the three weeks of absence his own little girl one-year old died. The family had been unable to get in touch with him, so it was with a sorrowful message they greeted his homecoming.

In 1920 he moved his family to Weiser, Idaho. While there he was a member of the Weiser Stake High Council. After 2 - 3 years he moved to Butte Valley, California where he carried on dairying and sheep raising.

On July 29, 1930 his wife died and he traveled seven hundred miles to bury her in their home town of Kanab. Two years later he returned to St. George to make his home. There on the 18th of January 1933 he married Emma Thompson, widow of John M. Squire. For several years she had been an ordinance worker in the St. George Temple. He joined her in this work and for seven years they gave freely of their time and energies without remuneration. They are happy to be useful in their older years in this most important, but little understood field of God's work. They are happy to make possible the salvation of throngs who knew not of the truth in their earth life, and had not the privilege because the true plan was not on earth. Will these departed souls understand and accept our efforts in their behalf? We know not. They are free agents to accept or reject as they will. William C. Gregg, has expressed this thought rather beautifully.

"Know this, that every soul is free
To choose his life and what he'll be;
For this eternal truth is given, -
That God will force no man to heaven. "

Lorin has been an active church worker in different capacities during his life. He and his wife are happy together in their Dixie home, and are still doing temple work at the ages of ninety and eighty-five years. She died 27 June, 1957 at St. George, Utah.

ELIZA ANN PUGH LITTLE

ELIZA ANN PUGH (called Lida), born 27 January 1870 in Mill Creek, Salt Lake County, Utah is the daughter of Edward and Elizabeth (Kelly) Pugh. When Eliza was about one year old her family moved to Kanab in southern Utah when that place was first being settled. There she grew up in the life of pioneering common to most children in Utah at that period. She received her education in what schools were then available. The Church auxiliaries was a prominent factor, and she took advantage of their offering. As a young woman she became active in church duties. She was secretary of the Relief Society of Kanab for eight years.

On the 31 December 1887 she married Lorin A. Little in Kanab, and June 27, 1889 their marriage was solemnized in the St. George Temple.

In 1902 with her husband and three children - three others had died in infancy - she moved to Alberta, Canada settling on a quarter section farm in the Taylorville district. Here for eighteen years she worked as farm wife and mother, and found time to take part in church work. She was president of the Primary Association for several years.

Four more children were born to them here, yet she was able to serve her fellow sisters as nurse and midwife, traveling to the scattered farm homes on the prairies of Canada when need called her out.

In 1920 they moved to Weiser, Idaho, and later to Butte Valley, California seeking a milder climate. Eliza continued her services as midwife in these places as long as her health permitted, and was also active in her church. She was secretary of the Sunday School for seven years in Butte Valley where she died 29 July 1930.

WILLIS COPLEN LITTLE is son of James Amasa and Annie Matilda (Baldwin) Little. He was born in Eagle Valley, Lincoln County, Nevada, 8 September 1869. When very young he moved with his mother, two sisters and a brother to Payson, Utah where they spent a year with grandmother, Elizabeth Cole Baldwin Cutler.

In 1871 the father, James A., was called to assist in the settlement of Kanab in southern Utah. Since that time Willis resided there.

On 22 January 1891 he was married to Addie Jackson in the St. George Temple. To them were born seven children, five are married with families of their own, the two youngest passed away in early manhood and womanhood.

Willis has been in the stock raising business all his life. He has been active and interested in civic affairs of his community, having served on the Kane County school board and with other members of the board instrumental in establishing the first high school in the county. He also served for several years on the Board of Commissioners for Kane County.

Willis and Addie have been married sixty-two years. Besides their surviving five children they have eighteen grandchildren and fourteen great grandchildren.

ADDIE JACKSON LITTLE

There is a place in old England, perhaps not so green and carefree as places of which the stories tell, but it is the birthplace of Addie Jackson, and she speaks only of her own life which was not very happy there. She can not say with the poet, "Backward, turn backward, O time in your flight make me a child again just for tonight." No not for one day nor one year would she wish to go back.

Addie Jackson was born in Kamsbottom, Lancastershire, England, 18 December 1870, a daughter of Joseph and Margaret (Robertson) Jackson.

Addie's mother had to go out to work at the hardest kind of work. And the children were left at home to get along as best they could.

One day a path opened which showed a way to escape and pointed to a better life for her children. Two "Mormon" missionaries came to her home and preached the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and the establishment of his Church in these latter days. She caught the light and believed, and began to make plans to take her children to Zion. This she did, sending one at a time.

Little Addie, only four years old, was the first to go. She went with Aunt Jane, her mother's oldest sister and her husband. Arriving in Utah they settled in Payson, but soon Aunt Jane became ill with mountain fever and died. The child was left alone to battle with life in a strange land. In time she found another home. Elder Charles D. Evans, a missionary in England wrote his family to care for her. She was taken into their home where she stayed for five to six years, but she never knew the love of a father and mother. When she was ten years old her mother came to Utah, and took her to Salt Lake City. This was another trial, for the little girl, for mother was now a perfect stranger to her.

From this time on Addie worked to support herself. When twelve years she went to Kanab, Utah and there continued to work in homes of large families often doing the work of a grown up girl.

Though she worked for others she was privileged to participate in church activities. The winter she lived with W. D. Johnson's family in Johnson she was secretary of the Y. L. M. I. A. The members were so few they held meetings jointly with the young men.

On the 22nd of January 1891 she married Willis Coplen Little in the St. George Temple. Since then she has been proud and happy in her own home rearing her family of seven children.

About 1907 she was asked to be a visiting teacher for the Relief Society. At that time she was discouraged with herself and it seemed impossible to accept, but her older girls insisted on her doing so, and it proved to be a great blessing to her. Zilpha Young was her first companion and from her she learned patience and forbearance in trials. Zilpha's heart was sorrowful at that time, but she was full of faith and so humble in her trouble that Addie's testimony of God's watchful care was greatly strengthened. For several years Addie enjoyed her work in this capacity. She sometimes marveled at the wonderful plan developed in the Church since first the Prophet Joseph Smith had organized the women of Nauvoo for the work of relief to the needy and comfort for the sorrowing among the Saints. Each month now every home is visited and a spiritual or educational message is left by the teachers who also learn of illness, or any distress and need in the home which the Society can alleviate. The teachers also invite the women to the weekly meetings where cultural and education lessons are given, and to the monthly work days where arts and crafts are taught and carried on as well as sewing.

Addie worked also in different positions in the Primary Association both as Ward and Stake worker; then in 1920 she was called by the Bishop to preside over the Relief Society, the greatest women's organization in the Church. She and her counselors began their work in this office with a high degree of humility and with prayers in their hearts.

During the eight years Addie was president, the organization grew till their meeting hall was too small. They then helped to build and furnish a Relief Society room in the new Ward Church. They sponsored the first Visiting Teachers convention held in Kanab, and otherwise expanded the work of the organization. During summer when their meetings were closed for vacation these officers each month took lunch and visited the old, the sick, or homebound and found great satisfaction in giving encouragement and comfort to the unfortunate.

From childhood through life Addie has had strong faith in prayer to help her in trouble and give her strength to carry on. She expresses her soul's faith in these lines.

I come to thee in prayer, morning light is breaking.
Lord hear my prayer and keep me through the day,
Teach me to do thy will when the world is waking.
I come to thee O Lord, at dawn to pray.

I come to thee when the mid-day sun is shining
And life is full of promises so fair;
The day is bright, each day has a silver lining.-
And still I come, I come to thee in prayer.

I come to thee, the sun is slowly sinking
Into the purple shadows of the west;
What sweet content- for me to just be thinking
Lord, I come to thee, come to eve to rest.

SUSAN ELIZABETH LITTLE ROBINSON - I was born January 6, 1871 in Eagle Valley, Lincoln County, Nevada. I came to Kanab, Utah with my parents June 1872 and this little spot has since been my home. I am proud to be a resident of this lovely little village nestled under the red rocks that bring such warmth and inspiration.

I have seen Kanab grow almost from the beginning. I well remember when the streets were covered with Rabbit Brush and very few of the city lots were fenced. Willows grew in abundance in the canyon and along the creek bed and many made use of them for building material - making thatched willow houses and fences. Many built shades around their homes of willows to make it more comfortable for their families while the shade trees were growing.

Water was very scarce when our people settled here - only a small stream reaching the town at night. I well remember when the water barrels had to be filled at night that we might have culinary water. Many complained because our leader had sent them to build homes where there was a scarcity of water, but Brigham Young had vision - he told them to go and stay and the water would come and I have lived to see this prophecy fulfilled many years ago.

I can never remember of going hungry, but if children were fed the types of food, the variety of food that the children of my day grew on they would think that they were very much undernourished, but we grew good strong bodies and minds - surely there is a kind Father who is mindful of his children who are willing to yield obedience.

Our religion as taught by the Prophet Joseph Smith has always been foremost in my life. I was present at the first organization of the Primary Association in Kanab. It was effected by Eliza R. Snow and Zina D. Young. I have served as an officer and teacher in Sunday School and M.I.A. I was Ward Relief Society President three years and then was Stake Relief Society president for eleven years. I was a farmer's wife and a Bishop's wife. I am the mother of nine children. My home was my heaven, my children were my joy. I loved my work both in my home and in the church. It has all been a blessing to me. It has helped me to appreciate life in all its grandness and beauty. With the blessings of wifedom and motherhood these are the greatest blessings that can come to woman.

I have always had a love for music and literature. I was an alto singer in Kanab choir for fifty years. My love of song and singing has brought to me comfort in times of sorrow. It has brought joy and cheer to my home and family.

I have had some experience in public speaking having spoken at eighteen funerals of my friends as well as many other occasions. I have had the privilege of speaking in the assembly at the St. George Temple. I have never refused to do anything I have been asked to do in this line, and it has greatly added to my faith. I have had many faith promoting experiences in my life and have been healed through the power of the priesthood.

After all these experiences in life we begin to feel that our useful days are nearly ended. There is still something we can do and our greatest interest now is gathering genealogy and doing temple work. For a number of years I have been interested in gathering the record of our dead, and since my husbands passing away on August 13, 1937, I have devoted my time largely to this and temple work.

I have served for five years as a missionary from Kanab Stake in the St. George Temple. This mission filled up the emptiness in my life as nothing else could and brought health and happiness to me. -- Susan E. Robinson died May 13, 1948 -- Kanab.

LAURA LITTLE, born 21 March 1873 at Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is the sixth child in a family of nine children of James Amasa and Annie Matilda (Baldwin) Little. She grew up in the village of Kanab and saw it grow, almost from its founding. Her parents were among the first residents, having settled there two years earlier.

Her father being a religious man, well educated for those days, and willing to give freely of his time and energies was called upon to give much to church service. He filled a two and one half year mission to Great Britain, and others in the United States, and did much writing and journal work for his church. So from the time Laura was old enough to work she helped her mother to earn the living for the family. Her mother wove rag carpets and the girls helped wind the shuttles and other work connected their with. She also did washing and ironing with which the girls helped.

On 5 October 1890 mother Little left Kanab to go to Mexico because of persecutions of the polygamists. Her husband and youngest daughter, Harriet, were at the time in Salt Lake City where he was writing up the life, sermons, and letters of his uncle, President Brigham Young. Laura went to Salt Lake City at this time to assist with this work by typing and keeping house for her father.

Laura remained with her father and sister through the winter and on 4 June 1891 was married in the Logan Temple to Fuller Stuard Broadbent. They returned to Kanab to make their home. There they lived with his parents who were old and Laura cared for them until they passed away. After their death she took up practical nursing which work she did for twenty years, and part of the time she ran a private maternity home.

Along with raising a family of nine children she had given time to church work. She had found joy in working and teaching the children of Sunday School and Primary Association, and later was President of this organization. She has also been a leader among women, being a teacher in the Relief Society.

Fuller Broadbent was a rather small man, but lively and active with a pleasing personality, a good neighbor and a good friend. Always considerate and helpful to others. For years he was town clerk and recorder at Kanab, also he was Ward Clerk and kept the church records.

Laura also was small of stature, but in older years became plump and stout. She was always jolly and good-natured with a hearty laugh that seemed ever ready to pop out. They have been happy in their home life and friends were always welcome in their home.

HARRIET LITTLE, (called Hattie) youngest daughter of James Amasa and Annie Matilda (Baldwin) Little was born 14 November 1874 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah. Her childhood years were spent in Kanab where she went to school and often had to stay out to wind shuttles for her mother who wove carpets. Her greatest enjoyment was horseback riding which often caused her mother great anxiety for her safety. In 1888 she went to Salt Lake City to live with her sister, Christina Nuttall. While there she attended school at the old Social Hall which stood on State Street between South Temple and First South streets. James E. Talmage was the principal.

Because of troublesome times for polygamist families her father came to Salt Lake City to work on the compilation of a history of Brigham Young, his uncle. Hattie kept house for her father and typed his work.

On the fifth of October 1890 her mother and two younger brothers, Malcolm and David, left Kanab to go to Mexico to make their home. The next summer she returned to take her daughter back; the father followed when his work was finished. Hattie and her mother arrived in Colonia Diaz 23 July 1891 just when the people were all excited and tense with apprehension. A Mexican, known to be friendly to the Americans had been shot in controversy over a local election at the Mexican town of Ascencion, five miles distant. The colonists feared a reprisal and kept guards posted for days. This homecoming was not reassuring to a young girl, and left a vague fear of what was to happen in the future.

For a year she lived with her parents and went to school. During this time she met James Jacobsen, the man she married on 22 July 1892, a few months before she was eighteen years. He was a stockman and spent much time riding the range looking after his cattle. Their homelife was that common to the community. They had their babies and were active in church work, happy and contented enjoying reasonable comforts of life.

In December 1897 with two of her children Hattie went to Utah to visit her brothers and sisters who she had not seen for eight years. The following March her husband and little Kenneth joined her in Kanab. The same month they travelled to Salt Lake City that they might enter the temple and there receive the blessings and ordinances that would unite and bind them as a family for eternity.

Not for long was the peaceful little village of Colonia Diaz to remain intact. As early as 1909 rebel bands began to gather here and there throughout the country, and in November 1910 broke into open revolution under the leadership of Francisco I. Madero. The Mexicans everywhere, who were usually polite and friendly, now became bold and insolent toward the colonists. Two townsmen were shot in cold blood, the general store robbed, and homes searched for fire arms. Hordes of rebels were approaching and the lives of the colonists were in jeopardy. The authorities of church colonies deemed it wise to temporarily evacuate the villages and take refuge in the United States until the crisis should pass.

The sun was just rising when this relayed message reached the Jacobson family at "Box" Pasture Ranch on 28 July 1912. Within a few hours they and all other townspeople were moving in a long caravan toward the nearest boundary line of New Mexico. Before evening they crossed the border and camped for night; without shelter in a drenching rain. They traveled northward to Hatchita. There the United States government issued tents and rations to the refugees. Whatever hope they had of returning was soon shattered when they learned that Colonia Diaz had been plundered and burned. They were homeless, where should they go? With government aid in transportation the refugees scattered through the western states.

Hattie and family remained at Columbus, New Mexico for a year where the husband found work. However, as social and educational conditions were unsatisfactory they went to Provo, Utah in 1913. Conditions from here on were not easy. The adjustment was difficult. Jacobson bought a dairy ranch in Piute County, Utah, and sold it again in a few years, driving his herd to House Rock Valley in northern Arizona in 1917. His cattle disposed of, he worked for a time in the stockyards of North Salt Lake, then decided to go into Mexico to buy up more cattle. Hattie and children moved from Provo to the ranch near Marysville then to Hurricane in Washington County, Utah. Here she lived in two tent houses, but was happy and useful in charge of the local Red Cross work. Her eldest son, Kenneth, was a volunteer in the armed services and lost his life overseas just before the signing of the Armistice.

She moved back to Provo where her tenth and last child was born 13 June 1919. In January of this year her husband and second son, Willis, had gone to El Paso, Texas, and on into Mexico. They bought cattle and lost them again to the rebel band of Villistas who arrested the Jacobsons and held them for a thousand dollar ransom. After facing a firing squad father and son were released (see details in Willis's story) and again went about buying cattle and succeeded in driving a herd over the border at Columbus, New Mexico. In 1920 Hattie and her four youngest children joined the husband there. Two daughters had married and two others on their own.

However, as feed for the cattle became scarce once more the family and the herd moved back into Mexico, stopping first at "Espia" the old custom house and lookout, now abandoned, then on to La Ascencion and Ojo Frederico where they rested the cattle while they fed on the abundant grass. The journey continued to Dublan, a "Mormon" colony maintained through the revolution. Hattie lived here in a crude shack on the flat three miles from town, making cheese which was stored in a basement in town.

Unable to sell the cattle for cash, Jacobson accepted lumber as payment which he in turn sold to the Pierce Lumber Company in Ciudad Juarez.

In May 1922 the family returned to Salt Lake City where he tried different ventures in making a living. Running an apartment in the city was not best for growing boys. The farm was good for the boys, but proved unsuccessful. He finally went into poultry business in West Jordan which he carried on ten years till his death 6 June 1938. Hattie sold the business and for some years lived around with her children. Then bought a duplex in the new Rose Park edition in Salt Lake City.

She had been interested in church work and participated to the extent feasible with the many moves and changes in her life. In Colonia Diaz she was President of the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association. She has worked in Relief Society in different places and been an expert in quilt making, so much a part of Relief Society work day. She is also interested in genealogy and temple work. The winter of 1952 she made a trip to Mesa, Arizona to visit a blind sister-in-law, and to Nogales to visit her brother Malcolm, whom she had not seen for twenty years.

MALCOLM LITTLE, born Kanab, Utah, November 14, 1876. His middle name "Cutler" was later adopted. In November, 1890 with his parents, he settled in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico, where during the winter months he went to school under John M. Mills. He worked in mines during the summers, where he learned Spanish. He went to Provo, Utah, in 1894 and entered the B. Y. Academy, where he studied two years, then taught school for two years, returning to the Academy in 1898. He attended Stanford University from 1901 to 1903. He lived in Peru, South America, the year following, where he took up the study of Peruvian law. He returned to Mexico in 1904 and entered a law office in Mexico City. On examination he was admitted to the Bar of Arizona in 1913 and the year following was admitted to the Bar of the State of Sonora, Mexico, and to the Bar of California two years later. He continued to practice international law, with special attention to American investments in Mexico. At 81 (1958) he lives in Tucson, Arizona, in association with his son, Malcolm C. Little, Jr., of Mexico City, and John M. Little, another son, of Tucson.

DAVID BALDWIN LITTLE, the youngest son of James Amasa and Annie Matilda (Baldwin) Little was born the 13th of October 1878 in Kanab, Kane, Utah. He was named after his maternal grandfather who lost his life in the Cholera plague at St. Louis, Missouri in 1849. His mother crossed the ocean in a sailing vessel and pulled a handcart across the plains when a girl of seventeen. His father having spent much time in missionary work for his church had not been able to accumulate much of material means. David's birthplace was a small adobe house which still stands today. In his early years he knew want and the need of common necessities.

About 1890 because of persecution of polygamists his mother moved to Colonia Diaz, Mexico taking her two youngest children with her. David being about ten years. Here he received his elementary education and later attended the B. Y. U. in Provo, Utah.

In his early years he was employed as a cowboy to help with the roundups and branding of calves, to ride the range and look after the cattle that roamed over the open country before the land was taken up and fenced by private owners. He acquired cattle of his own and began payments on a pasture jointly owned by his brother-in-law, James Jacobson.

When only nineteen years old he married Hettie Maud Acord who could ride a horse and drive a team as well as her brother, and in her girlhood days it was not unusual to see her drive out alone in the morning and come back at evening with a wagon load of mesquite firewood gathered from the open country. They had two children, a little daughter and a son. David and Hettie were very happy and congenial in their family life, but too soon bitter loss struck their circle. Little dark eyed Thelma, the apple of her father's eyes, was called away in death, the 6th of May 1900, and less than three months later the mother followed the daughter. She died 21 July 1900.

Leaving his baby son in care of grandmother Acord and Aunt Cecelia, David went back to Utah to visit his brothers and sisters at Kanab, and enrolled in the B. Y. Academy in Provo. He returned to Mexico, and in 1905 with his brother, Malcolm took employment with the Guadalupe Mining Company in the state of Durango. In 1907 Malcolm left, and went to the city of Mexico but David remained. His work was to run an electric power plant and pumping station which furnished light, power, and water for the miners five miles distant and a thousand feet above in the mountains. The plant was situated on the north bank of the Nazas River. A stonethrow back was the ranchhouse. The place was named "La Cabeza de San Jose" meaning the head of St. Joseph, for short called LaCabeza. It was a lonely spot no other house or white residence within two and a half miles. The few native employees lived in a group of tents a little to the west. David's work comprised the hiring of Mexican workers needed, and contracting for the cutting and hauling of wood for the plant. During hauling season this wood was brought in on the backs of burrows - twenty five to thirty donkeys in a train, and three to four trains a day. The wood was piled in cord ricks and left to dry in the sun.

For pleasure and to pass time he kept a garden and furnished fresh vegetables to the mines through the season. Besides this he ran a small commissary for the natives of the surrounding ranches. Later he also engaged in farming, using native labor, growing chiefly corn and beans. Because of his understanding and use of the Mexican language, Mr. Alexander Baring, the President, and A. E. May, the manager of the company relied on him to make many of their business deals.

Each year at Christmas time he had a vacation and went home to Colonia Diaz. In 1907 he met, as if for the first time, a girl who had grown up in the community but somewhat younger and remembered only as a child. Harriet Fredericksen had returned from Provo, Utah where she had attended the B. Y. University for three years and was now teaching in the village school. They were mutually attracted and after correspondence through the year were married on his next vacation home. They went to El Paso, Texas to be married on January 2, 1909.

LaCabeza took on a new atmosphere. The bachelor's quarters was livened by the touch of a woman's hand and neighborly sociability. And when school was out and his young son, Abe, came to live with them David used to say, "Now this is home." It brought peace and contentment to him which he had not known through his many lonely years. He loved children and wanted a family and often said, "I want a brown eyed baby girl," but when the blue-eyes blond arrived her acceptance was whole-hearted.

David was tall and handsome with brown eyes and waving dark hair. He had a strong tenor voice and loved to sing and was a prize winner in dancing. He was affectionate and sincere. And in business, honest and above board. He wrote in a letter to his wife that while he had been away the manager of the company had thoroughly checked all his affairs and finding no signs of graft gave him a warm welcome back.

It was at LaCabeza in February 1911 that David met his fatal accident. A fractuous mule tried to run away. A broken rib and torn ligaments turned to cancerous growth. Because of the Madero revolution his wife and children were not with him. He was alone. In October, before the war broke out, his wife and baby had gone home to visit grandmother in Colonia Diaz. The boy had been placed in a boarding school in the city of Chihuahua. Because of war conditions they could not return as they had planned. All means of communication were disrupted. Telephone and Telegraph lines were out, mail was held up and delayed because of railway troubles. No comforting letter from his loved ones came through. Though he wrote again and again there was no response and he did not know that his wife was held in suspense, for none of his messages reached her. Though Mrs. Louise Baring and Mrs. Mary Dewey, and company employees did all they could for him it proved fatal. He arrived at the sister's hospital in El Paso, Texas in May, but already he was beyond medical skill. His wife was with him there his last two weeks, and alone smiled and gave encouragement though she had been told he could not recover. Through his insistence on knowing the truth the doctor revealed the situation during the last week and for a few days man and wife understood and talked freely of what was in their hearts and came closer together because of their mutual faith in a life together hereafter. He died 9 June 1911 and is buried in the Evergreen Cemetery, El Paso, Texas.

HARRIET WILHELMINE FREDERICKSEN, one of eight children, a daughter of Carl Anton and Karen Marie (Jensen) Fredericksen was born in a small log house on the south side of the creek in Castle Dale, Emery County, Utah, on Saturday 31 May 1884. Her parents were emigrants from Denmark converts to Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They had left their homeland and all they had known and held dear to prove their sincerity in the new faith. Her father was an expertly trained mechanic and builder - a millwright by trade. In 1886 he built a fine two-story house on Main street, but only three years later he gave it up and moved to Mexico where he could live in peace with his families; for he had entered plural marriage and had three wives.

Here in the small colony of Colonia Diaz Harriet grew to womanhood. She remembered well her childhood fear of the brown-skinned Mexicans with their long pointed sticks to prod the oxen on the two wheeled carts loaded with sorghum cane being taken to the molasses mill, their strange language was awesome to her. When she entered school she began to speak English and was daily mimicked and laughed at by her comrades because of her foreign accent. Outside her immediate family she had no relatives, no uncles, no aunts, nor cousins. She felt robbed of associations common to other children. She was an eager listener when her mother, in loneliness, talked of her native country and people. Perhaps this lonely childhood has had some influence on her interest in gathering family history in later years. It was getting acquainted with those she had longed to know when young.

She attended the village school, and worked on the farm as did most children in those days. Because of her mother's poor health she being the oldest daughter much responsibility of the housework fell on her young shoulders. Under the influence of two of her teachers, Charles and Erasmus Fillerup, who had come from Utah, and were graduates from the Brigham Young Academy, she acquired a strong desire to attend that school. But when at the age of fourteen years her father died she felt that her dream of going away to school was hopeless. There was work for all the family just to make a living. As the years went by her desire to go to school would not be quenched; so with her mother's permission she went to El Paso, Texas to work to earn means to take her to Provo, Utah and to school. On a like venture was Juniata Johnson, her dearest girlhood chum, and a favorite niece of her husband. They worked their way through college became teachers. Harriet began her career in the elementary school of Colonia Diaz, Mexico, her home town.

Then after being widowed she went to Utah where she taught continuously for thirty two years, the first and second grades being her specialty. She loved the little children and felt that she was helping to lay a firm foundation in self reliance which would carry them through higher education, and make for fine man and womanhood. She taught school one year in Loa, Wayne County, three years in Kanab, the old home of her husband and where several of his brothers and sisters still lived, then four years in Jordan District, Salt Lake County. The remaining years were filled in Granite School District, same county. For the most part they were happy years for she loved her work and gave her best to it. She has felt repaid each time a fine, successful young man or woman has greeted her with the title of "Teacher", and said, "I was one of your First Grade pupils. "

Her retirement in 1944 was a sore trial, for she had loved her work, and now had nothing to hold on to, no home, no work, her only child married and far away. She indeed felt alone and useless. Her health had been failing - she was nervous and uncertain of what lay before her. But she had firm faith in a kind Heavenly Father's care. She knew he had work for all earth children if only they would follow the call. That fall she began in earnest her studies in genealogical research at which she had dabbled for some years past. She soon felt competent to take private orders for research in Danish genealogy, having revived the language through reading and study. This gave her some income to add to the small teacher's pension. As secretary of the Little Family Organization she became interested in her husband's genealogy which led up to the writing of this Family History.

From childhood on she had been taught the principles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and has been active in many capacities through the years. She began as teacher in the Primary Association, was Gleaner leader and President of the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association, and a Sunday School teacher. Since retirement she has been a member and a Visiting Teacher of the Relief Society - an International Women's Association. For the past six years she has been Secretary-Treasurer for the local Murray Third Ward. Then she resigned on account of failing eyesight.

On 2 January 1909 she was married in El Paso, Texas to David Baldwin Little. Judge Albert Eylar pronounced the ceremony. Their home was a ranch house in the mountains of the state of Durango, Mexico where the husband worked for the Guadalupe Mining Company. La Cabeza was a lonely spot, the nearest white neighbors being two and a half, and five miles distant, and the nearest town eight to ten miles, but with the husband always near at the powerhouse she had no thought of being alone. Together they rode horseback over the hills and through the canyons, to El Oro to do some shopping, or to call on a neighboring ranch. Sometimes a picnic in a picturesque spot on the river gave social contacts.

When her little daughter, Junie Etta, was born life seemed complete. But already before the child was one year old rumblings of the approaching revolution were heard, though not understood at the time. In September mother and daughter went home to visit grandmother at Colonia Diaz in the northern part of Chihuahua, but she was never to return, nor see her husband again till on his death bed. War broke out in November 1910, and every man was needed at his post. American women and children at the Guadalupe were shipped to the United States for safety. All avenues of communication were cut off, and for months through that long winter no word came through to break the strain of anxiety. By the end of February the husband met with a fatal accident which took his life three months later. He died 9 June 1911 at Hotel Dieu, the Sisters Hospital in El Paso, Texas. He is buried there in the Evergreen Cemetery.

The following winter Harriet lived with her mother and taught school her second year in Colonia Diaz. The rebel forces had moved northward, and one day a skirmish was fought in the street directly in front of her home. The bullets whizzed past in all directions, but the house was spared and no one was hurt, though she saw a wounded soldier carried off. Because of war, marauding bands took license to plunder. The peaceful little colony had lost its security. That year Harriet slept with a gun under her pillow and was thankful each day that she had not been forced to use it.

In July 1912 a friend and benefactor of school days, Estella Knight Biersach, sent for Harriet to come to Provo. There for a short time she had a good home for herself and child. 28 July of the same year the Mormon Colonists were forced to leave their homes and possessions to go to the United States because they wished to remain neutral and not take up arms. They had hoped to return soon, but never did. Colonia Diaz was sacked and burned. From that time on Harriet felt there was no place she could call home. The inhabitants scattered through the Western States, and the Colony has been deserted. Her teaching took her to different localities and she lost a sense of permanency. This has been a setback to her happiness in her older years, but she is trying to make the best of it.

The following recommendations have been preserved and show her rating as a teacher.

Kanab, Utah
May 29, 1914

To Whom it may concern:

This will certify that Mrs. Harriet F. Little taught the First Grade in the Kanab school, Kane County, last year. Both patrons and school officers are unanimous in their esteem of Mrs. Little and her work. We regard her as a strong, capable teacher.

Signed: Sincerely,
David D. Rust
County Supt.

Sandy, Utah
Nov. 29, 1920

To Whom it May Concern:

This is to certify that Mrs. Harriet F. Little taught in the Jordan School District under my supervision during the three school years, 1917 - 1920.

Mrs. Little did very consistent and satisfactory work this entire period. She is industrious, conscientious and anxious to succeed. Her scholarship is ample for elementary work. Her discipline is good and her influence upon the school children is of the very best type.

Signed: Sincerely yours,
D. C. Jensen
Supt. of Schools

A Principal's rating - spring of 1922

Mrs. Little is a very skillful teacher, especially in the First Grade, could handle other Primary grades equally skillful however. She is an earnest and sincere worker, always a reason for doing, or not doing. Her room shows that real work is being done, nothing is done for show. Her work is neat, Pedagogy is good, and suggestions always given consideration. Her standard is very high.

Signed: Oliver T. Jensen
Principal Woodstock School

Three points in the Principal's rating have especially given her satisfaction,

"Always a reason for doing, or not doing," that shows careful planning and understanding of her work, so necessary to success.

"Nothing is done for show." That indicates she was reserved, honest, and practical, more concerned with her efforts for the pupil's good than for the impression she was making on others. She has felt that her success as a teacher should show through and in the results of her work rather than words and display.

"Suggestions always given consideration" shows she recognized authority of those over her, and was willing to cooperate and accept experiences of others.

She has been a student of nature as well as of children, Her favorite flower, the wild rose, expresses her ideals - SIMPLICITY and SINCERITY.

JOHN TULLIDGE LITTLE, the son of James Amasa and Elizabeth (Tullidge) Little was born 22 January 1869 in Eagle Valley, Nevada. His parents were both pioneers of Southern Utah, they had accepted the call from President Brigham Young to help settle and build up that part of the state. John knew and endured the hardships typical of that period and had the privilege of watching the developement of Kanab from a mere isolated hamlet to the progressive town of today.

He attended the school of A. W. Brown and later a night school conducted by his own father. When a young man he filled a two year mission to the Southern States for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. During his life he worked at different trades, carpenter, butcher and baker. Also some mercantile business. He took interest in public affairs of Kanab. He served as councilman on the Town Board for two terms and in 1919 when the flu epidemic struck Kanab, he was made a member of the Board of Health and served as a quarantine officer.

On December 21, 1905 he married Pearl Jackson at Johnson, Kane, Utah. They have six children. His death occurred suddenly on December 27, 1929 of heart failure after having attended a party in the ward amusement hall.

EDWARD WILLIAM LITTLE, the second son of James Amasa and Elizabeth Tullidge Little was born 11 October 1872 at Kanab, Kane, Utah. Here he grew up knowing the privations and struggles of pioneer life. He was of a religious turn of mind and proud to say he had been ordained a Deacon at the age of Twelve. A deacon is the first office in the Aaronic Priesthood of the L. D. S. Church. And at twenty six years he had been or - dained a Seventy whose office it is to proclaim the gospel of Jesus Christ, and to bear witness to the Divinity of Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior.

In September of 1898 he was called on a mission to the Samoan Islands where he spent four years living up to his office as a Seventy. Upon his return in 1902 he was made assistant Stake Superintendent of Sunday Schools and three years later he became Stake Superintendent which position he held for nine years.

In 1919 he moved his family to Virginia, Idaho where he served as Stake Chorister for 6 years. He moved to Eden, Idaho in 1929 was made Bishop of the Ward, and served in this capacity fifteen years.

While in Kanab he served as Kane County recorder, county assessor for eight years and county treasurer. In Eden he was mayor of the village several years and justice of the peace and city judge at the time of his death. His occupation was farming. January 3 1905 he married Maude Roundy at St. George, Utah. They have 8 children. He died 28 November 1940 at Eden, Idaho, age 77 years.

MAUDE ROUNDY LITTLE

MAUDE ROUNDY LITTLE, daughter of Hyrum Koyle and Anne (Chase) Roundy, was born 17 April 1884 at Ranch, Kane County, Utah. She spent most of her childhood days in this place about thirty-five miles north of Kanab. At that time it was composed of a store, a Post office and a schoolhouse. The farm houses were scattered some distance apart. The place has grown to a village and now called Alton. Mr. Roundy later moved to Kanab where the daughter met her future husband, Edward W. Little. She was an helpmate to him in every way and encouraged and aided his activities and interests in church work, herself taking part. While at Virginia, Idaho she served four years in the presidency of the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association. At Eden she was set apart as President of the Relief Society and served for fifteen years. She was a faithful worker and found pleasure in following the teachings of Jesus, in bringing relief, comfort and help to her fellow sisters.

FRANK LITTLE third son of James Amasa and Mary Elizabeth (Tulledge) Little was born 29 March 1875 during the early settlement of Kanab, Kane County, Utah. As early as 1865 an attempt was made to settle Kanab, but the Indians prevailed at that time.

Living conditions in those early days were unbelievably poor. Frank's father had three wives and many children, and besides spent much time in missionary and other work for the church. Frank's mother was a convert from England reared in a comfortable home and educated in literature and music. She was entirely unfitted to cope with pioneer life and poverty. She never did adjust to the situation, never learned to keep house and to cook, but rather prided herself on being better educated and of higher birth than her associates, which added to the misery of her family.

They lived first in a wagon box, later in a room made of upright post with willows woven between them. It had a dirt roof and floor. The nearest railroad was over 300 miles away, and there were practically no roads. It was very difficult to get supplies, even the necessities of life, and they often went hungry.

Frank and his brothers, Edward and John had little formal schooling before they were grown men, but being an apt student Frank read and studied a great deal. He had a wonderful imagination.

After his marriage to Elizabeth (Bessie) Findlay in 1897 he and his wife attended the University of Utah in the summer time and taught school in different towns in Kane County and in Moccasin, Arizona during the winter months. For a number of years Frank was a member of the Kanab School Board.

In 19-- they homesteaded 360 acres of land on the "Johnson Run" in Arizona where they raised alfalfa, alfalfa seed, and cattle. About 1926 the ranch was sold, and the Littles moved to Salt Lake City where Frank learned the barber trade. Here he managed a barber shop and beauty parlor in Beason building on Second South and Main Streets.

After a few years he disposed of this business and returned to Kanab. There he built the first auto court in that locality. This business he managed for twenty-two years until his health failed. A year and one half later he passed away at the age of 78 years, leaving a wife, two sons, and eight grandchildren.

CLARE HOWE OLIPHANT Sr. was born in Kanab, Utah, February 21, 1888, son of Charles Henry and Lucinda (Judd) Oliphant. He was the tenth of thirteen children, sometimes termed by his mother as her "tithing child".

When he was fourteen years old his father, who was the first nurseryman in the state of Utah, died and the family was left to support itself as best it could. This they did by farming, hauling lumber, logs, etc., and the brothers had ownership of a coal mine in Emery County, which they worked. He spent most of his childhood and youth in Orangeville, Utah whence his father had moved the family in 18 because of the abundance of water there. The home site was a plot of land in town which the father had planted to all types and varieties of fruit trees, berries, and a fine garden.

His mother was a cripple for the last 22 years of her life, a victim of arthritis, and spent many of her forced hours of inactivity in a wheelchair knitting, and reading to her children; she made a knitted lace bedspread for each of her children for a wedding present.

Clare tells of an incident which occurred when he was about 15 or 16 years old. His elder brother, John, had gone to Provo to work, and since none of the family had seen him for sometime they hitched up the team and buggy and set out to visit him. The second night out they camped in a little valley called "Sheeps Valley" in central Utah. It was an attractive camping spot, with green grass and a little mountain stream running down through it. They pitched camp under a big tree there, and retired for the night. Along about midnight the mother wakened the boys and told them to move camp. They were sleepy and reluctant to heed, and besides didn't see any reason for it, but they finally rose and moved the team and buggy and equipment up the road to a small plateau a short distance away, and went back to sleep again. During the night there was a wild thunderstorm, but it was not until the next morning when they went for water that they realized lightning had struck. A dead mule was lying on the spot where their camp had been the night before.

In the fall of 1917 a pretty young woman came to Orangeville to teach school, and at the opening of the Teacher's Institute Clare first met Martha Hiatt. They both had fine solo voices and had been asked to sing on the program. Their association at this time was brief, but their feelings ran deep. The school she had come to teach in was not ready, so she took a position at Pleasant Grove, Utah. In October of the same year he was called into the army to serve in World War I. So their courtship was conducted mostly by correspondence.

They planned their wedding for the end of May 1918 when he had a convalescent furlough of 30 days after a hernia operation. However, this furlough was cut short; so they were married 16 May 1918 in the Latter-day Saints Temple at Salt Lake City, Utah.

In their married life they made many moves. They both taught school in the little town of Bluff in southern Utah. They were both active socially and culturally to the extent her health would permit. She had a heart condition that had been left from childhood sickness. While they lived in Salt Lake City they were members of the Tabernacle Choir and sang with that group in its early broadcasts for about six years. They moved to San Diego, California, tried Missouri, and finally settled in Bremerton, Washington, where Martha passed away.

MARTHA GERTRUDE HIATT was born 30 August 1892 in Payson, Utah daughter of James Franklin Sr. and Gertrude (Mitchel) Hiatt. Martha was the first of five children. When she was a small child her father was called on a mission for the L. D. S. Church to the Southern States; he spent most of his time in the Carolinas, where his family had been located at the time they joined the L. D. S. Church and emigrated to Utah. She was too small to remember him when he returned, and pulled on her mother's skirt and wanted to know "who that man is, Mamma?" Her childhood and adolescent years were spent in Payson in the family home which her father had built shortly after their marriage.

When she finished high school she determined to go on to the University and get a Normal Certificate and teach school. Her first teaching position was in her home town in the Peteetneet school. It was a difficult school, consisting of the mentally retarded or delinquent youngsters of the lower grades, and several teachers had already failed at the job. She put all her effort and thought into it, and with the aid and co-operation of the school superintendent she was able to make a success of that first school. By her own statement, teaching was never so hard after that.

She taught school in Payson for five years, after her second year she went back to the University and secured a Life Diploma to teach. Her next position was at Preston, Idaho where she had been offered the job. After 2 years there she went to Orangeville where she met her husband, Clare Howe Oliphant. They had 24 years of married life and eight children who all grew to maturity except a pair of twins who died at birth.

Martha taught various classes and vocal groups in her church activities. A Relief Society choir under her direction was the nuclear unit of the later expanded and now Church-wide Singing Mothers.

Hard work, cares and anxiety of the depression years left their mark on her health, and she was taken away while still in her middle years of life. She died the 13 December 1942 at Bremerton, Washington. She is buried in the Mountain View Cemetery near Silverdale, Washington.

Clare Oliphant was married the second time 2 March 1946 to Thelma Cottam in the St. George L. D. S. Temple. She had four children by the previous marriage who were sealed to them.

Clare has served his church in various capacities throughout his life. He was Ward Clerk for four years while living in Salt Lake City, and was president and advisor of various Priesthood Quorums, as well as serving with the genealogical committee in different Wards. He has also been active as a temple worker. He holds the office of High Priest in the Melchizedek Priesthood.

Because the damp climate of Washington was unfavorable to an asthmatic condition of his wife, Thelma, he moved his family to Phoenix, Arizona where they now reside at 8 South 18th Avenue.

LOUISE BELL MCMILLAN, oldest daughter of Malcolm and Harriet Louisa Jane (Vanderhoef) McMillan was born 26 June 1862 in Adams Township, Lucas County, Ohio. She grew up on a farm homesteaded by her father just out of Toledo. It was about a mile south of the old McMillan farm where her grandmother had lived for nearly forty years. Louise remembered and loved grandmother, Nancy Little McMillan, who came to live with them in September 1872 in their new house just built. That fall Uncle Daniel McMillan came to visit them, and they had pictures taken for him. Just a year later grandmother passed away. Louise had been ill with St. Vitus Dance; so she was sent away to stay with an aunt, and when she returned grandmother was gone.

Louise received her schooling in the district school and graduated at Toledo, 25 June 1880. A cousin, Anna Johnson, graduated just two days earlier at Perrysburg, Ohio. They both became teachers. In March 1886 the family moved to Winfield, Kansas. In June, Louise, with a group of teachers went to Topeka to attend the National Education Convention. She tried to locate Uncle Daniel, but failed to find him.

On the 13th of June 1889 at Monte Vista, Colorado she married Warren Cyrus Buell. At the time he had a bookstore there, but soon went into Missionary work for the Presbyterian church. In the fall of 1893 he took his family to the little town of San Pablo, Colorado, twenty miles from an "American" woman or child. For four years his wife braved the loneliness and inconveniences of this mission station, assisting her husband with the teaching of the school and rearing her four children. Two of them were born in that town. In 1897 when Mr. Buell decided to become an ordained minister, the family moved to Omaha, Nebraska, where he entered the Presbyterian Theological Seminary. After two years financial conditions were seemingly an obstacle to the pursuit of his goal. Then it was that Louise came to the rescue by returning alone with her four children to the long adobe mission house in San Pablo to teach the Mexican children herself for a year, until her husband could graduate from the seminary in the spring of 1900.

The first church to which Mr. Buell was assigned was at Taos, New Mexico, where he was ordained in the fall of 1900, and where the two youngest children were born. Reverend Buell worked in different places in New Mexico- pioneered the Presbyterian Church in that field. In 1908 when his health failed the family came to Las Cruces where they acquired a house and small farm just north of Mesilla Park.

While here during twenty years some member of their family was in attendance at the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. For 16 years Louise was an instructor in mathematics for veterans of World War I. She taught mathematics from sixth grade to Trigonometry depending on where each man's education had stopped. Her daughters remember the indomitable spirit displayed by this pioneer-type woman as she set out each morning of these many years driving in the little open buggy through rain or snow, or biting cold to her daily task. She was patient and persevering, and accepted hardships easily. She was undemonstrative and reserved in many ways except when she was teaching, in that she showed her ability and skill. She loved teaching above everything else, and perhaps she was happiest in the pursuit of those tasks.

Reverend Buell preached at Elephant Butte 1909-1911 but never accepted a full charge again. He died 9 November 1922. Louise died 5 December 1948 at Las Cruces. They have six children all living at his death except their oldest son who died in the service of his country in World War I.

He moved with his parents to Keene, New Hampshire when a lad of six years. Here he received his schooling and worked at various occupations during vacations and out of school hours. One of the first jobs was street lamp-lighter. He carried a can of naphtha which was fuel for a torch to light the primitive open burner gas lamps along the streets. He worked for a furniture company one summer and the last two years in school was employed nights and Sundays by the Keene Telephone exchange.

When George Fred was seventeen years old the "Sentinal Company" found itself in need of an apprentice and he applied for the job. There were other boys who coveted the place, but William H. Prentiss, editor of the Sentinel, who was also a director of the telephone company, had observed the young man's work at the telephone office, he lent his influence and landed the job for him which he was to hold for half a century. Arrangements to start upon his apprenticeship were made by his father, George O. Little. He was to receive $14.00 a month for a start. The young man got a genuine surprise on his first pay-day when he found $20.00 in his pay envelope. He figured it was a mistake, but inquiry at the office disclosed no mistake. His work this first month had warranted the raise. During his fifty years of service he saw the Sentinel grow from a weekly edition to a daily paper. He saw the motive power change from water, to steam and then to electric and the installation of linotype. Step by step he advanced and grew with the work receiving one promotion after another. In 1893 when the company moved into their new building, Little was made foreman of the newspaper press room and took charge of the new style press. In 1933 as a testimonial of esteem from the concern and in honor of Little's long and continuous services he was given a complimentary dinner and presented with hand-drawn parchment scroll 11 by 16 inches which bears an illuminated decorative border and lettering in gold and colors. The design includes portraits of famous members of the printing craft: Gutenberg, the first printer to use cast types; Garamond and Caslon, famous type designers; and Franklin the pioneer of printing in America.

George Fred retired as Dean of employees, but continued work on a part time basis for another five years. He took his retirement hard, something went out of him as he walked away with his last pay envelope.

196-D George Fred Little with his Bicycle

It was seen in his looks, in his walk, in the tone of his voice. For a number of years he had been motor vehicle examiner, and a thorough one. He continued this work, but his heart was with the Sentinel. Such loyalty and such devotion to one's work, to one's employers, are fundamental in true New England character. Besides his work he took time out to serve his community as city Councilman and was a member of that body when electricity replaced the gas lamps on the streets.

He was married on his 24th birthday, 27 Mar. 1890 to Grace Adelaide Isham of Keene, New Hampshire, who died 6 August 1928. They have four children. She had been an active member of Grace Methodist Church, and active in various organizations including Ladies Aid Society, of which she was treasurer for many years. She was a member of the order of Eastern Star and Elks Ladies Club.

He married the second time 20 June 1936, Grace Buswell, widow of Frank E. Briggs. She was born 18 February 1875 at Lempster, Sullivan County, New Hampshire, daughter of Clarence L. and Ella (Huntoon) Buswell.

Mr. Little was an active member of the Elks and Masonic fraternities. He took delight in visiting his farm and also invested in timberland and other real estate and was considered an authority on such. One of his personality traits was a sense of good humor and he was always ready to match stories with his friends. George Fred Little, former pressman for the Sentinel Printing Company for over fifty years died 25 November 1940 at his home, 21 Water Street, Keene, New Hampshire. Out of respect to its former employee the Sentinel closed all departments and offices for the period of the funeral which was conducted by the Reverend J. Tremayne Copplestone, pastor of Grace Methodist Church. Burial was in the Greenlawn cemetery.

EDWIN SOBIESKI LITTLE was born in Salt Lake City, Salt Lake County, Utah, 5 November 1862, the son of George E. and Martha (Taylor) Little, the oldest of fourteen children. During his youth he lived with the family in Payson, Charleston, Wallsberg, and Salt Lake City. Here he received his education and training. He was employed by the Pacific Express, and Clawson Wholesale Dry Goods Companies at Salt Lake City, and with his uncle, owner of the Joseph E. Taylor Mortuary Company.

On a picnic in City Creek canyon Ed first met Zina Wallace. Their friendship and courtship grew from that date, and they were married 8 December 1886 in the Logan Temple. They lived in Salt Lake City.

In the fall of 1888 Ed Little and Spencer Clawson having heard of the wonderful game hunting in Teton Valley, Idaho, traveled the three hundred miles for a vacation and exploration trip. So impressed was Ed by this new undeveloped paradise that he returned next spring and filed on land. It happened that the winter had been mild, and the spring was early. Teton Basin was luxuriant with rich, green grass and wild hay. Crystal streams of water were filled with fish, and game and wild fowl were abundant.

Back in Salt Lake City the young wife sang happily at her housecleaning, pausing occasionally to admire her canary that also sang in its cage, among her pretty house plants, or stopped to care for her two little boys, Curtis and Spencer. Her house was spic and span when the husband arrived with the news that they were going to move. Curtains came down, wedding presents and furniture were packed and stored, for the time being left with her folks.

Ed was jubilant, but Zina with two babies was doubtful of the big undertaking. She was going where there were few women, no doctors, no social life nor conveniences; she was leaving a dear family circle and friends and the 17th Ward where she had sung many solos in church, and enjoyed the spiritual atmosphere of fellow members of her own faith. Nevertheless, a faithful companion, she relied on the judgement of her husband and faced the future.

On the 12th of May 1889 they left Salt Lake City. He drove his large team of horses the full distance, she traveled by train to Market Lake (now Idaho Falls), then seventy five miles by wagon. They settled on ground by the Teton River in Haden Community (later called Tetonia). Here they established themselves for the remainder of their lives, and he became a leader in the great work of developing a new country. There were schools, churches, buildings to be erected, and canals, ditches, roads, and railroads to be constructed, all as public enterprises, and Ed was one of the foremost to give his support and energies. On his own farm there were miles of fence to make with posts and poles brought from the forests. There were large corrals to build for roundup time when the cattle were branded. There was wild hay to cut with horses drawn mowing machines. The land was developed, lived on, and titles acquired from the U.S. government.

Many hardships were endured by these pioneer people. Until 1912 when the first railroad came into the valley all groceries and other commodities had to be hauled in by wagon and teams, all farm produces for market had to be freighted out in like manner.

Mr. Little was a public figure for many years. He was chosen twice to represent the valley as County Commissioner, from 1917 to 1932 he was the County Assessor. He took great interest in politics and served the people well. He was the first Stake Sunday School Superintendent in 1889, was Presiding Elder of Haden community till made Bishop of Haden Ward. As Bishop he served eleven years. In 1909 he was chosen a member of the High Council in Teton Stake, a position he held almost until his death. He knew the Gospel of Jesus Christ well, and gave many public addresses in church capacity; he spoke many funeral sermons, and administered to the sick.

Above all he was a wonderful husband and father, he was always kind, understanding, and generous to his family. If he disapproved of anything, or anybody he plainly told them so.

On 1 November 1937 Ed and his wife went to Hanford, California to spend the winter with their son, Harvey, but the climate was damp, in March they both became ill with pneumonia. After three days illness Ed died on Saturday 28 March 1938. His Body was shipped home to Driggs, Idaho where impressive funeral services were held on April first. The wife was seriously ill in California being cared for by her son Harvey and daughter Marie. It was six weeks before she was able to return to her home. She lived with her children another four years and passed away 7 November 1941. She is buried in the Clawson Cemetery beside her husband.

At a party held at the home of his niece, Nora Wallace, some months before Edwin Little's death there were seventy-five members of the George E. Little family present to honor him. He was the oldest and had been a "Big" brother to his sisters and their families who often came to him for advice and help. Nine of his own children were living, only one, a daughter, Edith, had preceded him in death.

CLARA ANN LITTLE, the second child of George Edwin and Martha (Taylor) Little was born 17 April 1864 in Salt Lake City, Utah. In 1867 the family moved to the Feramorz Little Dairy Farm at Granger - south and west of the city, there they lived for a few years then a move southward and back north again to Tooele, Utah in 1876.

On the 10th of January 1884 Clara Ann married Joseph Gurnsey Brown Jr. in Salt Lake City where they made their home. The husband was a member of the City Police Force. A daughter and a son came to brighten their home. The Gospel was dear to their hearts, and the future bright, for this happy couple and their children until the Fall of 1886 when Joseph Gurnsey contracted pneumonia and became very ill. The following spring Grandfather Brown moved the family south to Kanab, Utah in a covered wagon. On the slow and tedious journey Clara Ann was alert to the sick man's comfort and tried to keep springs and mattress in place so as to cushion the shock of rough roads, and thereby ease his pains. After a lingering illness the husband died 23 July 1887.

Clara Ann lived with her husband's family until 17 October 1888 when she married Ebenezer Brown, a younger brother of Joseph Gurnsey. In this union she had seven children all born in Kanab except the last one, Alma Taylor, who was born on Cotner's Ranch and registered in Lovell, Big Horn, Wyoming.

On the 15th of May 1901 the Brown family left Kanab in covered wagons, their destination was Big Horn Basin in Wyoming where new communities were building up. They took with them 65 head of range horses, and at Randolph, Utah the party was joined by William Brown and 64 head of cattle which had been moved northward two years earlier because of drought in southern Utah. They arrived at Coburn (now Greybull), Wyoming 24 July 1901, and established residence there for a short time.

The family remained in the farming and livestock business, renting different ranches until 1905 when Mr. Brown homesteaded and filed on 320 acres of land five miles southwest of Lovell. This then became their home, and while her husband and older sons were absent at work hauling wood and timber from the near by mountains, or working on the canal and the railroad Clara Ann managed the farm and livestock, and acted as doctor and nurse.

During the first ten years in Big Horn Basin the winters were long and severely cold the temperature dropping to 40 to 50 degrees below zero. There was much work to do to feed and shelter the livestock, milk the Cows, and do other chores. This required getting up early that the boys might get off to school two miles away. Yet the mother was such a good manager that her boys even enjoyed the hard work.

The Brown home was always a local center for the neighborhood boys and girls. They all enjoyed the mother's charming ways as well as the popcorn and homemade candy which they sometimes made.

Clara Ann was a homemaker, a devoted wife and a loving mother. She was active in Church and community life, and delighted in working with children. While in Kanab she worked for years as Counselor in the Primary Association, and again in Lovell she was a teacher, especially while the Ward was young. She was the first Primary president of the Lovell Ward, and served in various other capacities. She had a strong testimony of the truth of her religion and church, and had a fervent desire to live and to teach its principles. Some of her hopes were realized in the missions her five sons filled for the church.

Statements from two of her husband's neices give evidence of her characteristics. Hattie Spencer Robinson has written, "As I remember Aunt Clara she was a beautiful woman, and had a charming personality. Everyone in the family thought well of her, and had no criticism to offer. She must have been a good wise manager as she and uncle Eben reared a large family and were successful in making a home with comforts and conveniences. "

Bessie Spencer Bateman has said, "My memories of Aunt Clara are very pleasant ones. They bring a realization of her noble character. She possessed a serenity that brought assurance of better things. To go into her kitchen was a joy and satisfaction, A feeling of order, cleanliness and quality prevailed. Clara Ann was particular in every way, was staunch in her stand for what she thought should be, but never unreasonable. She had sympathetic understanding of the limits of physical endurance. Her home breathed the atmosphere of order, efficiency, and love. "

Thus having lived a full and useful life, she died at her home in Lovell, Wyoming on the 29 July 1928 at the age of 64 years.

MARIAM MARTHA LITTLE, second daughter of George Edwin and Martha (Taylor) Little was born 19 March 1866 in Salt Lake City, Utah. She lived here and in Tooele, Utah until the time of her marriage. She was married 16 September 1885 in the Latter-day Saints Temple at Logan, Utah.

About 1897 or 98, when she was the mother of six children, the family moved to Cardston, Alberta, Canada. They traveled in covered wagons and were six weeks enroute on the journey. They encountered many difficulties and hardships on the way. In her declining years she flew back over this route in five hours by airplane, to visit her daughters.

In Cardston her husband purchased a cattle ranch just out of Cardston where they lived for some time.

Mariam was a real helpmate to her husband. When later they moved into town and he took up again his practice of medicine and obstetrics she was ever willing and ready to assist him in cases of illness, and she helped to deliver many babies.

They were both ardent church workers. He served for eleven years as Bishop of Cardston First Ward, and she was Relief Society President. In this capacity she rendered much compassionate service. Whether day or night she answered calls to the homes of the sick, and in those early days before there was a mortuary in the town she also helped to prepare for burial and lay away the dead. She always found time to go back time and again to carry a tray of food and to comfort the bereaved.

Being Bishop carried many responsibilities in which the wife shared. Among other duties she was to furnish the bread for the sacrament each Sunday, and to entertain Church visitors from Utah. Being host and hostess to the Church Authorities who came to Canada to hold Stake Conferences was a pleasure, for it gave opportunity to know and associate with such prominent and fine men as President Joseph F. Smith, President Heber J. Grant, David O. Mackay, who later became president of the L. D. S. Church and many others. Other distinguished visitors were Mr. Pope, Mr. Burton, and Mr. Baxter who were the architects of the Canada Temple, the construction of which Brown supervised in 1918.

Mariam was a real mother and homemaker. Her children's friends were always welcome and greeted with a smile and, "How are you, my dears." A daughter has said, "Mother made the best bread, and didn't mind breaking up a fresh warm loaf with plenty of butter and a glass of cold milk to serve her little guests. The children used to say, 'Aunt Mamie, we would rather have your bread and butter than any cake'. No one ever came to her house that mother didn't insist on their having something to eat regardless of the time of day."

When her children disobeyed her or displeased her she had her own punishment for them. Thimble pie, she called it. She tapped them on the head with her thimbled finger.

Some interesting occurrences related by a daughter shows the friendliness and willing cooperation in those early days when there were no motel accommodations and perhaps not even a hotel. At conference time families living in outlying communities and farms would come to Cardston and literally camp over night at the Bishop's home. They brought their own bedding and when the beds of the house were filled extra beds for the boys were made on the porch floor, and if one came home late he had to pick his way around the beds. Sometimes as many as a half bushel of potatoes were peeled for one dinner, and 3 (8) dozen eggs fried for breakfast. They all helped to prove the old saying that many willing hands make light work.

While in Canada James T. Brown as manager of the Cardston Lumber Company. He opened the first drugstore and coal yard there, and for five years was a member of the Town Council, then was mayor for six years. He was a busy and active man. In 19 he suffered a stroke and was paralyzed. He then moved to Weiser, Idaho, and next in 1921 to Salt Lake City, Utah. Mariam was always a loyal and devoted wife to her husband; so in his affliction she gave herself to his care and the rearing of three minor children. She outlived her husband by ten years, and lived her last years in the home of her youngest daughter, Martha. Mariam passed away 19 April 1952 at the age of 86 years. She has a large posterity, is leaving 110 descendants. Of her eleven children three preceeded her in death. She will be remembered by many as "an angel of mercy," who put others ahead of herself.

GEORGE ALVIN LITTLE, born 15 January 1868 in Brighton Ward, Salt Lake County, Utah. First attended school in the old Social Hall. Later he moved with his parents to Teton, Idaho where his father erected the first sawmill in that area and carried on farming and stock raising. For many years George was a fruitgrower in Salt Lake County. In later years he served as ranger in Coons Canyon for the American Smelting and Refining Company.

He was long active in L. D. S. Church work. He was the first Sunday School superintendent of the Teton Stake in 1914-1919. He had earlier filled a mission in the Northern States in 1902 to 1904. He was made Bishop of Pleasant Green Ward in Magna 27 February 1916 and released 23 Nov. 1919. On 23rd June 1923 he was made President of the Quirrh Stake till released 3 February 1929.

He was present at the first family meeting of the Littles in 1924 when an organization was effected and he was chosen the first president. During this period of office meetings were held semi-annually in April and October, and two successful reunions were held in 1929 and 1930. He later served the second term.

On 28 September 1892 he married Fannie Elizabeth Paul. A year later, 14 September 1893 they were married in the Salt Lake Latter-day Saints Temple. This was the year the temple was dedicated. Though they had no children of their own they raised three from infancy. Harold Paul Little now of Joshua Tree, California, Frank Elsworth Little of Bacchus, Utah and his sisters daughter, Fannie Paul. At the age of 80 years he suffered a stroke and died 20 October 1948 in a Salt Lake City hospital. Funeral was held in Pleasant Green Ward, Magna, Utah and he was buried in the Wasatch Lawn Cemetery, Salt Lake City, Utah.

HARRIET AMELIA LITTLE was born 31 March 1869. She inherited two outstanding traits of character from her parents; thrift and love of her religion from her mother, Martha Taylor, and true charity for the sick, poor and needy from her father, George Edwin Little.

Harriet or Hattie, taught her twelve children "If you do The Lord's work first you will always have time for your own."

Until Hattie was twelve years of age she lived with her parents. From then on until her marriage the greater part of her life was spent in the home of Uncle Joseph and Aunt Lissie Taylor in Salt Lake City.

Hattie's children have heard her relate many incidents of her happy and interesting life while living at the Taylor home.

She became efficient in the undertaking business where neatness, punctuality and understanding of people's troubles became a fixed portion of her life.

At the age of twenty-two she and Frank Brown were married in Logan L.D.S. Temple, Logan, Cache, Ut. In Salt Lake they made their first home. Here the first three children were born. They then moved to Taylorsville where their fourth child was born.

It was while at Taylorsville that a serious accident happened; claiming the life of Little Frankie. The father was hauling gravel and Frankie unnoticed by his father tried to climb on the wheel. He fell off and was run over. He was buried on his fourth birthday.

The shock and sorrow left their deep mark on Hattie for years afterward. Even though her later children had never seen him they loved his memory as taught them by his devoted mother.

In 1897 when Nora was eight months old, Hattie and Frank put their belongings into a covered wagon and with their three small children started on an eight hundred mile trip to Alberta, Canada.

This was truly pioneering. A winding grass covered wagon trail, high water in the rivers and very few bridges.

Days and days passed without meeting a human being. Indians were on the look out to steal their horses or harnesses. The spring rains made traveling slow and chilly for children.

Chet, Johnny and Homer Woolf, cousins of Frank had preceded them to Canada. So with their help a two room log house was soon erected and the ranch life was entered into with a zest.

They located seven miles south of Cardston. There were no railroads for over fifty miles.

They bought beef cattle and were well on their way to success when a disease called black leg took the greater part of their young cattle.

There were prairie fires which swept hundreds of acres of fine hay land.

Winters were severe with bitter blizzards, the thermometer often hitting forty below zero.

Hattie became school teacher for her children as well as doing all of her normal duties. She helped milk the cows and made twenty-five pounds of butter daily. She was an emaculate housekeeper and fine seamstress.

Hattie's thrift and endurance were surely put to a test. Twice a week she put her butter into the red butter box; covered it with a clean white towel and off to Cardston she went to do her trading.

The friskiest team was not too much for Hattie. There were two gates she had to open on her way to town. One day Cap, the big lively bay horse took the bit in his mouth and started to run. Hattie layed the baby by her feet in the bottom of the demacrat or buggy and with the whip she made him run every step of the way home. It was a quivering, sweating team that arrived home that night but there were no more runaways for Hattie to worry about.

Hattie and Frank attended church at a little town named Aetna. They made many life-long friends among these true pioneering neighbors.

Three more children were born at the ranch home.

When Newel was ten years of age they bought a home in Cardston, so the children could attend school.

Here five more children were born to them.

Frank bought into the mercantile and later he ran a coal business to support his family.

Now Hattie was happy working for her family and helping with the sick and needy.

More often than not a note would be left for the children. She had a task for each one to do. She was with a sick person or death had come to a neighbor's home. She never neglected her family.

Christmas was the family's day. Always a wonderful time with plenty for all and so many little remembrances for the old or lonely around her.

She made her home a social center. Every child was free to bring her friends and everyone seemed to love to come to her home.

They were both active in church duties. Hattie was a temple worker. Later Frank spent many years in the Temple Presidency.

They gave their children good education. Ten of them grew to maturity and were all married in the temple.

Like many of the grandchildren of George E. and Martha Little, Hattie's children are helping to carry on in the church work. Two have been in Bishopric, two in Stake Relief Society Presidency, three in Stake M. I. A. and all have firm testimonies of the gospel.

Hattie set an example that will be difficult for her children to attain but a goal worth striving for.

Written by her daughter - Ethel.

MARIA LITTLE, daughter of George Edwin and Martha (Taylor) Little was born 18 September 1870 in Brighton Ward, Salt Lake County, Utah. She was the sixth child in a family of fourteen. At that time her parents lived on a large stock farm where the mother worked hard, cooking for her family and hired men, doing family washing by scrubbing on a wash-board, and doing sewing by hand. An old Dutchman who worked on the ranch often cared for the little Maria and called her Rea, which name has been carried through life. One of her early recollections is of a trip with her father to Midway, near Heber City, Wasatch County to see the Hot Pots where water bubbled up like huge fountains. The children were delighted.

The family moved to Tooele and lived there at E. T. Village for some years, then moved to 21st. Ward in Salt Lake City, where their house stood on a hill overlooking the city. They carried water for culinary purposes from the creek at the foot of the hill. Maria's playmates were many and very dear. They were always welcome in her mother's home where in the evenings they played games and had wonderful times pleased and happy with what they had. It was their only form of recreation.

From early childhood the children were taught to pray and have faith in their Maker. She remembers on Christmas when her mother said, "I fear Santa will miss us this year." Maria had outgrown Santa, but felt it would be a tragedy for the younger brothers and sisters. With faith in a kind Heavenly Father she took her problem to him and asked for help. Two boxes that arrived the day before Christmas furnished a splendid Christmas for all the family and sent Maria to her knees in gratitude for answer to her prayers.

Maria spent most of her youth in Salt Lake City. She began school when eight years, and had several years in Tooele. When seventeen years old she returned to Salt Lake City to work at general housework. The salary then was $3.00 per week. Shoes cost $1.50 a pair and good quality dress goods could be had for twenty to thirty cents a yard. Her mother and older sisters Clara and Harriet had earlier sewed overalls for the Z.C.M.I. at three dollars per dozen. When the overall factory was built her sisters continued to work there. The girls had happy times together going with friends to dances and theaters, or trips to the lake.

On the 9th of April 1890, Maria was married to Heber James Bevan in the Logan Temple. She had known him when a school girl in Tooele, and had renewed their association on her many trips home from Salt Lake City. They lived for nine years on 11th East Street between 8th and 9th South in Salt Lake City. Their first three children were born here. It was a lovely home with garden and they had chickens, pigs, and cows and a good team of horses. He worked hard and made a comfortable living but they wished to own a farm for themselves so decided to go to Canada where her older sisters, Mamie and Hattie lived.

On the first of April 1898 after chartering a railroad car to ship their livestock, machinery, and household goods, his family and a neighbor, the Campbells, boarded the train for the journey. Mr. Bevan rode the freight car that he might look after the animals, while his wife and children traveled in the coach with the Campbells. An incident on this journey is related because it shows how unkind humans can be toward one another because of blind prejudice and lack of honest information. When the train arrived in Montana a chinook wind was blowing, the snow was melting like magic, causing a flood which carried with it everything in its path. The train was delayed for several days. During this period some of the men on board became intoxicated and used rude and abusive language and spread the story among the passengers that Maria and children were a polygamist family. It was a very humiliating situation. Finally a man who seemed very curious and exacting sat near her and opened conversation by saying, "I take my hat off to a man who can support more than one family. Yours look well dressed and well provided for. I have a lovely girlfriend but she has been raised alone with wealthy parents, I fear I could never make her happy." Maria with some dignity replied, "I don't know what you are talking about, but I'll set you straight on one subject. You know we are delayed here because of the flood, that part of the train has been cut off. Unfortunately for me, my husband is back with the livestock, Mr. Campbell and family are neighbors. We are going to Canada to make homes. I agree there are some men in our church who are capable of supporting more than one family and raising fine sons and daughters- educating them so that they are outstanding citizens, but my husband is plenty busy taking care of his one wife and family." The man thanked for the information and went back to his friends. The attitude of the passengers changed and they assisted her when they could.

The party arrived in Lethbridge after several days, and went to Cardston to her sisters. The Bevans remained in Cardston through the summer but when the father developed rheumatism in the damp climate they decided to move again. In September after a sad farewell to her sisters, the family set out in a covered wagon which contained all their possessions. They drove to Montana and here met with another unusual and trying experience; but felt that God's care was with them. Near Choteau they were caught in a terrible blizzard. The first of the season, but fortunately they were near a farmhouse and kind people who took them in and made them comfortable through the storm. It was the worst storm they had ever seen, and lasted for a week. It was so thick and blinding that they could not see before them. Ropes were stretched from the house to the barn to guide the wayfarers safely back. When the storm subsided and they were able to venture out. The body of a young man was found only a few feet from the house. Except for the farmhouse and the splendid people who took them in Maria's family might also have perished.

They continued the journey to the nearest railroad station fourteen miles away. It took from three in the morning to nine in the evening to travel that distance. A sleigh would have served better as a conveyance. The snow clogged the wagon wheels, the men walked and pushed and shoveled snow most of the way. The wife and babies were put on the train to continue the journey while the husband remained behind to bring the wagon and team as weather and roads would permit. After a few days, Maria arrived at Market Lake, Idaho (now Idaho Falls). There she was met by relatives from Rexburg another days journey by wagon. She was thrilled to see her sister Marcia and brother-in-law Edmund Paul who were so kind to her, but only prayer and faith in God's care could sooth the anxiety she felt for her husband. Two weeks later he arrived and what a welcome he received. How grateful she was to her Heavenly Father that again they were together with no more long journeys alone.

Her parents lived in Teton Basin- the valley was just being settled. Maria and husband drove the extra forty miles to spend the winter with them before going on to Salt Lake. This winter they lived in a one room log cabin on her father's ranch, and by spring they had filed on forty acres under the Desert Act, and homesteaded eighty acres in Cache Ward. All thought of returning to Salt Lake was abandoned. The husband cut and sawed logs and made adobes, and by May 1900 had built a snug and warm four room house. Just a week after they moved in, their sixth child, Annie was born. He worked hard to fence and improve the farm, to build canals to bring water to the land. He acquired some head of cattle and always had a good team of horses which he prized and gave the best of care.

For two years they lived happily in the house then the hardest blow yet fell upon Maria. Her beloved husband was called away in death. Blood poison after the extraction of an abcessed tooth was the cause. There were no doctors near and none realized his serious condition. He died 1 March 1902. Heber Bevan was kind to everyone and in all their life together his wife says she never heard him speak an unkind word or do an unkind deed. His life was one of devotion to his family.

Here she was a lone mother with six small children and one yet unborn. She was three miles from the nearest neighbor, but they all helped each other, and the Lord blessed her family. Her two sons, though only 11 and 9 years, took hold of the work and began to fill the father's place. Maria canvassed the valley twice a year taking order for knitted goods from the Salt Lake Knitting Company. She says, we were never hungry and the children were dressed about as well as others of those days. They gathered wild fruit and spinach and after storms in summer mushrooms could be gathered by tubs full. Deer often came near the house so they had wild meat. They raised hogs and cattle and traded their wheat for flour, and each year they received a five gallon can of honey from a sister-in-law.

With so many little ones this mother had no time to be sad. The family must grow and be happy; so mother must smile for them. They spent long winter evenings telling stories and singing- on rare occasions they made honey candy. Estella, the youngest and born after her father's death, was always frail but a spark of sunshine in the home. In 1920 during the flu epidemic she passed away. Another sadness, but that mother could say, "It is the Lord's will. I must not complain." When the oldest daughter died and left three children, Maria took the two little granddaughters and reared a second family, and received joy in doing so. She taught her children the value of honesty, loyalty and faith. She used to say to them, "Just use common sense and you'll never do anything wrong." She taught them to pray, and to be modest in every way. They all loved her.

She spent her last years in Pocatello, Idaho, near her daughter, Eva Mickelsen. The last few months in her illness she was lovingly cared for by her daughter Annie Aldrich. She died 30 July 1951.

MARGARET GROVES LITTLE, eighth child and sixth daughter of George Edwin and Martha (Taylor) Little was born 2 April 1874 in Nephi, Juab County, Utah. When she was a few months old her parents moved to Tooele, Utah, where they lived for sixteen years. In 1890 her parents moved to Teton Valley, Idaho. During the next few years the family experienced the trials incident to pioneering a new country.

On the 12th of October 1893 she was married in the Latter-day Saints Temple in Salt Lake City to Howard Ashley Wallace, son of Howard and Elen Harper Wallace who were pioneers of 1862. Following the marriage Margaret and Howard lived in a log house on the tract of land that Mr. Wallace was homesteading. This land was about three and a half miles north and west of the town of Driggs, Idaho. Their five oldest children were born while they lived at this location. As the children grew to school age they found it advisable to live nearer the school, also the church where they could all take part in the activities. So in the fall of 1905 they moved to a new frame house which they had built on land adjoining the Driggs town-site on the east. Four more children were born here making a total of nine children, five daughters and four sons. The oldest and youngest sons preceded their mother in death, and the youngest daughter died in 1923.

Mr. Wallace became a Councelor in the Bishopric of the Driggs Ward and Margaret served in the Relief Society as an officer and as Visiting Teacher.

She and her husband were always kind and helpful to those less fortunate than themselves. They helped many people and did so quietly without any one knowing except those receiving the benefits. When two of her sisters were left widows with small children she and her husband assisted them in many ways. One sister with two small boys spent quite a period of time in their home. These boys always felt that they had a home in their aunt's house when needed.

When a stake was being organized in Teton Valley and a Stake house built in Driggs, the people from all parts of the valley came to Driggs for Quarterly Conference and other gatherings. At such times Margaret's home was open to relatives and friends for dinners and overnight guests who came from five to fifteen miles distant. In those days transportation was by white top buggies, or sleighs according to the season. She was always prepared with an abundance of foods prepared in advance; so these occasions were really enjoyed. Her mother and sisters always came to spend her birthday anniversary with her. This would mean a bountious dinner and a day of visiting and pleasure.

Early in 1920 she became ill with a serious heart ailment. She was treated by the best doctors in Salt Lake City, and after being a patient in the L. D. S. Hospital for two months returned to her home in Driggs in late August. She passed away at her home 23 September 1920, and was buried at Driggs, Idaho.

In 1953 her posterity numbers six living children, twenty three grandchildren and twelve great grandchildren.

MARCIA ALICE LITTLE was born in the spring of 1876 a beautiful, dark-eyed, curly-headed baby girl was ushered into this world, here to grow to womanhood, and to prove herself worthy, after a good and useful life, to enter back into the presence of her Father in Heaven. Her heritage was a kind and noble disposition. Her parents, George Edwin and Martha (Taylor) Little, named this their ninth child, Marcia Alice.

Marcia began school in Tooele where she made many friends and was a favorite with her teachers because of her amiable disposition. When in 1890 the family moved to the Teton Basin in Idaho she easily adjusted to the new school environment. About 1894 she spent most of the summer with her sister, Clara Ann in Kanab, Utah, and was considered one of the prettiest girls to come to that community. The following winter she stayed with her uncle Joseph E. Taylor and family, in Salt Lake City, and attended school at the old "Social Hall". This was a very select, religious school taught by James E. Talmadge and Willard Done.

The Littles moved to the Basin about the same time as the Paul family. When George Little and Ted Paul met they talked of each having sisters, and jokingly agreed to trade. Although made in fun, this agreement was kept a few years later. Ted's sister Fannie married George and Marcia married Ted (Edmund Paul). The families were very closely knit, Marcia could not have loved an own sister more than she did Fannie. Both families moved to Utah in 1905 and bought farms near each other in Pleasant Green (about thirteen miles southwest of Salt Lake City).

Ted was a good provider, but being a carpenter, there were times when it was impossible to get work. Therefore it was a constant struggle to feed, clothe, and educate their six children. However, no one was ever turned away from their door empty handed as long there was a crust of bread to share. Often Gypsies, Indians, or tramps would come begging for food or money. Whenever Marcia heard of someone being ill it pleased her to cook a meal and carry it to them, and to give relief and comfort in every way possible. She was often considered an angel of mercy to those in need. Marcia saw nothing but good in others.

Marcia's home was her castle, no matter how humble. She kept it neat as a pin, and taught her children that, "What is worth doing at all is worth doing well." Although she demanded respect and obedients from her children she was never harsh with them. Her favorite punishment was to have the offending child sit on a chair in a corner without speaking for a specified time. Family prayer was daily observed in the home. The children were taught by example, as well as by word, to pay tithing, to be reverent, and to love God and their fellow men.

Marcia served in various positions in her church, Sunday School teacher, Relief Society Visiting Teacher, and Religion Class Leader.

Although Marcia's health was not the best she was of an uncomplaining nature, and none knew of her ailments. She often remarked, "When I die I hope I get sick one day and die the next." That is just what happened. She passed away 3 February 1934 at her home near Magna, Utah. Though she has been greatly missed, she was never mourned, for all have felt that such a noble character had justly earned the highest place in her Father's Kingdom. The greatest tribute which could be paid to her is: "She was loved by all who knew her, and loved most by those who knew her best."

EVE LITTLE, born 3 September 1878 in Salt Lake City was the tenth child of Martha Taylor and George Edwin Little. When she was five years old her parents moved to Tooele, Utah where they lived for seven years. In 1890 the Little family went to Idaho to help settle the Teton Valley. They made their home in Haden in what was then Fremont County, now Teton County.

Eve was very pretty with her dark brown hair and eyes. She had a sweet disposition, and was admired and loved by all who knew her. On the 10th of February 1898 she married Eugene Howe Young in the Latter-day Saints Temple in Salt Lake City, Utah.

They made their home in Victor, Idaho where their first child, Martha Curtis Young, was born. When four months old she contracted whooping-cough and died the 23rd of May. Their second child, Eugene Little Young, was born at Haden a year later. He grew up and was very devoted to his mother, for she was his only companion in life. He died of pneumonia at the age of twenty three years without having married. A third child, Orson Taylor Young, was born 22 March 1901, and lived to carry on the line through his children and grandchildren.

Eve's husband was a grandson of President Brigham Young, and was called Dean. He was a devoted husband and father, and had a strong testimony of the truth of the church which had been established in the valleys of the Rocky Mountains by his grandfather. Too early in life Eugene became ill with tuberculosis. For his health they left Victor, traveled to Salt Lake City and stayed with his parents for awhile, then upon the advice of doctors the Youngs went to Mesa, Arizona seeking a warmer climate for the winter. He died there 2 April 1903.

Eve and her two small sons accompanied her husband's body back to Haden, her parent's home, where the funeral was held. He was buried at Victor.

In October 1905 Eve married again, Alma J. Engberson with whom she reared a large family of eight sons and daughters who all grew to maturity, married and had families of their own.

The following tribute, "Memories of My Mother" was written by her daughter, Ione Engberson Furniss.

The stories of our lives are written in the memories of the people who live on after we are gone. My mother's story is written in the memory of many. She was a vivid sort of person. Only those who knew her best knew 'the cross she bore' and the countless trials that she met and conquered each day. She was not a physically strong person but she walked 'hand-in-hand with God' through a life of hardship and worry that would have defeated a person less spiritually strong. Among other things God granted to her two of her greatest wishes - to live to raise her family - and to never live to be a burden to anyone.

She had faith in the young people and they always felt that a welcome mat was rolled out for them at her home. She would laugh and have fun with them, and made them feel important, not silly children. She always had faith that they would turn out alright.

Though it is ten years since she passed away she is fondly spoken of as if her going had been only yesterday. An example to illustrate. When the writer had illness in her home a woman, who was almost a stranger, offered assistance. When thanked she said, "It would be so little for me to do in return for what your mother did for me. When I was new here in town, when circumstances seemed turned against me, when I was depressed and willing to give up, your mother came to me. I was a stranger to her but she came to my home when I needed her - she reached out and 'lifted me up'. Her understanding at that time turned the tide for me."

Mother preferred to give her charities where they were needed, and not for the purpose of gaining recognition. When she took some vegetables to a needy and discouraged family she remarked to her daughters, the vegetables won't amount to much, if the folk know some one cares that will help.

When mother was in Relief Society work it was a common occurrence for her to be called out in the middle of the night to go with the doctor to deliver a new baby, or watch over the sick, and she never counted the cost to herself. One of the finest tributes to my mother's life was paid by a woman who recently died of cancer. She had been born with a serious physical handicap which had caused her to be shunned by many. On her deathbed she said to my father, "Your dear, sweet wife - she is one of the sweet memories I have of this life. If we were in church and I was sitting alone she would always come and sit by me. At Conference time, when she was President of the Stake Relief Society, no matter how busy she was, or how distinguished the visitor she always singled me out for a special greeting. She would take my hand in hers and say, "How are you, Liz?"

Mother loved the Lord and she expressed it in love for her neighbor. She opened her home and heart, she gave of her time and energies, and for that she lives on in the minds of those who knew her and loved her for what she was.

MY MOTHER'S PRAYERS

I have heard fine, proud prayers in large churches; I've heard humble prayers on busy street corners. I have listened while people 'talked with God' or while they played with words to impress their human listeners. But when I think of the true meaning of the word 'prayer' I think of my mother's prayers.

No matter how many demanding tasks the day held- that day began with her prayer. No matter how late the hour or how weary she was - that day ended with a prayer. Her prayers were as sweet and sincere as her life. She didn't ask God for great favors, or for special privileges. She asked for wisdom and guidance in bringing up her family, and for strength to see the task through.

In sickness, in temptation, in pain or in loneliness I always found comfort in the thought, "My mother is praying for me - and for all of us." She prayed and cared as only a Mother can who implores God for 'the protection and goodness' of her children.

It has been ten years since we sat in the chapel and heard them sing her favorite song, "Sweet Hour of Prayer." Ten years since death closed her weary eyes and silenced her tired lips - and yet somehow I know that somewhere 'she prays for me still.'

FERAMORZ LITTLE is the son of Martha Taylor and George Edwin Little. He was born 24 May 1880 in Salt Lake City, Utah. His first ten years were spent on his father's farm in Tooele, Utah.

In 1890 his family moved to Haden in Teton Valley, Idaho. The furniture and all their belongings were loaded into their large wagons, along with pieces of machinery to set up a saw mill. It was an interesting experience for young Fera helping to drive a team, and camping at night under the stars. It was May time and the melting snow made the roads rough and muddy. The streams were swollen, and sometimes the water came up to the wagon boxes and would wet the contents of the load.

The first sawmill in the valley was in Teton Canyon. It was set up by Fera's father, and was another new experience for Fera. He found it exciting to watch the big trees fall by the ax of his brothers and father; and then be sawed into lumber in the mill.

When the family filed on a piece of land in Haden it was necessary to build a home that would accomodate their large family. Logs were sawed in the mill and the lumber hauled to the selected spot and Fera did his part in helping to build their fine house.

His school consisted of three or four months each winter until he passed the sixth grade. Then he attended the Ricks Academy for a few months. The winters were very severe and snow piled so high that school was not held the full nine months each year as it should have been.

A schoolmate, and friend of his sister Mattie became his wife. Annie Katherine Black and Feramorz were married 18 October 1904. This was a memorable occasion, for it was a double wedding, his sister Nora and Alma Rammell were married at the same time.

Feramorz and Katie lived in St. Anthony for awhile. Fera had ten head of horses and a coach. He contracted to carry the mail and passengers from Victor to St. Anthony, Idaho, a distance of sixty miles. He was at home every other night. In the winter he used a sleigh with a stove in it.

Their first son, Joe, was born in St. Anthony and their second son, Delbert, in Haden.

People are always confronted with problems and have to make decisions in their lives, so after these two sons came into their home Katie and Feramorz decided, and went to Logan with their parents and had their sealing and endowment work done in the Latter-day Saints Temple.

In 1925 they moved to Star, Canyon County, Idaho. There they bought a large farm where they raised alfalfa, corn and grain, but their main business is cattle raising.

Katie and Fera have had nine children and now have twenty-three grandchildren and one great grandchild. The great granddaughter, Deborah Breshears, was born in Anchorage, Alaska a few months ago and they have not yet seen her.

Katie has light brown hair and blue eyes. Her height is about five feet and ten inches. She has been a wonderful wife and mother. Feramorz had reddish hair, heavy eyebrows, and blue eyes. He used to be six feet and two inches tall, but the years have settled him down to six feet, and his weight has dropped from 160 to 140 pounds. He has a happy disposition, and their homelife has been very dear to all of them.

The family moved to Tooele, Tooele County, Utah when Estella was about two years old. They lived there until the spring of 1890 when they went to help pioneer the Teton Basin, Idaho.

Although only eight years old when she left Tooele, Stella vividly remembers her first two years of school there. One teacher especially stands out in her memory, for her beauty and kindness. After completing her remaining six years of grade school in Haden, Idaho, Stella was called by the Mutual Improvement Association to take a special course at the Ricks Academy in Rexburg to prepare her for teaching in that organization. She was required to take only one subject for this purpose, but since her tuition was being paid she took advantage of the opportunity offered her in studying other available subjects also. She attended there one year.

She and her sister Nora were very close companions. They attended school, Sunday School, Primary and Mutual together. They participated in music activities and play production. They even enjoyed double dating with their boyfriends. Their most enjoyable amusements were horseback riding, sleigh riding and dancing.

Estella taught a class in Sunday School and in Primary at an early age. She has served continuously in the Primary Association for fifty-two years, being honored by the General Primary Board February 9, 1953 on a television program for her faithful service. They presented her with a gold pin set with five rubies, each ruby representing ten years of service. A diamond set in the midst of the rubies represents the Diamond Jubilee of the first Primary Organization in Utah. She was also presented by her stake authorities with a beautiful rhinestone pin; the Ward workers honored her with a book, dealing with the lives of the Presidents of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Estella had worked continually in the Oquirrh Stake Primary since its organization in 1923.

Her service was not limited to the Primary organization. The past twenty-eight years she has taught a Sunday School class and has also for the past eight years been class leader in the Relief Society Organization, teaching the Social Science lessons.

On November 15, 1905 Estella was married in Haden, Idaho to Nels Frank Pehrson, son of Ellen (Johnson) and Nels Pehrson. The ceremony was performed by Patriarch John Latham in the bride's home, after which friends and relatives participated in a lovely dinner, then went to the amusement hall to dance. It was the custom when a couple married, for the groom to pay for the dance.

Their first son, Frank was born in a log home which Nels had built from logs which he had hewed and hauled himself. He shingled the roof.

They moved to Magna, Salt Lake County, Utah, March 17, 1907 where four more sons were born to them. The third son, Orson lived to be only fourteen months old.

Estella's husband, Nels worked for many years at the Utah Copper Company as a carpenter. The past twenty one years he has served as a Deputy Sheriff in Salt Lake County.

Estella has taken a prominent part in politics, serving as President of the Democratic Study group in Magna for four years and another four years as president of the County Ladies Organization. She also served as vice-chairman of the precinct; and as delegate of the county conventions on several occasions.

LENORA LITTLE, daughter of George Edwin and Martha (Taylor) Little was born 17 December 1883 in Tooele, Utah. She grew up to be a fine looking woman with auburn hair and gray eyes, and a sweet disposition to go along with them.

Among her enduring memories is a one-room school in Haden, Idaho where she first went to school. (her family had moved to the Teton Basin in 1890.) In the center of the room was a big wood burning heater, a long log table with girls seated on one side, and boys on the other. Here in this new country the children learned to live together and gained the rudiments of education. At recess they played "steal the sticks," or baseball, and in the winter it was fun to play in the snow sometimes lying down flat to make their imprints and then going home wet. Often they would say to each other, "Will you mix with me?" and then proceeded to trade lunches, which had been brought from home.

Nora, as she was called, and Estella, the next older sister, were very close to each other and enjoyed many activities together. With their boyfriends they went to dances at the schoolhouse, or later in the new dance hall. In those days it was the custom for the ladies to bring cakes, pies, sandwiches and drinks; and at midnight dance recessed to eat, then continued till four in the morning. In winter the old fashioned sleighing party was a source of pleasure and romance. With a good layer of straw spread on the floor of the bobsled and a quilt to cover it, the young people with their comforter quilts were snug and warm. One of the less popular fellows was chosen to be driver. If all were happy it was sometimes convenient to get lost in a blizzard and not return till daylight. In summer time horseback riding and picnics were favorite forms of recreation.

With all their fun they had work to do. One summer Nora put on overalls and shirt and an old hat, and drove the mowing machine and cut all the hay. Nora was very neat in her house work. Her mother depended on her a great deal as they entertained many travelers and friends in the home. Nora took part in Church work, and spent happy hours playing the church organ which had been a gift from Andrew Carnegie.

On 18 October 1904 Nora married Alma Rammell at the home of her parents. It was a double wedding, for her brother Feramorz and Katie Black were married at the same time. Nora and Al lived in a three room log house on an eighty acre farm being homesteaded. To them were born seven girls and two boys. She worked very hard to keep her family, and had no modern conveniences. She carried water from a spring under the hill some distance away; she chopped her own wood, and scrubbed her clothes on a washboard each week.

When her father passed away in 1915 Nora and family moved into the old home to help care for her mother. Through tender, thoughtful service the children learned to love grandmother.

Nora became ill with influenze which turned to pneumonia. She was taken to the L. D. S. hospital in Idaho Falls where everything was done for her that could be done. She was returned home and passed away 5 November 1931 leaving seven children at home. Estella, her youngest, was only seven years old. The two oldest girls were married. MATTIE LITTLE, born 8 December 1886 in Tooele, Tooele County, Utah, is the youngest child of fourteen of George Edwin and Martha (Taylor) Little. At the time of Mattie's birth the family lived on a six acre farm, their home was a four-room frame structure with a large porch. Two of her ten sisters and one of her three brothers were already married.

In the spring of 1890 the farm was sold, and the large family with all their belongings were loaded into covered wagons and they started on a 300 mile trip to Teton Valley, Idaho. Roads were bad and traveling slow. Three and a half year old Mattie remembers one incident. As they crossed the Snake River on a ferry boat her hat blew off and went sailing down the stream. Only a few families lived in the valley at that time. Her brothers Ed and George soon came and lived near them. The first winters were spent at the Hibbard ranch on the banks of the Teton River, through the summers they lived in the canyon where her father had a saw mill. Later they homesteaded 160 acres of land in the north end of the valley at Haden, and built a three room house of sawed logs. It was situated on a hill with the front facing east so they had a grand view of the Teton peaks. Mother's bright woven rag carpets on the floors, and the papered walls and ceiling made the inside cheerful. Below the hill northeast of the house a bubbling spring formed a pond then ran on through the fields a carefree brook with willows along its banks. Later a forty foot well was dug on the west side of the house and the water drawn with two buckets on a rope and pulley.

Mattie's schooling began in a one-room one-teacher school three and a half miles from home. In the winter when snow was deep her brother Fera gathered the children of the neighborhood into his bob sleigh and drove to school. When in the fifth grade they went to a new school only half a mile from home. When fifteen years old Mattie attended the Ricks Academy at Rexburg forty miles away. Here she graduated from the eighth grade and was valedictorian for the class. This was a happy year. She lived with Fannie Little while her brother George was on his mission to the Northeastern States. The next summer she worked for Martha Perser, Fannie's sister and saved her money for school. She started her third year at the academy, but after two months became ill with typhoid fever and went home.

It was the latter part of November 1905 when Mattie was recovering and enjoying her first day of sitting up, that Arthur Eugene Hanks called to see the family. She was much impressed in this first meeting. He was six foot one inch tall, dark complexion and had a happy disposition. The first time that she was able to out he took her to a dance. He always had a good team and buggy, and when the snow fell he came down the lane in a cutter sleigh. A year later on the 30th of December 1906 they were married at the home of her parents. Mattie and Arther lived in part of the old house until their first child was born 5 December 1907. They named her Teton after the majestic Teton peaks which were an inspiration to them.

Early in life Mattie was imbued with a religious spirit, was impressed with a reverence in prayer by her mother and by her father who paid an honest tithing and made it possible for the family to attend church regularly by taking them in a sleigh or buggy. This religious spirit continued through her life. She served in various capacities in different places. When they lived on the ranch in Wayne County they drove twelve miles each Sunday to Church. Later in Nampa they bought their first automobile, and drove five miles to church, except when the mud was deep, then they drove a fine pair of horses hitched to a two seated surrey. Here Arthur was Sunday School Superintendent and a counselor in the Bishopric. Mattie was president of the Young Ladies Mutual Improvement Association for seven years, and she was secretary of Relief Society for five years. When Teton was twenty seven months old they took her with them to Logan Temple where they were sealed for all eternity.

In September 1910 they moved to Floral Ranch in Wayne County, Utah. This was the boyhood home of the husband, Arthur Hanks. His two younger sisters were born there, and his father and mother had died there. It was a beautiful spot surrounded on three sides by ledges of red sandstone. The land was fertile, with Pleasant Creek running through it. They raised garden stuff, many varieties of fruit, alfalfa, and sugar cane, and raised livestock on the nearby range. They had a good home and were busy and happy the five years they lived there.

Two more children blessed their home and when Teton was old enough for school they moved into the village of Fruita for the winter. When on 15 December 1915 they received word by telephone that Mattie's father had died in Haden, Idaho they indeed felt far away. It was a hundred miles to the nearest railroad at Richfield, Utah. Mattie could not attend the funeral of her kind and loving father who had been generous and friendly to all. She had loved him dearly.

In the fall of 1916 they sold the ranch and moved to Nampa, Idaho. There they purchased a forty acre farm with four room frame house five miles from town. The farm was planted in several varieties of fruit trees and alfalfa. After nine years they moved to Utah in June 1925 where they spent two summers on her brother George's fruit farm near Magna, and later lived in Salt Lake City. The summer of 1936 Arthur and Mattie with their two youngest sons toured the western states, and lived in Oakland and Monrovia, California for two years.

Since 1939 they have lived in Provo, Utah where their sons attended the Brigham Young University. Arthur is now an insurance salesman. They are both well and busy in their church work. She has been counselor to three presidents of Relief Society, and at present is serving a third two-

CATHERINE CLAWSON. In the year 1889 on the 23rd of October a very small baby girl was born in the home of Hyrum Bradley Clawson and his wife Susan Claire Little. The baby was named Catherine Lewis Clawson. That was her beginning, and she is sure that her childhood was most normal although she has one or two outstanding memories of interesting events.

One of these occurred when she was four years old. Her brothers, Feramorz, Delbert, and Elgin, who are all older than she, were having a birthday party, and she very much wanted to enter into their games; so they lifted her up onto a closet shelf to hide, then they ran outside to play, and forgot where they had left her. It seems she had to set up quite a fuss before she was rescued and lifted down.

Her father, bless his memory, was always gentle and kind, even in the face of financial reverses. He was required to sell his lovely home on 1st South street when the business of "Little Roundy and Company" in which he was a partner with grandfather Little and uncle Dell Roundy, could not survive the depression at the turn of the century. The family moved into a small house on 1st West and 4th South streets where they lived till after Catherine's marriage in 1914. Though they lived in a humbler home the family was blessed, and the children reared to love the Gospel and to take joy in striving to serve the Lord, regardless of trials in doing so.

Her father died 2 November 1914 only two months after Catherine's marriage. After four lone years her mother married again in 1918 and moved to Washington D. C. . There she died in 1919. Her children all loved her dearly and brought her remains back to Salt Lake City where she is laid to rest beside their father.

Catherine is a small woman, vivacious and energetic, and has inherited much of her grandfather Little's business ability. She managed successfully a grocery store for many years, then a fruit farm out in the country, and when the time was ripe that farm was broken up into building lots and streets to make a new addition to the city suburbs.

Catherine's husband, George Malin Williams is a wonderful husband and father, and very proud of his four living children who all live in the vicinity and are upright, honorable citizens. They are interested and active members of the L. D. S. Church, giving of their time and means for the building up of the Lord's Kingdom on earth. The two older boys have filled missions for the Church, and Margaret, the daughter, loyal and faithful at home worked and shared her wages with her brother in Australia that he might carry on his work of preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ; for all must hear the word that they may be agents unto themselves in choosing the course they will pursue. Ned, the youngest son, was deprived of going into the mission field - Uncle Sam took him into the Marine Corps where he served his country for four years.

Father Williams is at present a Patriarch in the Wilford Stake of Zion. His call is to give blessings of comfort and guidance to faithful Latter-day Saints. Margaret, besides keeping a home and rearing her four children, serves as her father's stenographer to take down the blessings and transcribe them to typewritten copies for the patron.

Catherine and George are happy and proud grandparents of sixteen lovely grandchildren.

Catherine has been a strong support and friend in the production of this Family History, and has expressed in writing her heartfelt gratitude to the compiler for the untiring years of research, and the work of putting together the facts for this printed volume.

JAMES ALFRED LITTLE, born 13 August 1881 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah is the son of James and Emma Priscilla (Evans) Little. When six years old he moved with his parents to Little's Ranch in Garfield County. Because of this move his entrance in school was delayed until he was nine years, when he attended Asa Judd's Primary department in Kanab. His school years were irregular and incomplete. He next attended a small school in Garfield County and when 13 went to Panguitch, at 15 he had a year in Spanish Fork, then in Glendale and in 1905 took a year at Murdock Academy in Beaver.

He worked with his father on the ranch, and carried mail from Panguitch to Ranch- now called Alton.

On the 26th of March he married in the Salt Lake Temple, Mary May Clove, who was born on a homestead on the Mammoth Creek, a mile south of Hatch town. This mile she had to walk to attend school. Her father died when she was four years, and at the age of five she cared for a younger brother and sister while her mother taught school in her own home. When twelve years her mother died and she was left alone to make her own living. She attended school in Panguitch at the age of thirteen and seventeen, and had three consecutive years at the Murdock Academy- later a branch of the B. Y. University.

She and husband lived their first year on the Webb Ranch near Glendale. After being in partnership in sheep business with his brothers, Thomas D. and John C. Little for a number of years the partnership was dissolved and James bought the Little's Ranch from his father. Here he carried on stock raising and farming. Though the altitude is high they raise most crops except corn, beans, and tomatoes.

The winters are spent in Glendale where the children are transported to the Valley High School in Orderville from which the children have graduated and some of them have attended colleges or Universities.

In Glendale, James and Mary have been active in church work. He has been Sunday School Superintendent and Scout Master and she has held various positions in all the auxiliaries- was counselor in the Relief Society Presidency for five years, and counselor in the Primary Association where she organized the first Trail Builders class in Glendale. When her sister died in 1910, she took three children and mothered them for about ten years.

James and Mary have seven children. He died 5 September 1943. Her residence is: Glendale and the Ranch.

THOMAS DAVID LITTLE, second son of James Alfred and Emma Priscilla (Evans) Little, was born 25 July 1887 at Little's Ranch, Garfield County, Utah, where he spent his childhood. He began his schooling at Panguitch when seven years old, and went to Glendale Grade School, later attended the Murdock Academy at Beaver which became a branch of the B. Y. University.

On June 19, 1912 he married Thirza Mahala Watson, in the Salt Lake Temple. They made their home in Glendale, Kane County, Utah, where she was born and received her elementary schooling. She attended the Woodward High School at St. George, where she was a member of the Debating League which represented the school. Later she attended the Murdock Academy at Beaver, Utah.

In 1914 Thomas was called on a mission to the Western States. He served two years under President John L. Herrick and labored in Colorado and Nebraska. He returned in 1916.

For a number of years Tom had interest in the sheep business with his brothers, James and Chidester. The company was known as "The Little Brothers." In 1919 the family moved to Cedar City, Iron County, Utah, where they have since resided. The sheep were sold, and Tom and Chidester put up the Star Service Station. After a time this was sold and they went into real estate business, at which they did well until the depression of the early thirties hit our state.

They are thankful for the good schools in their community - the Branch Agricultural College has offered splendid educational opportunities for their large family of eight children.

JAMES AMASA LITTLE, son of Phineas Howe and Mary Elizabeth (Cluff) Little, was born 25 July 1888 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah. At the age of two years his parents and family moved to Panguitch, Garfield County. His father took up ranching as his occupation.

James tells his own story.

"Though we were very young, my brothers and I were subject to the long hours and hard labor of ranch life. Father often sent one of my brothers and me to herd cattle all day long on the hills. Usually I rode a barebacked donkey--progress was very slow and keeping my seat not too easy.

At one time my brother, Charles and I went to the hills and I was allowed to ride a horse. The mountain was plateau like, or flat on top. We directed our horses toward a lake which we knew to be on the mountain. We intended to use this as a meeting place after the roundup. Then each took a different direction in search for cattle. As I rode along I noticed that this mountain was inhabited by many varieties of wild animals. One little animal I saw lying peacefully asleep under a tree. I decided to catch it. Slipping quietly, and very cautiously from my pony I managed to grasp it by the hind leg, but the little fawn was too quick for me. It slipped through my fingers and left me staring in surprise as it bounded away.

In the small space of time it took to stage this episode, I completely lost my bearings. Back on my pony I tried in vain to find the small and only trail leading off the mountain. I suddenly remembered that I should be back at our rendezvous by the lake, but couldn't find it. After wandering about for awhile I supposed that Charles had gone home after concluding that I had done so. This is just what happened as I was later told. Charles' arrival home without me caused no alarm at first, for everyone expected me to come in soon after Charles. After hours of wandering, night came on and I was still lost and alone on the mountain. I knew that if I gave the horse reins it could find the way home. (At least, that is what I had been told). I tried it. It didn't work. The creature merely stood cropping grass while I tried to make it go home. Not giving up I led the horse instead of waiting for him to lead me. I tried jumping off cliffs and scrambling downward by catching hold of vines and shrubs till I finally reached level ground. Then I got my bearings and started home. After going a few miles I met father and a group of men coming to find me. I reached home at one A. M.

When the family went to Wyoming some years later we traveled in covered wagons, except the boys who rode horses and trailed cattle. One night while I was on guard over the cattle it began to rain, how it did pour! I was drenched to the skin and the water ran out of my shoes. After three months traveling we reached Cowley, Wyoming. From here we moved to Billings, Montana, then to Rosebud, where we built the grade for the C. B. & Q. Railroad. At the age of fifteen I drove a team and scraper to help with the work. Then we camped for the winter at Wiley, where the smallpox broke out in camp and all became sick, except the men who had previously had the pox. No one died, however.

Next spring, traveling by way of Yellowstone Park, we moved to Oakley, Idaho. There father and I engaged in the livery stable business. Often the doctor would hire a team and driver to take him out of town on call. I was usually the driver and was obliged to wait for the doctor, even if he stayed all night, which he sometimes did.

On a trip to Ogden, Utah, I met Lennie Leona Garner, who became my wife on 1911 and returned to Oakley with me. In 1912 a son, Carl James was born to us. I sold my share in the business to father. With my wife and baby we wandered awhile till we came to Paul, Idaho, where I took up farming. In April 1918 I took my wife and small son to the Salt Lake Temple where we were endowed and sealed by the authority of the Priesthood, and knew that we would be a family through eternity. Our ties would not end with death. In October 1918 we moved to Ogden, Utah which has been our home since. I became switch tender in the Ogden railroad yards. I enjoy the work and realize it is a responsible job.

I have done some work in my church. I have been Instructor of a Sunday School class, a member of the Ward Genealogical Committee and did some temple work. For some years I was president of our Family Genealogical Organization. This work has given me joy and satisfaction.

I have been seriously ill several times but through the goodness of the Lord my life has been spared.

SKETCH BY ARLEAN MCGREGOR LEWIS

My mother was born in Kanab, Utah on the twenty fifth of November in the year of our Lord, Eighteen Hundred and Ninety. She was born to Alfred and Ada Young. Little was my grandmother's name. She grew up in a family of thirteen children, much the same as children grow up now, except in those days modern conveniences of today were unheard of. The family often times had indians come in and help with the work. Her father owned a construction company and worked to improve the country in and around Kanab. Later the Young family moved to Kaneshville, Weber County, Utah, and it was here she met and fell in love with father.

At the early age of seventeen she married Joseph McGregor in the Salt Lake Temple on the 16th of September 1908. They were very happy and began their married life in the old McGregor home on West 29th Street in Ogden, Utah. In June on the 29th of the next year a baby boy was born to them. They were happy to have this little boy for their own. They gave him his father's name, Joseph Leslie. Fifteen months later another little boy came to their family. They named him Norman Douglas and the two little fellows became close companions. As time went on mother expected again, but this little baby girl was born dead, a great sorrow to the family. Later my mother was taken ill with a stroke, then two others before the doctor could arrive. The paralysis affected the whole right side of her body.

The next few months and years she fought for the use of her right side. She learned to walk again, to use her arm again, but her hand was almost useless. This was a sad and lasting handicap which she suffered the remainder of her life. My father labored for her health. Doing everything he could in every way. He had the complete care of two small sons besides earning the living for the family.

In spite of all that had happened to them they decided to try for a larger family. I was the first one to be born to them after mother's illness. They named me Arlean. My family later moved to a place called Abraham, Utah. It was here in this small place near the desert my sister, Dora, was born. Two years later we moved back to Ogden. My father built a lovely brick house at 3532 Adams Avenue. In 1924 my second sister, Charilla, was born. She was named for my grandmother McGregor. Three years later a baby boy came along and he was named for my father's brother, James. He also was given my mother's maiden name of Young.

He was only two years old when mother was taken from us. She had gone to a dentist to have a tooth extracted, had been convinced that they should all come out; so she had them all out but six. In three days infection had gone to her kidneys, and she died six weeks later of acute Bright's disease. She died July 15, 1929 and was buried 17 July. She was the first person to be buried in the Aultorest Memorial Park in Ogden, Utah.

Her wonderful teachings and principles are still with us.

TAMAR STEWART, daughter of William Thomas and Fannie (Little) Stewart was born 3 May 1880 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah.

There under the sunny skies of southern Utah in the little town of Kanab, named after the willows that grew along the creek, which in early years of white settlement carried so little water that it was almost lost in the sand. There nestled in the protecting arms of the red sandstone hills which extended around the north and east lay the little town where Tamar spent most of her life, and received inspiration and strength to rear a large family.

She received her education in the elementary school of the village, and in the church auxiliaries. She served as Sunday School teacher and as superintendent of the Ward Religion Class, was also leader in the adult class of the Young Womens Mutual Improvement Association, and was literary class leader in the Relief Society for most of twenty years. It was this church work which kept her busy, and comforted when she lost her last baby in 1924.

On Christmas day, December 25, 1900, she had married Isaiah Hamblin and become the mother of ten children of which eight grew to maturity, and have families of their own. Two of her children died in infancy.

Besides her large family and church duties she found time to serve the community in a civic capacity. In 1911 she was elected a member of the first known ALL WOMEN TOWN COUNCIL. For two years she served as its clerk.

This election came about in an unusual way. The five councilmen, who expected to be re-elected, were in the Bowman mercantile establishment talking and joking about the women who felt that the council should do more than they had done in the past. These men said the women should be tried out. Stake President Dee Wooley and Ben Hamblin were in the said store and heard the challenge, and said to each other, "Why not".

So they sat down and made out a ticket with the names of Mary E. Chamberlain, Luella McAllister, Blanch Hamblin, Tamar Hamblin and Vinnie Jepson who ran against her husband, and had to resign. Ada Seegmiller was appointed to her place. It is interesting to note that some of these women were not aware of their names on the ticket and did not know they were running for office until told they were elected. This women's council took office the 1st of January 1912.

During their two years term there were three Town Board babies born and the women did all the work in their homes. They made ordinances to keep the stock off the street, to levy a dog tax, and to have the corrals moved fifty feet from the streets. They levied tax to have a dyke built across flood canyon to divert the water from sweeping across town which it had always done. They built foot bridges over irrigation ditches to save jumping; they stopped alcoholic liquors from coming in on the U. S. mail; they had the cemetery surveyed and sold lots with deeds to them, besides other minor acts. Tamar has said, "We were a congenial group and enjoyed our association very much. We made an example of progress that the men have had to work to live up to since that time." Four years later Tamar was elected to the same position but resigned to give opportunity to another woman.

The summer of 1925 she took up practical nursing and went from home to home in this service. She assisted in the arrival of three or four hundred babies. When the Kanab hospital was established in 1937 she took an eight hour shift and spent one of her most enjoyable years, giving service and acquiring knowledge in the profession. Because of her husband's serious illness she had to quit to take care of him until his death 20 January 1938. By this time her own health was failing so she could not go on with the work.

Since her days in school she had had a desire to write, and when only about nine or ten years old she sent a piece to the Juvenile Instructor which published her article. She has grieved that she had not the opportunity to develop this talent more fully. Through the years from 1910 on she has used her love of writing in a local way, mostly giving sentiments at funerals to give comfort and to teach the gospel to the bereaved. Her whole aim in life has been to make use of what God had given her, and give Him the honor, if honor there be.

ALMERA LITTLE, the oldest daughter of Charles Leo Little and Almera Woodard Johnson was born 17 September 1894 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah. Almera was to experience several changes of residence and a good deal of pioneering life in her early years. She began her schooling in Fredonia, Arizona where her first teacher was Ethel Stewart. Her next years of school were in one room log houses in Lovell and Penrose, Wyoming.

The Big Horn country had been opened up by "Mormon" colonists in 1900. Almera's father saw an opportunity to get land and make a home. So in May 1901 much against the desires of her mother, though conceding to the husband's judgement, the family began the long trip by teams and covered wagons. Though only a child Almera knew it was a hardship on her mother. First there was near three months of slow, wearisome travel, then camping in tents while logs were prepared and a house built. Even then they were not settled for long, an unfortunate purchase of land under a high water ditch necessitated the next move to Lovell to another log house with dirt roof and floor. Then in about 1905 when Almera was eleven years old her father homesteaded a farm at Penrose. They lived on the farm through the summer, and in the fall the children walked two and a half miles to school, but for the winter they lived in town in a two room log house.

One of the experiences of these days clear in Almera's memory is her baptism in the Shoshone River when she was eight years old. John Houston who officiated, later was her school teacher. She recalls too when baby Ross got his finger cut off by a brother just a little older while trying to wield a hatchet and help peel logs as he saw the older boys do. The typhoid epidemic when she was thirteen years old stands out, for brother Ross and sister Dora became ill. Ross soon recovered, but Dora lingered for weeks and they all despaired of her life. The Elders came in each day and administered to her; the mother listened for the hopeful words of promise for recovery, but they didn't come. The child grew steadily worse and it seemed she would not be with them for long. Neighbors were kind and helpful, but for six weeks there was no easing up for father and mother. There were no good doctors to understand the case. Prayer and faith in God seemed their only hope. One evening when the Elders came in to administer to her they asked if it would not be best to dedicate the sick girl to the Lord and let His will be done to take away, or restore to health, lest she suffer more. This was done. The next day the father learned of a new doctor from Utah who had just begun to practice in Lovell. The doctor was brought to the home, and soon had the case under control. Dora started to get well almost immediately. She grew to womanhood, married and had a lovely family.

At Penrose Almera met Elmer R. Hopkin who also was a pioneer of Big Horn Basin. He had gone there with her parents in 1900. On 3 October 1912 Almera and Elmer were married in the Latter-day Saints Temple at Salt Lake City, Utah. Three sons and two daughters blessed their union. Their home was in Big Horn until November 1923 then they moved to Utah first to Delta then to Cedar City, and in 1929 they settled in Provo where the children had fine opportunity for schooling.

On February 11th, 1942 her husband passed away and she was left alone to care for her two youngest boys. The three older children were married. Three months after the World War II broke out in March 1942 her son, Elmer, joined the Navy, and in October of the same year he was sent to the Solomon Islands - a combat area. In February 1943 she received word from the war department that he had been killed. This was a severe blow, she felt that it was more than she could bear. She was now entirely alone. Her youngest son, Stanford, had left for the Navy on January 10th just ten days before Elmer was killed. At no time in her life has she felt so dependent on her Heavenly Father for comfort and guidance. Her only consolation was that she felt sure her son had been called home for a wise purpose - he was needed on the other side.

In 1946 she moved to Sunset Ward of Provo, and in 1950 to 1952 she served her church as Stake Missionary. During this time she met William A. Simmons of Spanish Fork. They were married 15 February 1951. He is a fine man and they are very happy.

Almera has worked in the different organizations of her church through the years of her life. Her last call in March 1953 was to be President of the Relief Society of the Sunset Ward. She feels very humble in so responsible a position, but has learned to have faith in God, and knows that He does not assign any task without preparing a way for its fulfillment. She has a sweet cheerful disposition. It is good to know her.

ALMERA LITTLE, born 17 September 1894 at Kanab, Kane County, Utah, married 3 October 1912 in the Salt Lake L. D. S. Temple, Elmer Royal Hopkin, son of John and Mary (Pennington) Hopkin, he was born 6 October 1889 at Croyden, Morgan County, Utah, and died 11 February 1942 at Powell, Park County, Wyoming, and was buried there 15 February.

They have five children - all living except the fourth, a son, who died in the war in 1943.

Almera married the second time 15 February 1951 in Salt Lake City, to William A. Simmons, son of Benjamin F. and Ann D. (Warner) Simmons.

He was born 18 February 1885 at Spanish Fork, Utah. She resides in Provo, Utah. He died 21 February 1957.

DORA LITTLE, daughter of Charles Leo and Almera Woodard (Johnson) Little, who had been married 17th of October 1890, is the fourth child of a family of ten. Her paternal grandparents are James A. Little and Mary Jane Lytle, the maternal grandparents Joel Hills Johnson, and Margaret Threldkeld. Dora was born 13 August 1896 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah. She grew up as most any normal child in pleasant surroundings with a wonderful father and mother to guide and direct her.

The family moved to Fredonia, just over the line in northern Arizona where they lived about three years, then father was attracted to a new 'Mormon' Colony in Big Horn Basin in Wyoming. It had been founded in 1900 by an apostle, Owen Woodruff, and the church was encouraging people to go there. The wife and mother, a frail little woman with six children, was opposed to leaving their home, and traveling a thousand miles by team and wagons to an unsettled country. However, loyal to her husband's judgment and desire made preparations for the journey, and on the 17th day of May 1901 the family left their home and began the long trek in company with the family of Hyrum Shumway. They arrived in Burlington near the Big Horn River the 4th of July where they rested several days then continued on to Byron the main settlement located on the Shoshone River.

Though only five years old Dora remembers well the crossing of this stream. The nearest bridge was fifty miles away at Cody. Mr Shumway had crossed on horseback and persuaded them that it was safe. The father dubious and reluctant never-the-less decided to take the chance. The two wagons fastened one behind the other and drawn by four horses were driven into the high flood waters. In midstream the horse went out of sight and for a time it seemed they would all be drowned in the treacherous river. Mother with her children around her prayed fervently to the Father in Heaven for protection. Her prayer was answered and they landed safely on the opposite bank. Dora has many times heard her father say that he had never prayed so hard in all his life.

They bought land and built a log cabin, living in tents in the meantime. They lived here about a year then moved to Lovell where another log house was built. The roof was dirt, also the floor. Every morning it was the children's job to carry water from the ditch and sprinkle the floor to settle the dust for the day. In 1906 when Dora was ten years old her father took up a homestead near Garland in Clark County, Wyoming. They lived on the farm through the summer, and moved into the village of Penrose for the winter so the children could attend school.

Like other children Dora began her schooling at six years of age, went to different schools, and remembered incidents from all. In her third grade their teacher used to put clothes pins on the unruly tongues that could not refrain from talking; At Penrose the school-house was a one room log cabin, and the children walked two and a half miles from the farm until the family moved into town for the winter. The year Dora was twelve and in the sixth grade she had an unforgettable experience. The older school children took turns going to the river for drinking water for the school. One day in February she and another girl walked out on the ice to the waterhole. The ice broke and Dora fell through with one arm and leg sticking up. Her companion managed to pull her out before the swirling water could carry her under the ice. She was grateful to the Heavenly Father who had spared her life.

In the hard times of pioneering this new country the family had none of the comforts and but few of the necessities. Their beds were straw filled ticks laid on bunks made of boards. All the fruit they had was wild buffalo, or bullberries gathered along the river and dried for winter use. If the children found an apple or an orange in their Christmas stocking they were the happiest children on earth.

Because of poor health the mother was advised by the doctors to leave that cold country; so in October 1915 the family left Penrose and returned to Utah, settling in Duchesne County, where the father purchased a ranch two and a half miles north of Neola.

It was here on the 12th of June 1918 that Dora met Acel Forest Wimmer whom she married 12 November the same year at Duchesne. This was the year of the terrible influenza epidemic at the close of the World War I. It was on the 17th of July 1919 they received their temple blessing and were sealed for eternity. Mr. Wimmer had previously been married to Lucell Christensen on the 6th of February 1912. She died 20 May 1917 leaving three small children; so Dora took on the responsibility of rearing these children with her own six who came along as time went by.

In October 1922 Dora and her family moved to Logan, Utah where they have lived since. There the husband took over the management of the shop for the White Sewing Machine Company.

Dora and her husband have been faithful and active members of their church, working in various capacities through the auxiliary organizations. At Neola he had been president of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association, in Logan Fourth Ward he was superintendent of Sunday School, and in the 16th Ward was First Counselor in the Bishopric. His work in the Priesthood quorums among the boys has had a fine and good influence on these youths. Dora has had many experiences which has built up a strong faith and reliance on her Heavenly Father for his protecting care and guidance of her life.

She recalls that when she was only eleven years the family was stricken with that dread disease, typhoid fever, herself and younger brother Ross being afflicted. He soon recovered, but she lingered and it seemed she was not long for this earth, a crop of red pimples broke out on her body with intense itching. The high fever sent her into a state of unconsciousness and delirium. Her parents had her administered to each day, and anxiously listened for the words of hope for her recovery, but they came not. She grew steadily worse until the parents and Elders decided it best to dedicate the child to the Lord and leave it to His will to heal, or release her from her suffering. The very next day the father learned of a new doctor who had just begun practice in Lovell. Under his care the child immediately began to improve and was restored to health after months of suffering. They have all felt that this doctor was sent to them in answer to their prayers, for he found that the child's body was literally decaying and her life measured in hours.

In gratitude Dora has been ready to serve in the work of the Lord. Besides her household duties and the rearing of nine children she has found time to work as a Sunday School and Primary teacher, and once a month visit the homes of her district as Visiting Teacher for the Relief Society.

In 1950 she joined the Thomas X Smith camp of the Daughters of the Utah Pioneers. That same year she accepted the position of historian for the camp, and held this position until 1952 when she was elected Captain of the camp. Residence: 164 West 4th North, Logan, Utah.

EZEKIEL ROSS LITTLE, son of Charles Leo and Almera Woodward (Johnson) Little, was born 6 May 1900 in Fredonia, Coconino County, Arizona. At the age of one year he moved with the family to Lovell, Big Horn, Wyoming. The younger years of his life was spent in herding sheep for his father. At the age of fifteen his father sold out and moved to Ogden, Utah. They spent a year there then moved to Uintah Basin where he again herded sheep for his father and did some farming.

It was here in Uintah that he met Laura Wilkerson. They were married 22 June 1921 in the Salt Lake Temple. They spent the first year of married life in Elsinore, Sevier County, Utah. Here their first child was born, a daughter, Flora. He next moved to Marysvale in Piute County where he engaged in mining. From there he went to Delta, Millard County, Utah. For four years he worked at farming and raising alfalfa seed. He also worked for the Union Pacific Railroad.

Here they had the sad experience of losing all their belongings when their home burned down. They barely escaped with their lives. Everything gone now, with their three small children and baby LeRay only two weeks old, they went to Salt Lake City to seek employment. Ross worked for a Safeway grocery store and Laura became saleslady at Auerbach's department store.

It was a hard struggle for three or four years then they moved to Provo, Utah where he worked for the Pacific Pipe Plant for ten years. He next became crane operator for the Geneva Steel Plant where he has worked for another ten years.

At Provo four more healthy happy children were born to them, making seven in all. Vernon, their oldest son, served in the U.S. Marines for two years and was in four major battles in the South Pacific; yet came home without a scratch. He graduated from the Brigham Young University with a master's degree.

The oldest daughter is married and lives in Honolulu, Hawaii where they are in business. The younger children are in school.

With the rising cost of living, Laura has felt a need for again seeking employment, that they may give the children the desired opportunities. She worked for a time for Dr. Mansfield then at the Utah State Hospital. Though they have no outstanding features to boast about they are a healthy normal family, happy for each other and the many privileges afforded in this wonderful country of ours.

JOHN WOOTON ROBINSON, JR., born 2 January 1887 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is son of John W. Robinson and Claudia Augusta Little. His childhood days were spent in Kanab where he attended school and the L. D. S. Church auxiliaries. He was ordained to the Aaronic Priesthood and Office of Deacon at the regular age of twelve years, and began his work and progress in the priesthood. Through the years he has held various positions of responsibility in his church; class leader, Superintendent of Young Mens Mutual Improvement Association, counselor in the Branch Presidency, and counselor in the Bishopric of Carlin Ward. In Carlin, Nevada he played an interesting part in the building up of the L. D. S. Church.

But first, he left Kanab with his mother and family after his father's death in 1904. They lived first at Roy, Utah, then in Ogden, where he went to Business College and graduated in the class of 1911. He then entered the employ of Utah Idaho Central Railroad, working in their operating division. This position he held for several years before resigning to work for the Southern Pacific Railroad at Carlin.

On November 26, 1913 he married Mary Olive Stone, at Ogden. Bishop W. O. Ridges of the 9th Ward pronouncing the ceremony. March 17, 1915 they were sealed for time and eternity by the authority of the Melchizedek Priesthood in the L. D. S. Temple at Salt Lake City. They have three daughters.

In 1920 John moved his family to Carlin, Nevada and began his work for the S. P. R. R. Company. Upon their arrival they found no Latter-day Saints there. The residents of Carlin had been given false ideas about the "Mormons" and their leader, Brigham Young, and were very prejudiced. There was nothing they could say about them that was quite bad enough.

In 1922 a few families, employees of the R. R. company moved in and before long twenty Mormon families had settled in Carlin - all employees of the R. R. company. They began holding Sunday School and Sacrament meetings in private homes. Soon missionaries from the California Mission arrived and organized a Branch of the Mission. John was made Counselor in the Presidency. Attendance at their services increased till it was necessary to seek larger quarters.

John suggested to the Branch President that they ask for a meeting with the railroad officials and explain to them that there were twenty "Mormon" families employed there, but that they would not stay long if there was no chapel in which to worship. This suggestion was carried out, and the railroad officials considering the transient population of employees, and their respect for Robinson's honest and efficient service for the past two years replied, "We have you d-- Mormons working for us in Utah, and if a chapel will keep you here we will just about build you one." The Branch Presidency advised what was needed and the company did a great deal to assist them. They leased them a building lot for one dollar a year on which to erect the chapel, and two car loads of material arrived in a few days. The Branch building committee began work at once. The chapel was soon completed with steam heat furnished by the company from the large boilers at the roundhouse.

When the President moved away and the Branch was re-organized, John and his wife were set apart as heads of the Mutual Improvement Association of Carlin Branch of the California Mission. Later they worked as District Superintendent and President for the same organizations. This required visiting each Branch once a month - a trip of about three hundred miles. From a small beginning in Carlin the church has grown and is now the Carlin Ward of Humbolt Stake. On October 18, 1942 when the Ward was organized, John was ordained a High Priest and made First counselor in the Bishopric which position he held for five years.

Now in 1952 John is an active member of his church, and still an employee of the Southern Pacific Railroad. After thirty faithful years he is trusted and respected for his faithful services, and his life as an upright man.

MARY HEVA JOHNSON was born at Johnson, a few miles northeast of Kanab, Kane County, Utah, the first child of a family of six girls and three boys born to Elmer Wood and Mary Jane (Little) Johnson.

Heva, as she was called, was reared in the small Mormon settlement of Johnson where people were true pioneers living hardy lives in a frontier Indian country. Heva gathered saleratus for yeast and bread making; she milked cows morning and night, even in school season, and did her share of wood cutting.

When Heva was eleven years old her family moved to Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico as colonizers, and to escape polygamy persecution. The journey by covered wagon took three months, and Heva knitted a pair of stockings on the way.

Life in the little colony was full of work and responsibility for the young as well as the older. She was only fourteen or fifteen years when asked to teach in the primary school as assistant to John M. Mills. She had to study diligently to keep ahead of her pupils. She taught a Sunday School class and attended choir practice regularly.

When eighteen, one evening at a party dressed in a white dress and wearing flowers she attracted young Christopher Layton Galbraith who escorted her home. In those days young people were expected to be home by ten o'clock, and Heva's father often watched for their return much to the annoyance of the young man. On the 23rd of March 1895 Chris and Heva were married at Colonia Diaz by an apostle, George Teasdale.

Christopher's early life had been spent in Kaysville, Utah, where at the age of five years he lost a thumb and three fingers of his right hand in a hay chopping machine. When sixteen years his father gave him a heavy silver watch which he kept all his life, and at his death it was given to his son, Elmer. When nineteen years old Chris helped drive a band of horses to Mexico when his father, William Wilkie Galbraith, moved his three families to Colonia Diaz.

Shortly after marriage Chris was called to serve as a L. D. S. missionary to England. Not having the means on hand he asked for a year's time to accumulate the necessary funds. The young couple worked diligently, and they prospered so that in a year they had the needed amount. Their first daughter, Mary J "Mamie" was born 29 March 1896. Soon after this event Chris said goodbye to his young family and started for England, stopping at Salt Lake City to receive his endowment and blessings in the Latter-day Saints Temple. Many interesting experiences are recorded in his diary, among them he tells of being taken by a mob to the Thames River where the mob would "baptise them." As they neared the water's edge his companion, Hyrum M. Smith, commanded "Hands off" in such a tone of voice and authority that the mob released them and they were free to get away.

Chris was a witness to the coronation of Queen Victoria while in England. He was released to come home six months before the regular time because of his father's serious illness and subsequent death. On board ship homebound the Elders tried to explain the Gospel to fellow passengers, but none were interested, none seemed to believe in God, till they encountered a raging storm then many turned to prayer.

Chris and Heva lived in Colonia Diaz until 1902, then because of sickness and climatic conditions they decided to go to Idaho. He was so sick that at each transfer point enroute they made a bed for him in the depot. They settled first in Lorenzo, Idaho where Chris farmed and Heva kept the post office. Later they built a general merchandise store whose slogan was "High Quality - Low Prices." In 1910 the building was moved to Thornton where the store's customers were less hindered by the spring high water of the Snake River. However, because of giving too much credit his store failed.

In 1912 they moved to a 320 acre dry farm near Ammon, Idaho. There rattlesnakes were plentiful and the family dog, Shorty, was bitten so many times in trying to kill them that he became immune to their poison. Itha, their daughter, one day attempted to kill a snake with an ax. After striking the first blow she raised the ax for the second blow, but the snake had disappeared. Looking up she saw it dangling over her head attached to the ax.

In 1919 Chris sold his farms in Idaho and moved to Ogden, Utah that his children might have better school and social life. He entered the real estate business and tried other ventures, and finally founded the A B C Coal Company at 156 - 32nd street which is still, in 1953, a thriving business managed by his daughter, Mamie, and widowed daughter-in-law, Elmer's wife.

The Galbraith family had their share of sickness and adversity. During the flu epidemic in 1920 eleven of the family were down at one time, and one at least was near death's door, but with two attending nurses and doctor's care they all pulled through.

The family have all been religious and active in Church work in the different places they have resided. Chris has an enviable record for honesty. He never short weighed his customers.

Chris and Heva were very devoted to each other through their forty two years of married life. On 28 October 1937 she died as the result of shock from a cancer operation. Chris was very lonely the nine years he outlived her. He passed away 8 July 1946 at the Dee Hospital, and was buried July 11th in the Aultorest Memorial Park in Ogden beside his wife where they both expect to rise with immortal bodies in the morning of the first resurrection.

LUCY ANN JOHNSON, daughter of Elmer Wood and Mary Jane (Little) Johnson was the second of nine children born 9 January 1880 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah. This was her home until five or six years of age. Then her parents moved to Mexico because of persecution heaped upon the polygamists. After three months journey by covered wagon the family settled in the small community of Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico which had been founded two years earlier. Their first shelter was a tent until an adobe house could be built.

Lulu, as she was called, attended the elementary school which was a two-room ungraded school until about 1895 when Charles R. Fillerup, a graduate and a teacher from the Brigham Young Academy in Provo, Utah came to take charge. Under his direction the pupils were grouped according to age and abilities and the school organized on a grade basis. Lulu's life was similar to that of the young people of the community - home work and church activities. Besides this her mother had a candy business and Lulu was employed in the candy shop.

Early in the year 1898 she first met Erastus Kruse Fillerup, a brother to the school principal, who had come to teach in the school. He had just returned from a mission and his spirituality and high ideals were felt by his pupils and many were influenced to a desire for higher education and better living.

On the 18 May 1899 Lulu and Erastus were married in the Salt Lake Temple. The following sketch was written by their daughter, Irva.

"My father Erastus Kruse Fillerup, son of Anders Peter and Caroline Rasmine (Rasmussen) Fillerup, was born in Lake View, Utah 16 February 1875, the fifth of nine children, six boys and three girls. His parents were immigrants from Denmark.

He attended the Lake View Elementary School then entered the Brigham Young Academy graduating from that institution in 1895.

On the 31 of May he was set apart by Heber J. Grant and on the first of June of the same year he left for a mission the Southern States where he served two and a half years - most of that time was spent in Tennessee. He reported his mission at the Church Office 26 December 1897, and was called by President Wilford Woodruff of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to teach in the elementary school of Colonia Diaz, Mexico, which was a Church school. He was also instructed to remain in Mexico until he was called elsewhere.

Here he met Lucy Anna Johnson and on the 18th of May 1899 married her in the Salt Lake Temple. Lacking a proper chaperon they were not allowed to travel the long distance from Diaz, Mexico to Salt Lake City together. Lucy Anna was sent ahead with a Mrs. Galbraith to stay with his parents until he arrived for the wedding. They were the parents of six children the youngest of whom, Drexel was born five days after his father's death.

Erastus Kruse took a very active part in all the church organizations in the Ward, and was a Counselor in the Bishopric for some time. He loved to take part in dramatics, and led the Ward Choir.

In 1905 he was called to teach horticulture in the Juarez Stake Academy at Colonia Juarez, Mexico. There again, after but a short time, he was called into the Bishopric, and to work on the M. I. A. Stake Board. As band and choir leader along with his other activities he had meetings every night of the month but one.

Erastus Kruse was a friend to everybody and tried to influence those in his classes with a desire to get an education. To his students he used to say, 'Set your aims high and work to reach them. There is no honor in reaching goals that require little or no effort.' He had a way of holding his students up to their best without preaching or urging. It is said that none slept in his classes.

Death came to Erastus Kruse Fillerup 2 July 1910 in the little town of Pearson, Mexico, he was doing construction work on a bridge and fell, being killed instantly. He was buried in Colonia Juarez. The Bishop made the remark that it would take ten men to replace him. "

In 1912 when the Mexican Colonists were forced to abandon their homes and possessions because of the revolution Lulu with her six children went to Tuscon, Arizona where she stayed about a year. The next two years she lived on Provo Bench - now Orem. Her children attended the Lake View Elementary School and the B. Y. U. Training School. During this time her health was poor and it was a struggle to provide and care for her family. She moved to Ammon, Idaho to be near her parents and sisters who had homesteaded farms there. Lulu went out on maternity cases and did general nursing, caring for invalids and other work giving fine service to her fellow sisters.

After six years she moved to Logan, Utah in 1921 where her children could have opportunity for better schooling, and she secured steady work cooking for the Fraternity houses. During the summer months she was employed by the Deseret Livestock Company on their ranch at Evanston, Wyoming.

Later on a trip to Cedar City to visit her daughter, Thelda, she met a man who was energetic and ambitious in his work. By trade he was a carpenter and builder, and built houses to rent and for sale. He also did brick laying and other work in the construction of his houses. He was a widower and alone as she was. On the 19th of April 1930 Lulu married Martin Ray Tanner in Salt Lake City, Utah. For a time they lived in Cedar City then moved to Salt Lake in 1946 where he operated apartment houses. Lulu ever ambitious to be doing continued to work. For awhile she sewed for the Deseret Industries, she also worked as pastry cook for the Z. C. M. I. cafeteria.

With his failing health they moved to Mesa, Arizona where they live quietly and happily doing temple work and other activities in their Church.

JUNIATTA JOHNSON, daughter of Elmer Wood and Mary Jane (Little) Johnson was born 10 April 1883 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah. When four years old her parents moved to Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico. They traveled by team and covered wagons. To the children it was a picnic, but not so for the older folk.

Though she was very young one incident on the journey left a deep impression on her mind. At Lee's Ferry on the Colorado River they ferried over the stream. The road leading up from the water was very steep, she was so afraid they would fall back into the river. After traveling three months they arrived at their destination. The colony had been founded two years earlier by other families. All were pioneers in an alien country. Her parents went through many hardships.

Here in Colonia Diaz, Juniatta attended the two room school which she saw changed to a graded school under the direction of Charles and Erastus Fillerup-teachers who were graduates of the B. Y. University at Provo, Utah. Under their influence she developed a great desire to be a student of that school but knew her parents could not send her, for the family was large and it was difficult to produce just the necessities of life. In her early twenties she went to Utah for a short trip, so her family thought, but she knew before leaving home that she would stay to work and find a way to go to school. It was three and a half years before she came home. She had completed a course in Home Economics.

Her teaching career began in Mexico at the Juarez Stake Academy the fall of 1908. After returning to the B. Y. U. in 1909 for two more years of college she taught in the high schools of Rexburg, Idaho, Spanish Fork and Brigham City, Utah.

On September 14, 1916 she married Abel Beck in the Salt Lake Temple and went to live in Spanish Fork, his home town. In the spring of 1923 they moved to California where he was employed for more than twenty five years by the San Diego Gas and Electric Company. They lived in a company owned house in El Cajon. Though their friends in Spanish Fork had said, "You'll be back in a year," they found contentment and joy in their surroundings and work and expect to remain there the rest of their days. In another year he will retire so they are building a small house of their own. They have one son, Elmer Abel, born 16 November 1923.

Juniatta has known much of sorrow in her earlier life that would have soured many another, but she bravely struggled through and retained her sweetness, and the rippling laughter that was part of her charm. She was a pretty girl with sparkling eyes, natural curl in her waving brown hair, and a dimple in her cheek when she smiled. She has a charming personality with warmth and understanding, though to strangers her reserve is sometimes considered coldness. In 1912, when because of Mexican War conditions, her family was forced to leave everything and move to Idaho. She along with others felt the great emptiness of early home ties and memories swept away.

In the early years of her marriage, which had been postponed till rather late in life, she had a sad experience of sending her husband off to war, however, the armistice was signed just in time to save his sailing over seas. All his excess luggage had been sent home in expectation of a sailing date. The first eight years of their married life was rather unhappy because they had no children, and both were anxious for a family. When the son was born to them she said, "It was the happiest moment of my life. I had wanted him so long, if ever a child was prayed to earth - he was. We wanted other children - a little girl, but it wasn't to be, so we loved and enjoyed our one son."

He graduated from high school in 1941, then came the next war - that terrible time of heartache when mothers sent their eighteen year old boys off to war. March 11, 1942 she took her son to the train and said goodbye. It brought memories of long ago when his father had marched away. Then three long years of worry, heartache, and prayers - Prayer, the great sustaining power through it all. She had been thankful that his work was such that he was not forced to take human life. He was discharged April 10, 1945.

JUNIATTA is not unmindful of good times as well as the sad. She recalls that in the summer of 1915 she and two other teachers went to the World's Fair in San Francisco and had a wonderful time. Her husband has had a vacation each summer and together they traveled about. A trip here and trip there brought recreation and pleasure. The years of watching the son grow up were happy and full of satisfaction. Through God's blessings she has come to feel a security for this life and a hope for the hereafter.

She says, "At the age of 70 years I am in fairly good health. I have worked in some of the church organizations since I was 14 years old. At present I am Visiting Teacher and Theology Class Leader in the Relief Society. I know that God lives, that the gospel is true, that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and that Joseph Smith is a true prophet of God. My prayers have been answered many times and I know that only through living the gospel plan will we find contentment and happiness in this world, and throughout Eternity. "

ABEL BECK, born 4 January 1889 in Spanish Fork, Utah, is one of a family of nine children. A son of Alfred Roger Millner and Johanne Sophia (Erson) Beck. He attended the elementary school of Spanish Fork, but went out for himself when quite young. His parents were farmers and struggled to get along. They were not able to help him in obtaining higher education. Whatever he attained was through his own efforts.

Later he studied Electrical Engineering and worked for different electric companies in Utah before going to California in 1923. He has worked for the San Diego Gas and Electric Company for more than 25 years. He has always been interested and active in civic affairs. He is Past Commander of the American Legion and Past President of Rotary and Toastmaster Clubs of El Cajon, California and is still active in these clubs.

He has a hobby of collecting rare coins and is never happier than when performing some act of kindness for his fellow man. It matters not whether they are rich or poor, black or white. His love of people is an outstanding characteristic that bridges many a gap and removed the reserve or aloofness of would be strangers. To paraphrase a few lines from Sam Walter Foss we could say, He sees from his house by the side of the road. By the side of the highway of life. The men who press with the ardor of hope, The men who are faint with strife. But he turns not away from their smiles nor their tears, Both parts of an infinite plan. He lives in a house by the side of the road And is a friend to man.

Mining Company in the state of Durango, Mexico. There he worked with and under the direction of his uncle, David B. Little, and was a member of the household at La Cabeza.

Elmer Johnson was honest and upright and thoughtful of others. He was one of the cleanest and most wholesome of young men it has been the good fortune of the compiler to know. He had a pleasing personality, and was like by everyone for his kindness and genial disposition. As a young man he loved fun and helped the crowd to have a good time, and always on a high level, never a low or smutty joke was allowed to mar the beauty of friendship among his companions.

On 3 or 4 April 1912 he married Annie Richardson, a schoolmate, and companion teacher, which association brought about a warmth and understanding that led to their trip to Salt Lake City to be married in the Temple. Friends and relatives in Utah suggested that because of the Mexican Revolution then in progress he remain in Utah. However, he returned to Mexico and in about three months was forced to leave with the other Mormon Colonists.

For a time he remained near the border and found work in Arizona until he had a stroke and was paralyzed. He then went to Idaho where his parents and other family members were. Later he and family moved to Clinton, near Ogden, Utah, where they bought a house and a few acres of ground.

Though he improved and was able to work and lived for five years he never regained his speech or the use of his vocal organs. It was a great trial for he had a marvelous tenor voice and loved to sing. Through his illness and affliction the song in his heart could not be stilled. Though he could not say the words he hummed the tunes. Through it all he exhibited unbelievable patience, matched only by that of his cheerful and loving wife. At no time did she allow discouragement or tears to show in his presence.

Elmer had a younger brother, Lorin, of whom he was very fond. He was a fine young man with a good voice which he wished to train and cultivate so went to New York for this purpose, but took the flu and died the 1st of February 1920. Elmer went to Idaho to attend the funeral on February 11th. The death of this loved brother was a shock from which he never recovered. He died the next day, February 12, 1920. They are buried side by side in the Rosehill Cemetery in Idaho Falls, Idaho.

His widow, left with three small children was unable to work their small farm alone so moved into Ogden where she successfully taught the underprivileged children in the special school for the subnormal. November 11, 1929 she married the second time, Jesse A. Child of Riverdale, Utah. In this marriage she had one daughter, Yvonne, born at Riverdale. This marriage proved unsuccessful and led to divorce. Annie, again took up teaching in the public schools of Utah.

In 1952 and 1953 she served as a missionary in Mexico for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

ABBY JOHNSON is the fifth child of Elmer Wood and Mary Jane (Little) Johnson, she was born on a rainy day and rainy week, 22 January 1888 in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico. Her parents had arrived from Kanab, Utah only two months earlier. Their home was a tent, a temporary shelter until the father could make adobes and build a house. The continued rain soaked the tent and it leaked. Pans and kettles were set on the bed and elsewhere to keep the occupants dry.

Her childhood memories are those common to most children of her day, her playthings were all home made. They lived too far from railroad or city where toys could be bought. As a girl, she helped care for the home and worked in the candy shop with her parents. Their pleasures and entertainments were simple but enjoyed fully. Abby recalls the trips made to Colonia Juarez, or Dublan for Stake Conferences. They traveled by team and wagons in company with others, and camped for night where they grouped around campfires and told stories and sang songs. At Conference they enjoyed the hospitality of friends whose homes were thrown open to them, and then in return were received at another Conference held in Diaz.

Their dances were the chief social activity and the older folk who pioneered this small colony were watchful against the intrusion of outsiders; so when Andrew and Burrell Kendrick, two well drillers, came to the community, it was sometime before they were accepted in the dance hall. Abby met and lost her heart at once to the tall, dark and handsome younger Kendrick, but though she was 18 years of age refused dates for she felt her parents would not approve. Some time later when her father announced at home that the Kendrick boys had been baptized and joined the Church her heart leaped, and her faced beamed. She was unable to hide her admiration.

Association and acquaintance grew, when she was nearly twenty years they were married 9 October 1907 in the Salt Lake Temple. She was made Mrs. Charles Burrell Kendrick, not 'till death do you part, " but for Eternity. He had worked and saved his money for a long honeymoon. They visited her sister's family in Idaho, went to Los Angeles where they had a boat ride on the ocean and went through the warship, Maryland, all very wonderful to a girl from a small country town. They went to Marathon, Texas to visit his people. His parents were cordial and happy to see them, but unhappy because their two boys had joined the Latter-day Saints Church.

After a three months honeymoon, they returned to Colonia Diaz and bought a small house near her mother's home. On 26 July 1908 a baby boy was born to complete their happiness, but how brief his stay. When just eight months old baby, Burrell, Jr., was taken suddenly ill and died before they could get word to the father who was at work in Texas. This was just the first of many sorrows to come to Abby. Their second child was born 22 January 1910 and named Elmer Kenyon, after his two grandfathers. On 12 December 1911 a black haired, hazel-eyed girl- the image of her father came to bless their home. They named her Loie. Much of the time the father was away from home at work, when convenient she was with him.

In 1912 during the Mexican Revolution, the American Colonists in Mexico were forced to leave their homes and possessions with only a few hours notice to pack the most necessary articles and get started. Abby was with her husband at Pearson, Chihuahua, Mexico, where he worked for a large American construction company, at the time of the order to leave. She boarded the crowded train at Pearson, with her two babies and a sisters four year old girl. Her brother-in-law's sister, Geneva Black, gave her some assistance. Burrells company made arrangements for hotel accomodations in El Paso, Texas for the wives and children of their employees, but through some mistake Abby's name was not on the list, so at 2:30 A.M. when the train arrived in El Paso, she had to seek shelter for herself and little ones. Her parents and brothers and sisters were also driven out but they were in Hatchita, New Mexico having traveled in a caravan of wagons. When it was learned that they could not return to their homes her parents and brothers and the Kendrick boys decided to go to Idaho and there homestead dry farms. Kind Providence kept veiled the incidents of the next few months. With the coming of winter, and work and money scarce, Burrell Kendrick, and his brother, Andrew, decided to go to Nevada to get a job drilling in the oil fields to get money to develop and improve their farms. They left October 30, 1912 promising to send for the wives soon as they could find a place to live. Only a week later Abby received word that her husband had been accidentally killed and he was buried before she even received the word. Alone! with two small children and another expected in two and one half months. What should she do? She was a stranger without funds for Burrell had no insurance. True, her parents and family were there, but they too had lost everything in the exodus from Mexico.

Though she had her moments and days of deep despair, hopelessness, and loneliness she found comfort in the words of Paul to the Hebrews- chapter 12. "For whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth and scourges every son whom he receiveth." She had a strong faith in God's care and could say, He has also given me strength to bear up under my trials. She was blessed with wise counsel from her parents and the kindness of the people of Iona Ward in her time of distress will never be forgotten.

An incident during this period has added much to her faith in the life hereafter, and showed her that our loved ones though unseen by mortal eyes are watching over us. One day a man came to her door, introduced himself as Brother Tom Nixon, and said he would appreciate it if she would let him know if there was anything he could do for her. Abby had met his wife, but had not before seen him. She thanked him for his consideration and said she would. Later she learned from her brother-in-law, Shirley Black, the story. It seems that Mr. Nixon had a dream in which a tall, dark, young man came to him, and pointing to a sad looking young woman sitting on a bench with three small children around her conveyed the thought that he would appreciate anything he could do for the woman. Nixon was puzzled, for he knew not the young man, nor the woman. Some-time later he saw Abby in town and recognized the woman of his dream. Abby has been very grateful to him for his kind help through many years. She is grateful to her father for a bit of advice that has been a good influence in her life. One day when she was very low in her sorrow he said to her, "My dear girl, everything that happens to us in this life will do one of two things. It will either sweeten our life or make us bitter. Never let it make you bitter." She struggled on trying to remember that God's love and chastening should make her better and more fit for heaven. Her expected child was born 26 January 1913, a fair-haired girl named Ellafair.

Time is a kind healer, when Ellafair was about six years old her mother met Nathan Robinson from Pocatello, he also had lived in Mexico and was widowed with four children who needed a mother's care. They were married 5 November 1918. Rearing a mixed family is not easy, and brought many troubles and heartaches. But through wisdom and sincere efforts she won the love of her step-children, and her own children were thankful for the father she gave them. She was an exceptionally good manager, and had to be to make financial ends meet for a large group. Three sons and one daughter were added to the family in this marriage. Her daughter, Ellafair, has said, "Mother always acknowledged the help and goodness of the Lord in giving her health and strength and wisdom to meet her problems." "Dad was always good to her, and to us. We loved him dearly."

Robinson's health had never been very good and in 1941 grew worse. He was now brakeman on a passenger train and in June while on a trip to Greenriver he had a stroke, was taken off the train and sent to Montpelier Hospital. There he died three days later, 13 June, 1941. Again Abby was alone to face hard, fearful and lonesome years. During World War II all three of her sons were in active service, two of them overseas. Without faith and prayer's she feels she could not have gone through those trying years. She is grateful and feels very fortunate that all her sons returned safe and sound.

Her remedy for the many lonely hours has been work and service in her church. She has held responsible positions in all the auxiliary organizations, and has especially enjoyed working with the young people. She was never too busy to visit the sick, and in time of death to give comfort and service in the home. During the twenty years she lived at 242

South 13th Street in Pocatello she was present to help the doctor when babies arrived in the neighborhood.

While her youngest son, Don, was on his mission she met Joseph H. Gooch of Blackfoot, Idaho and again found happiness. They were married November 1947, and live in Blackfoot. Her daughter, Ellafair, says, "She has set a wonderful example of love and faith for her children. Words cannot adequately express my love and appreciation for her. She is my mother."

ABBY JOHNSON, born 22 January 1888 in Colonia Diaz, Mexico, married the third time November 1947, Joseph Henry Gooch, son of Belton and Mary Ann (Larsen) Gooch. He was born 19 January 1886 in Oxford, Bannock County, Idaho. He had previously been married to No children in this marriage.

VERNA JOHNSON, the sixth child of a family of nine children is the daughter of Elmer Wood and Mary Jane (Little) Johnson. She was born 19 April 1890 in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico, a small pioneer village of about 600 inhabitants which was settled by a group of Latter-day Saints from Utah and Arizona five years before Verna's advent.

Diaz is located in northern Mexico about 75 miles south of the U. S. border, and it was 40 miles from Guzman, the nearest railroad station. The nearest Mexican town, La Ascencion, lay four miles away to the south. The Colonists lived in peaceful relations with their neighbors, exchanging work and business, but all social life was held strictly within each group. There was no mixing though some of the native children did attend the elementary school in the colony.

Verna grew up in a humble home of culture rich in religious background. Her grandfather, James A. Little, had joined the "Mormon" band and had come to Utah in 1849. Her grandmother, Annie M. Baldwin Little, had left her home in England for religious convictions, and walked across the plains in the first hand-cart company in 1856. Her mother loved music, and though she had never learned to play any instrument, she taught vocal music with only the aid of a tuning fork, and was prominent in community music. Her father's interest was in dramatics and entertainment, and work for the development of the young people. He will be remembered by all the residents for his calling at the square dances which were attended by young and old. In the Johnson home many happy hours were spent in singing the L. D. S. hymns and other songs.

Verna was happy when she entered school at the age of seven years, and reading soon became her favorite pastime. There was no public library, and few books were available; so Verna eagerly looked forward to the monthly arrival of the church magazines to which her parents subscribed. She finished grade school when she was fourteen years old, and had a strong urge to continue her education, but there was no high school in the village - to go away required money. Her father did farming and stock raising, but with a large family to support, the income was not enough to meet all needs. To supplement, the family had a small candy factory. Because mother's health was not so good, and money was scarce, it was more than three years before Verna realized her ambition to attend the Stake Academy at Colonia Juarez, 75 miles distant. Two happy years of school passed quickly by, and she was again needed at home.

She had been interested in kindergarten training, and the one year of teaching in the elementary school at home gave her the desire to earn enough money to go to the Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah to prepare for a teaching career. However, her plans changed when her friendship ripened into love for the tall quiet boy she had met at high school. A career of homemaking and motherhood, she knew, was the Creator's first plan for women on earth. In the spring of 1912 Verna and William Shirley Black traveled to Salt Lake City, Utah that they might be married in the "House of the Lord" with a ceremony that would be binding throughout eternity. Their love was strong, and they wished to belong to each other for always.

They returned to Mexico meaning to make their home at Guadalupe, a small farming community not far distant from Juarez, but they were not to remain for long. It was during the troublesome times of the Mexican Revolution, and two months after their marriage the Colonists in mass were forced to leave their homes and possessions to seek safety in the United States. Verna has said, "I shall never forget the night of July 28th when we with large crowds from Juarez and Dublan stood all night at the depot waiting for a delayed train which was to carry the women, children, and older men across the border to El Paso, Texas. We said goodbye to our menfolks, who were to stay to protect our homes, boarded the train and were off - never to return. The men also were forced to leave two weeks later."

Verna and Shirl then went to Idaho and filed on a 320 acre homestead. Though this venture was not successful financially they spent many happy days in their little home in the hills. During this period four sons and a daughter came to brighten their home. As well as much toil and struggle there were also joyous and happy hours when Verna and her children lived close to Nature. They studied the birds, hunted wild flowers, gathered choke cherries, and played together, but always they drove the five miles to Sunday School and Church, for father and mother had been taught in their childhood to revere the Sabbath Day.

In the year 1922 the family left Idaho, and the lone grave of baby Marion, and moved to Salt Lake City, Utah, where they lived for eight years. Shirl worked four years for the American Smelting and Refining Company at Garfield, then he went into the poultry business. Three more children were born to them here.

In the spring of 1931 their oldest son graduated from high school and they moved to Provo that their children might have the advantage of college education in a church school. Five of them have graduated from the Brigham Young University. Verna herself in 1936 registered for special classes. She says, "Although my life has been rich in worthy experiences, I always felt the need of college education in my home and in community activities. Hopefully, fearfully I registered for class in College." These proved to be delightful, and her association with the younger students gave her a better understanding of the actions and problems of the young folks in her own home as well as their friends.

Since residing in Provo Shirl has been engaged in farming and dairying. Together he and Verna are active in the church organizations, and happy to know their children are all married, and each carrying on successfully in his chosen field.

ELIZABETH ANNIE NUTTALL, born 19 October 1881 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is the daughter of Leonard John and Christina (Little) Nuttall. Annie, as she was always called, was the eldest of fourteen children, eleven of which grew to maturity - three died in infancy. She says she became a traveler early in life, for she made the trip from Salt Lake City to Kanab five times in her first five years.

When her father was called on a mission to England by his church in 1884, her mother went to Salt Lake City and spent a year studying at the B. Y. Academy in Provo, then returned to Kanab to teach school. Annie feels that in those early years she received a thorough course in social adjustment from association with her uncles who were only a few years older than herself.

After her father's return from England the family lived in Salt Lake City for a time. Annie recalls that it was here she began her public work by going around the block to gather up the small children and taking them to Primary meeting. She remembers the thrill of telling the story of "Joseph Sold into Egypt" to the great audience in the Salt Lake Tabernacle at a Primary Conference when she was nine years old.

In 1893 the family moved to a farm at Lake View, north of Provo. Annie received her elementary education in Salt Lake City, and in the little one-room schoolhouse in Lake View. She received her collegiate training at the Brigham Young University in Kindergarten and Child Development, and graduated in 1902 from the Department of Education. This led to a career of Primary teaching and supervision. These eighteen years of teaching were filled with pleasant experiences, many friends, and enriching associations. Being the oldest of ten brothers and sisters she also had many home responsibilities as mother's help-mate, and in community activities.

The years 1912 - 14 were spent as a missionary for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. She labored in the Northern States Mission, was at Chicago, Bloomington, Springville, and Decatur, Illinois, and in Indianapolis, Indiana. The faith promoting incidents and wonderful experiences of these years have enriched all her after years.

On the 19th of February 1919 she married John Daniel Baker in the L. D. S. Temple in Salt Lake City. He had received his education in the L. D. S. College in Logan, Utah, and had filled a mission to the Central States from 1907 - 09. He has been a successful farmer at Mendon, Cache County, Utah.

Annie and her husband have both been active church workers especially in the youth organizations, and Annie has spent much time in searching out the genealogy of her ancestors.

LEONARD JOHN NUTTALL III, son of Leonard John Nuttall II and Christina Little, was born 6 July 1887, in Salt Lake City. A friend once said, "his father was a philosopher by temperament and a farmer through circumstances; his mother a brainy, quick witted woman."

When John was six years old the family moved to Lake View, near Provo, onto a farm where all the family worked to make their living from a truck garden, orchard and dairy cows. He worked along with the rest of the family but his father could see that John would never make a farmer.

It was in Lake View that he received his first formal education in a one-room elementary school. At the age of twelve, at the request of the teacher, he was withdrawn because he was far ahead of the other children. At that time his mother appointed herself as his tutor and he spent regular hours at hard study and was subjected to searching examinations. He was always active in neighborhood sports, but never excelled in any. The members of a group to which he belonged called him "Professor" and it always stayed with him.

In 1902, after passing the entrance examination he became a student at the Brigham Young Academy where he was outstanding in debating, but his aim from the beginning was going into education and eventually into higher education.

Upon graduation in 1906 at the age of nineteen, he accepted the position of principal and teacher in a three-teacher elementary school at Linden, Utah. Since many of his students were older than he, some were opposed to his being named principal; however, in spite of opposition, he made a record for himself, and the school board was well pleased with him. Gradually his critics became his enthusiastic supporters.

After two years he returned to the Brigham Young University as critic teacher in the training school. The following year he entered Columbia University in New York, where in two years he did the work for both his Bachelor's and Master's degree in education. He studied under Drs. George D. Strayer, Kilpatrick, Thorndike, Baker, and McMurray. After several years of educational work in Utah in 1927-28 he returned to Columbia, and in 1930 received his PH.D degree from that institution.

His educational activities included being teacher in Payson High School, Principal of Spanish Fork High School, Superintendent of Iron County schools, Superintendent of Nebo School District, Professor of elementary and secondary teaching and director of Training School at B. Y. U. where in two years he was made Dean of Education. While President Franklin S. Harris was absent he was made acting president for one year. In 1930 he went to the University of Utah as Professor of Elementary Education and director of Stewart Training School. In 1932 he was appointed Superintendent of the Salt Lake City Schools, and served in this position for twelve years. He had just been reappointed when heart failure caused his sudden death, 18 April 1944.

He worked in State and National Educational Association, Utah State Director of the National Educational Association, chairman of the appraisal committee of the American Association of School Administrators, member of many national and state committees for the study of specific problems in education. He also served on many state and national surveys and was a member of committee to prepare the 1938 yearbook on "Youth Education Today" for the Department of Superintendents of the N. E. A.

In educational work Dr. Nuttall really preferred teaching and was an inspiration to those whom he taught. "He was one of the leading and most influential educators of his time and his advice and counsel was sought on educational problems by state and national educational leaders and federal authorities."

CHRISTINA NUTTALL born 21 November 1888 in Salt Lake City, Utah, daughter of Christina Little and Leonard John Nuttall was the fourth child in a family of fourteen children.

The family moved to Provo in the fall of 1893, and the following spring to a farm in Lake View just northwest of Provo. Her childhood and youth were spent there in a home restricted as to material riches, but wealthy in the cultural things of life.

In 1907-08 she attended the Brigham Young High School. The next year she stayed at home to help her mother while her father was on his second mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Then two more years at the Brigham Young High School completed her education in regular schooling. She helped finance her schooling by working on the fruit farms from early spring until late fall on what was then Provo Bench, now Orem City, and in the third year by supervising Manual Training in American Fork Elementary School.

In the fall of 1910 she was asked to teach English and sewing in the Uintah Stake Academy at Vernal, Utah and was given a special teacher's certificate. The two years spent teaching there were two of the happiest and most profitable of her life, up to that time.

On the 18th of September 1912 Christina married Parley William Madsen of Lake View. He is the son of Peter Madsen and Lena Johnson who were early pioneers of Utah County. Parley was employed as a salesman and has followed that work most of the time since. They bought a small home in Lake View where their first three children were born.

In 1918 they moved to Toppenish, Washington, a week after the death of her mother. Her husband had been transferred there by his employers, the Utah Idaho Sugar Company. They returned to Lake View in the fall of 1921 because of the illness of their oldest child. They were happy to be back in Utah where they could enjoy the blessings of Church activities. They had felt the loss of this while away. They were thankful to have the little home to come back to.

Christina is mother of two daughters and six sons. All of her children have been interested in education. Five of her sons have served in the armed forces of their country.

She has always been interested in, and has had a great influence in her children's education from the first grade through college. She has always had a sincere love for books. It could be said of her, that if she had two loaves of bread instead of selling one and buying flowers as they say of the Italians, she would sell one and buy a book. She was always a student and has taken special classes at the University with a dream of sometime getting her degree.

Both she and her husband have held many offices in the church organizations. Her husband had earlier filled a mission to the Northwestern States. He worked in the Sunday school for thirty four years holding offices from ward Secretary to Stake Superintendent. He is at present a Patriarch in the Sharon Stake of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They both enjoy the association of the people who come to the home to get blessings, and many friendships have developed through this work.

ETHEL NUTTALL, daughter of Leonard John and Christina (Little) Nuttall, was born 19 May 1890 in Salt Lake City, Utah. The family moved to Provo in the fall of 1893, and to the farm in Lake View in the spring of 1894.

She was educated in the elementary schools of Utah County, and at the Brigham Young University in Provo.

In her parents home she was taught to appreciate the real values of life - honesty, integrity, truthfulness, faith and power of prayer. Here she learned the value of education, and was given the desire to search for knowledge, wisdom, and truth which has been a guiding force through her life.

She married Oro Huish Moore 30 August 1922. He was born 30 November 1892. After their marriage they lived in Payson, Utah where their five children were born. In the spring of 1939 the family moved from Payson to Provo, and in 1947 they moved to their present home in Lake view Ward, in Sharon Stake.

Ethel and Oro have always been active in the Church, most of their work has been as teachers in the auxiliary organizations. Oro filled a mission to and has held official position in the Priesthood.

They have always endeavored to keep alive in their own home the same standards of truth and righteousness which were part of their heritage from their parents.

Mavis, the first daughter was educated in the schools in Payson, Orem and the Brigham Young University. When the war started she left school for war work. She studied and worked at Logan, Ogden, Hillfield, and Geneva all in Utah, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and in California.

She filled a mission in Eastern Canada for her church from February 1950 to September 1951. At present (1953) she is employed as a book-keeper in Salt Lake City. She has always been an active worker in her Church.

JAMES A NUTTALL, born 4 August 1892 in Salt Lake City, Utah is son of Leonard John Nuttall and Christina Little. Soon after his birth the family moved to Provo, and then to a farm in Lake View north of Provo. Here he spent his life until he was twenty eight years of age.

He graduated from the public school of Lake View and attended the B. Y. U. High school. From 1914 to 16 he took time out to fill a two year mission in the North Western States for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He labored the entire time in the Oregon Conference and for a time was president of the Lentz Branch. A year after his return home he married Leona Bunnell and worked at farming in Lake View and on a farm where the Ironton Steel Plant now stands.

In March 1922 he entered the Brigham Young University with a determination to join the teaching profession. He attended the B. Y. U. continuously from March 1922 to August 1924 and completed the requirements for a B. S. degree. His first position took him to Somerset, Colorado where he had been appointed superintendent of schools. In 1926 he became superintendent of schools in Emery County, Utah which position he held for ten years. In the meantime he continued his studies and in 1929 received a Master's degree from the B. Y. U., and through summer school and part time resident work he completed the class work for a Doctor of Education degree in 1936. However, he did not write his thesis nor take the examinations so never received his degree.

In 1936 he was appointed President of the Snow College at Ephraim, Utah where he remained till March 1953. During these nearly seventeen years many improvements were made on the campus and in instructional equipment. The curriculum was greatly expanded to enable the school to give the training necessary to help people of the College area to live better and fuller lives. He also served for some years on the State Text Book Committee.

William G. Barton, a former Stake president paid tribute to Nuttall when he spoke highly of his contribution to the youth of the state both in church and school activities. He recalled that President Nuttall paid special attention to each individual and his personal needs in college, and that he has been continually active in leadership connected with youth. In 1948 Nuttall was awarded the Yule Candle at the Annual Ephraim Junior High School Christmas Candlelight Services. This candle is given each year to some person who rendered outstanding community service.

From early in life James has continuously been active in church work, beginning in the Aaronic Priesthood quorums as a boy. He taught a Sunday School class when only sixteen years old, and became counselor in the Mutual Improvement Association Superintendency. From 1919 to 1921 he served as second counselor to Bishop W. W. Taylor of the Lake View Ward. It mattered not where he moved his interest in the church went with him. In Emery County he was on the Sunday School Stake Board, and was superintendent of the Huntington Ward Sunday School. He was also for many years on the Stake Scout Committee. At Ephraim he held similar positions, and when he left was senior member of the Stake High Council.

At a Quarterly Conference of South Sanpete Stake President Nuttall was cited as an Honorary Master M-Men for the year of 1952. The award was made by the Stake M. I. A. superintendent.

He retired from Utah schools in 1953. In September of that year accepted a position in Iran as an Educational Advisor under the Brigham Young University auspices in the Point Four program under the Department of State. His wife Leona and sons David and Ray accompanied him to Iran where they had many interesting experiences. In the fall of 1955 they returned to the United States and the following year he began teaching in the schools of Los Angeles, California. Retired from the school system in 1958.

VERNON MALCOLM NUTTALL, SR., son of Leonard John Nuttall, Jr. and Christina Little Nuttall, was born November 28, 1893 in Provo, Utah. As a child he suffered for years with an abcess on his back and didn't enjoy all the sports and activities that the children his age enjoyed. His spine was scraped to clear up the trouble and it did heal.

He got his early education in Lake View and later attended the B. Y. U. He took commercial work and was employed later in life as a bookkeeper and once as a manager in a garage. He was a willing worker and wherever he worked they liked him.

He volunteered for military service in 1918 and served in World War I. He was stationed in Camp Johnston near Jacksonville, Florida. He, with several other western service men attended the L. D. S. Sunday School in Jacksonville, and it was then that he met Minnie Lee Dowling, the girl who later became his wife. They both say it was love at first sight, but could have been two hearts in tune.

She had other opportunities for marriage but when she met Vernon she had a feeling right then that he was the right one for her to love, and two weeks later when they met again at a mutual party they began courtship.

Their association wasn't for long for he was sent overseas where he served in France and Germany, however, their acquaintance continued through correspondence. After his return they were married 27 December 1920 in Pompano, Florida. The following year they came to Utah and were sealed in the Salt Lake Temple June 15, 1921.

She received her education in country schools and attended the Massey Business College in 1917-18 and took the Commerical course there. She taught school for 3 or 4 years and did office work after completing her business course.

Her parents were converts to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They had joined the church the year of her birth; so she grew up with a love of the gospel in her heart, and always dreamed that someday she would come out west. She was secretary of the Branch Sunday School at the time she met her future husband who was to make possible the fulfillment of that dream.

While in Utah Vernon found work with L. L. Bunnell (on a farm) and on September 3rd a baby boy was born to them, and he was named after his father.

They returned to Florida where five children were born to them. Then in 1933 he came back to Utah with his wife and six children, and settled on the home farm of his father. He later bought it.

They have both been active in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. While they lived in Florida he was a worker in Sunday School. Later in Utah he was called to be a Home Missionary, and at the present time is a member of the genealogical committee in the Ward, and is a member of the High Priest quorum. She is very happy and faithful in her church duties. They are proud of their six children, and four grandchildren. He has been employed by the Geneva Steel Company for the past ten years.

VELMA NUTTALL: I was born on 22 April 1899 to Leonard John Nuttall and Christina Little, in Lake View, a small farming community north and west of Provo. It was a pretty spot bordered on the east by mountains and the west by Utah Lake, a beautiful picture at any time of day.

Because I was the first baby born after my family moved to the farm and I had a tint of red in my hair, my family always told visitors I had carrot hair, turnip nose and freckled face. Not much else need be said about looks.

My childhood days were happy with my family. The brothers and sisters worked and played together and I remember my home with only pleasant thoughts, although we did not have some of the things money could buy, and I have always known that we younger children had much more than our older brothers and sister had because they worked to help make it so; and I thank them. I have always felt we came from a home of culture, we all went to school and most of the family graduated from college and some became known in the field of education.

I attended the Brigham Young University, but did not graduate. I stopped school to care for my mother one year before her death. I have often thought that was perhaps the most profitable year of my life; I learned much of real living and some of the lasting values of life, from her I learned faith, patience, and kindness.

We lived in a religious home where family prayers were said, and I am grateful to my parents today for that influence and teaching.

I taught in Primary and Sunday School and at other times I was secretary and second counselor in the mutual.

We walked about two miles to the church house and school. As I think about it I can see many of the beautiful mornings now, that I walked to Sunday School and how happy I was. We had to cross the railroad tracks to get home and sometimes at night if we were a little later than usual our parents were anxious about us and sometimes my father would come to see if we were coming. I guess I didn't appreciate their interest then, but I thank them now.

Living in Lake View Ward at this time was the finest young man who ever lived, named George Blair Glade. He was born on August 30, 1898 in Park City, Utah, son of James Richard Glade and Anna Louise Norberg. His father died when he was about fourteen, just two years after they moved into our community. He worked hard to help care for his mother and the younger boys. I always remember the sugar factory where he worked and I can almost hear the whistle that blew when the men were changing shifts. I usually knew whether he was coming off or going on shift. He had paid a little attention to me then and I think I was very much in love with him. He attended the B. Y. U. and received two medals for public speaking there.

He, too, held positions in all the organizations of the ward. He had a good baritone voice and sang some solos in the choir.

He filled a mission to the Central States from December 1920 to April 1922, laboring most of his time in the state of Texas.

On 13 December 1922 we were married in the Salt Lake Temple. We lived, first, at the corner of 10th East and 2nd South Streets in Mrs. Cushing's home. George was treasurer of the Glade Candy Company, located in the rear. He had come from Lake View to Salt Lake City to work there in September before and had boarded with Mrs. Cushing.

Life has been very happy for us. We have worked hard to raise our family, and George, especially has worked to earn a good living for us, and I thank him for making my life so wonderful.

We have six children. They are all happily married but Royden, who is eighteen and attending the University of Utah. We have tried to pattern our home after the ones we left. The children have brought joy to us and we appreciate them more than words can tell. Also, the young people they have married. They seem to us just like our own and, also, our eight sweet grandchildren.

After the children were grown I worked in Relief Society as Theology class leader and second counselor in LeGrande Ward.

In 1938, when the new Princeton Ward was formed from LeGrande and Thirty-first Wards, George was made Bishop of the newly organized ward and held that position till December 1950, when he was made second counselor to President Charles B. Richmond of the Park Stake. I am, at present, a member of the Stake Relief Society Board, teaching the Social Science lessons.

We are grateful for everything in our lives.

CLARISSA NUTTALL, born 28 July 1902 in Lake View, Utah County, Utah, is the twelfth of fourteen children of Leonard John, and Christina (Little) Nuttall. She grew to maturity on a farm in view of Utah Lake and only a few miles northwest from the city of Provo, where is situated the University named for the first governor of Utah and the great colonizer of the State, Brigham Young. Her first three years in public school she was taught by an older sister, and this experience is strong in her memory. She is one of eight of the first graduating class of the Lincoln High School at Orem. She attended the Brigham Young University two years and received a Normal diploma, and taught school three years before she was married.

Her husband, Howard B. Cordner, was born on a farm in Orem and his interest in agriculture has grown continuously with the years. He attended the Lincoln High School and with Clarissa was one of the first graduating class. He graduated from the B. Y. U. with a B. S. degree in Agriculture in 1927, studying under Thomas Martin, who has been a living inspiration throughout his life of service.

Howard Cordner received an opportunity to work for a Master's degree at Michigan State College at East Lansing, Michigan where he received his Master's degree in June 1928. He returned to Utah and on the 27th of June 1928 was married to Clarissa Nuttal in the Salt Lake Temple. They left immediately for College Park, Maryland where he had been granted a scholarship to continue his work. He received a Ph.D degree at the University of Maryland three years later. For six years he was a faculty member in that University.

They moved to Stillwater, Oklahoma, and since that time he has been a Professor of Horticulture at the A. and M. College.

As a family they have lived a very simple life taking joy in their two daughters who grew up to be happy, healthy children, and are now married. Clarissa has been active in the Relief Society of the Stillwater Branch and has been President the past two years.

Clarissa says of her husband, "He has wonderful qualifications. He is so very patient and understanding. We have had a good and happy life together."

MAURICE NUTTALL, born 19 December 1904 at Lake View, Utah County, Utah, is the next youngest and thirteenth child of his parents, Leonard John and Christina (Little) Nuttall. He grew up on a farm north of Provo where the children all learned to work and take their share of responsibility in caring for the farm and truck garden, and helping to maintain the large family.

Maurice received his education in the district elementary and high schools, and attended the Brigham Young University. He taught school at Overton, Nevada from 1929 to 1938, and since that time has been Principal of the Hurricane High School.

For three years 1925 to 1928 he served as missionary to the German Austrian Mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. While at Overton he was a member of the Bishopric, and again at Hurricane served his church in the same capacity for several years. At present he is a member of the High Council of the Zion Park Stake.

His wife, Margaret Lyon, was born in Murray, Utah, but was reared in Overton, Nevada where the two first met and became acquainted.

EDWARD FAY LITTLE, second living son of Lorin Amasa and Eliza Ann (Pugh) Little, was born 4 October 1896 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah. In 1900 or 1902 before he was of school age his parents moved to Alberta, Canada. . . There they settled on a farm in Taylorville district, a short distance southeast of Cardston. He received his education in the district school, and with his older brother, Lorin helped run the farm while his father was away on a mission to England for his church. This period covered two and a half years- about 1908 to 1911.

Fay married 6 September 1916, Alta Jane Empey of Kimball, seven miles north of Taylorville. Her parents had moved there from Elgin, Idaho when she was four years old. For about three years they lived on the farm and he continued working with his father.

In 1919 they had their marriage solemnized in the Salt Lake Temple. Then after a few months in Pocatello, Idaho, where his job was running a taxi, they moved to Kanab, Utah, to work with his brother, Lorin. While there he did trucking-hauled wool from Kanab and surrounding country to Marysvale, Piute County- the railroad terminus, and hauled freight back for his uncle, Len Pugh's store. Fay's father had, in the meantime, sold part of his holdings in Canada and moved to Weiser, Idaho. Fay decided to go there also, however in March 1922 he bought what land his father had left in Canada, and they moved back to Taylorville, residing for a time in Kimball, where he worked till he could get horses and machinery to work the farm. From December 1926 to 1938 the farm was their home. In December they bought a home and moved to Cardston. In January they bought a grocery and confectionery business which was known as Littles Delicatessen. This he operated till his death.

Fay and his wife were active members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Among positions held he was Bishop of Taylorville Ward, a member of the High Priest Quorum at Cardston, and a member of the Alberta Stake High Council. He loved to work with the young people and was assistant Scout Commissioner. In 1947 at Gillwell Scout Training Camp he received an award for highest mark of efficiency in his rank of anyone there.

Fay was especially interested in music. In the earlier years on the farm he organized and led his own band and for over five years they played for dances throughout their part of the country. Except for one change, the First Drummer who moved away, and had to be replaced, the group remained intact for the five years. He organized choruses for the boys and girls and led the singing at church. He used to be a member of the Stake Choir, which sang at his funeral.

Edward Fay Little was loved and respected by those who knew him. He was a friend to all, and had many friends to mourn his early death. The Stake Tabernacle at Cardston was packed at his funeral and fifty boy scouts were present to show their esteem for him

He was stricken while on a business trip to Lethbridge, and was brought home to the hospital where he died of heart trouble three days later, the 8 December 1940 at the age of 44 years.

Alta, his faithful companion and wife, is carrying on and struggling to rear their seven children without the much needed help of a father. Her chief ambition- and what is nobler- is to train her children to be honorable and useful citizens, and to give them every opportunity possible.

After some years she married 2nd. Robert William Reeder, a man of many good qualities. She sold the business in Cardston and moved back to the farm. Two of her sons served their country in World War II. Four of the children are married with families of their own. Two sons and a daughter are still at home with mother.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF ABBY LITTLE

Abby Little was born 13 Nov. 1912 in Canada; raised primarily in the area of Mt. Hebron, California, where her father ran a sheep ranch. This was isolated country so it was tedious travel for arrival to school and to church. She met and married Andrew Lisol Erickson in 1929.

Shortly after 1930, the depression brought hard times and in search of work she and her husband eventually came to settle in San Francisco, Calif., in the early '30's. Andrew's hours working as a stevedore in San Francisco were long and the depression blocked entertainment which Abby as a young girl desired. She became dissatisfied and obtained a divorce from Andrew in 1933. Abby then found work as a waitress and then as an envelope machine operator and as a hospital employee, making barely enough to live on.

In 1940 Abby married a carpenter named Carl Anderson. And they lived in San Francisco. During 1941 they moved to the Sonoma Valley and commenced building their own home in El Verano. Carl went in business as a contract carpenter for himself. However, Carl's dissolute habits caused Abby great unhappiness and she divorced him in 1944. Abby with her son continued to live in Sonoma Valley at Boyes Springs while she worked as a machine operator at Sonoma Cannery.

In 1945 she moved to Santa Rosa where she found employment at a creamery. She married again in 1946 to Martin Christian Anderson, an interior decorator and furniture salesman. To this day she remains so married, lives in Santa Rosa, California and works as an egg-candler. She and Martin are currently enrolled for evening classes at Santa Rosa Junior College.

ABBY LITTLE, (goes by name of Rae), born 13 November 1912 in Cardston, Alberta, Canada, married March 1928 Andrew Erickson. They were divorced 1933. Had one son. She married second Martin C. Anderson.

ADDIE LITTLE, born 14 December 1891 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is the oldest of seven children born to Willis Copeland and Addie (Jackson) Little. They lived in a comfortable but modest home in the little country town of Kanab. The father and mother were devoted to each other and to the children, and many happy experiences were shared which contributed to a wholesome security and to lasting memories. The family was encouraged and given opportunity to participate in community and church activities.

The parents were education minded and gave their children every advantage that the schools afforded. Addie finished the eighth grade in Kanab, then at considerable sacrifice she was sent to Provo, Utah to attend high school. She recalls, even now, her return home in the spring and her eagerness to get back. In those days the trip from Provo to Kanab required from six to seven days. Her father traveled by team and wagon the 125 miles from Kanab to Marysvale, the railroad terminus, to meet her. To make the trip more worthwhile he took on a load of freight for the town store and supplies for the family use. To Addie the traveling seemed slow and long after being away from home for nine long months.

Addie continued her schooling at Provo and at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City till she received her teaching certificate. Then, in her home town of Kanab, she began her long career as an educator.

In June 1914 she married Archibald Swapp, and for nearly three years enjoyed the roll of housewife and mother, but so soon was her companion taken from her by death in May 1917.

After her husband's death she went into educational work in earnest with her four year old daughter, Iris, she went to Berkeley where she attended the University of California for a year. Then she returned to Utah and taught school in the Logan City schools, and at the Utah State Agricultural College until 1936.

Iris graduated from college that year, and immediately mother and daughter left for New York City where Addie attended the Columbia University and received her M. A. degree in the spring of 1937. She continued to do graduate work until fall then returned to the Utah State Agricultural College. An incident on the homeward trip was the marriage of her daughter at Chicago.

In the spring of 1938 Addie joined a group from the Columbia University and sailed from New York to Europe. They visited France, Italy, Switzerland, Greece, Turkey, Russia, Germany, England, and Scotland. They returned to the United States by way of Quebec, Canada.

In 1940 Addie left the college and for three years worked for the government. She supervised the educational program in the Government Migratory Camps throughout Arizona and California. In Utah, as part of the war emergency program, she helped set up day care centers for the children in the defense areas.

Following these broadening experiences Addie began work in the Ogden City school system. Her work is in the field of Guidance and Parent education. She enjoys her work and is still employed there.

From the time Addie was a young girl she has been active in church work, and has held different positions of responsibility. In 1946 she was called to work on the General Board of the Latter-day Saints Sunday School, and is still a member of that board. She is conscientious and earnest in her efforts; therefore successful.

Addie has three grandchildren, and many other interests apart from her professional work.

(394-D)

ADDIE LITTLE, born 14 December 1891 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is the daughter of Willis Coplen and Addie (Jackson) Little. She married 25 June 1914 in the Latter-day Saints Temple in Salt Lake City, Archiebald Spencer Swapp, son of William Hill and Mary (Spencer) Swapp. He was born 19 June 1887 in Lima, Luna County, New Mexico, died 27 May 1917 in Kanab, Utah. Her residence: 2672 Taylor Avenue, Ogden, Utah.

(395-D)

VERA LITTLE, born 27 October 1894 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah is second child of Willis Coplen and Addie (Jackson) Little. She says, in contrast to her mother's sad and lonely early life her own childhood and girlhood was very happy. Her mother worked hard to spare her children the sorrows she had faced. Vera expresses appreciation for a good father and mother and a happy homelife; for their teaching her to know, and have a desire to do right.

From her earliest recollection she came under religious training, attending Sunday School School and other Church auxiliaries. When only fourteen years old she became a Sunday School teacher under Superintendent, Lundquist who taught her the beauty of being on time, and being dependable.

On 30 April 1914 she married George A. Swapp in the Salt Lake L.D.S. Temple. He was a home town boy and they had gone to school together. Soon after her first baby was born she was chosen to be first counselor to Grace Bowman in the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association. For three years she enjoyed working in this organization, then for some years her babies and home required all her attention. She missed the association of her fellow workers and longed to hear the church hymns. With a song book before her she sang the old hymns as she rocked her babies, and felt that it was a happy time, for she was giving her little ones the love and care that only a mother can give at a time when they so much needed her. When the children were older she again took up work in Y. W. M. I. A. and helped develop a recreational program for the young people, taking part in the dramatics herself. Some years later she was asked by Bishop Chamberlain to be President of the Ward Relief Society. She was thrilled with the call, but felt inexperienced and young to lead an organization of women where many were older than herself, and to fill a position which her mother had so well and nobly held for eight years. However, she appreciated the opportunity and learned to love the dear older members. The satisfaction and education one receives from such a position can hardly be understood by one without the experience. In giving aid to those in need or in trouble is truly doing the Lord's work for He says, "In as much as ye have done it to the least of these ye have done it unto me." She had hoped to hold this position as long and worthily as her mother, but after four years she was asked to become President of the Kanab Stake Relief Society. A bigger position which called her to lead all the Ward Societies in her Stake. Again she felt weak and unqualified, but resolved to do her best and seek inspiration and assistance from our Heavenly Father through prayer. She feels that she has been truly blessed and guided in her efforts as Stake President these four years.

Vera has also been interested in literature and arts and been a member of the Literary Club. She has just finished a write-up of the Literature, Music, and Drama of Kanab for the town history which is soon to be published.

Together with her husband, George Swapp, they have tried to make their little town grow and be a good place for their children to live in. His occupation has been mainly raising and working with livestock. For the past fifteen years he has been Sheriff of Kane County, doing a good work and making record in his line. For her desire and ability to do, she owes much to her parents, who always encouraged their children to use what talents God gave them the best they could.

ANNIE LITTLE, daughter of Willis Copelen and Addie (Jackson) Little, was born 27 May 1897 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah. Her early years were spent there much as other members of the family. She attended the elementary school, and church auxiliaries. In 1912 and 1913, since Kanab had not yet, a high school she attended the B. Y. U. in Provo, Utah. Her father was a member of the Kane County School Board that year and through his efforts a high school was established in Kanab. She completed two years in this school then in the spring of 1916 was called to the Central States on a mission for her church. She worked in this capacity for two years. On her return home in the spring of 1918 she was offered a teaching position in the Kanab Elementary School.

This was an extremely important event in her life because it was then that she met Reynold C. Merrill, who was Superintendant of the Kane County schools. Their association led to marriage on the 6th of May 1919.

R. C., as he was called, had long planned on obtaining a Ph. D. degree and consequently much of the next fifteen years were spent in, or close to the University of California at Berkeley.

It was decided early in their married life that Annie should go to college whenever possible, which she did. During the six years spent at Chico, at the State Teachers College, they had college girls stay in their home who helped with the work for their room and board. Ann went to school, taking whatever classes were open at the times she could leave her four small children.

When the family returned to Utah in 1933 Annie had accumulated enough college credits for a senior rating. Little did she then anticipate the need and use for this education which would come to her in a few short years. In October 1942, after an illness of over a year, R. C. passed away at their home in Richmond, Utah.

It was her responsibility now to help the four older children through school as well as care for herself and little Steven, who was only seven years old.

Annie went to the Agricultural College at Logan and secured part time work in the library, and completed the requirements for a B. S. degree in 1944. She was very fortunate in obtaining full time employment in the library as head of the circulation department at that time. She has been very happy in her work.

On September 3, 1948 she was married to Lawrence B. Caine from Richmond and sincerely feels that she has been compensated for trouble and sorrow that came to her in early life.

STEVEN LITTLE MERRILL youngest son of R. C. and Annie (Little) Merrill was born 3 June 1935 in Logan, Utah. He attended the elementary schools of Logan, and is now a senior at the Logan High School. He graduated from the Logan High School Seminary in 1951. Although he has not decided on a profession he is looking forward to College and Graduate work.

He is an Eagle Scout, and is very active in church and school functions.

Dr. Reynold Cluff Merrill

REYNOLD CLUFF MERRILL, born 2 October 1893 is son of Hyrum Willard and Bessie (Cluff) Merrill and grandson of the late apostle, Marin W. Merrill. He was born in Richmond, Cache County, Utah. There he received his early education in the public schools and at the old Brigham Young College. Later he received his A. B. and M. A. degree at the University of Utah, and in May 1931 gained his Ph. D. degree at the University of California at Berkeley.

He gained state-wide prominence in Utah during a political campaign of 1940 when he ran for the State Superintendent of Public Instruction office on the Republican ticket.

On 3 or 9 June he married Mildred Hendricks of Richmond. She died 25 December 1915 at Richmond. Four years later, 6 May 1919 he married Annie Little of Kanab, Utah. They have five children.

Dr. Merrill's teaching career includes Oakely, Idaho, and Huntsville, Utah, then he became superintendent of Kane County school. It was here he met Miss Little, who became his wife. From 1921 to 1926 he was director of teaching training and head of the department of education at the B. Y. College at Logan, Utah.

In 1926 he went to Berkeley to resume his studies and while there accepted a position as dean of the San Benito, Junior College. Soon after he became director of Teacher Training at State Teachers College of California while at the same time continuing his studies at the University of Berkeley.

In 1933 when his father died he returned to Richmond to supervise the family property. At this time he became a member of the Phi Delta Kappa National Education Fraternity.

On 1 April 1935 he was appointed district educational advisor for C. C. C., with offices at Fort Douglas, Salt Lake City. In 1938 he accepted a teaching position at Snow Junior College in Ephraim, Utah. In 1940 he became a member of the Logan Senior High School faculty which he held till ill health required his leaving.

Dr. Merrill had been active in church and civic functions. He had served as member of the Benson Stake High Council and as an officer in various church auxiliaries.

He died 26 October 1942 at Richmond after an illness of sixteen months.

WILLIS RELL LITTLE, born 22 November 1899 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah is the son of Willis Coplen and Addie (Jackson) Little. He grew up in the remote little community of southern Utah, and has made it the home for his own family. However, Kanab is no longer remote, with the building of highways and roads, automobile traffic has shortened the distance, and the time to one day's travel, instead of seven tiresome days from the capitol of the state. By the same means film companies have been attracted to the red sandstone hills, the canyons with lakes and scenic spots and other natural settings for out-door movie scenes in this vicinity. Kanab has awakened from a passive little village to life and progress.

Rell as one of its citizens has taken part in this growth. After completing high school in Kanab he attended the State Agricultural College at Logan, and in 1938 he married Veda Virginia Rickenbach of Swiss parentage. She was a frail delicate woman and lived only to give birth to their first child. Mother and babe passed away in September 1939. A year later Rell married Pearl Olsen, widow of Jewel Works. She had one son in her first marriage to whom Rell has been a father along with his own three boys.

Pearl was born and reared in Glendale, Kane County, Utah. She is a graduate of the Valley High School at Orderville, and has been active in church work. For several years was president of the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association, has served as teacher in other auxiliaries, and more recently has been Work Director for the Relief Society, as well as Visiting Teacher.

Rell has served as Town Councilman, and worked in various capacities for his church. His occupation has been chiefly stock raising.

CLARA LITTLE, born 16 July 1902 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is the fifth child of Willis Copelen and Addie (Jackson) Little. Clara is the youngest of five living children, a younger sister died at the age of nineteen years, and the youngest brother died at fifteen years.

Clara received her elementary and high school education in Kanab, and married a hometown boy, Preston Bunting. They were married in the St. George Latter-day Saints Temple on 7 January 1926. They have both taken part in church activities. Preston filled a two year mission to the Southern States prior to his marriage, and since that time has participated in the ward and stake organizations. Clara worked in the Primary Association continually as long as her five children were members. Since they graduated to the Mutual Improvement Association for the young people she has labored with this group, and also in the Relief Society. For four years she was president of this important women's organization. At present she is teaching a Sunday School class.

As Clara has said their living comes from stock raising, a little farming, and a grocery store which they own where both sons and daughters are employed.

Two of her sons are now in the service of their country. The two older boys have had college training and the youngest daughter has graduated from high school. She entered the beauty and talent contest and won a place as an attendant to the queen, "Miss Utah", for 1953.

Clara feels that her life as housewife has been uneventual, but is proud of her three sons and two daughters, and feels that rearing a family right is of greatest importance.

MALCOLM LITTLE ROBINSON, is the oldest living son of George Heber and Susan Elizabeth (Little) Robinson. He was born 16 January 1895 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, and is the third child of nine. The sister next older died in her first year and the older brother at the age of sixteen years.

Malcolm began early in his out-dooor life and work of riding the range and looking after the cattle that roamed over the large stretches of open country, or caring for livestock on his father's ranch. The family spent their summers at Sink Valley but moved to town for the winters that the children could attend school. He received his education in the Kanab Elementary and High schools, and was a student at the B. Y. University at Provo, Utah. In the spring of 1916 he received a mission call to South Africa where he spent four years under the Mission President, Nicolas G. Smith. He returned in 1920 and felt that his experiences and the knowledge gained, though different, was equal in value to college training.

On the 1st of July 1925 he married in the Salt Lake Latter-day Saints Temple, Ann Ritta Hopkins, the daughter of a family friend from Glendale, Utah. After a honeymoon in Yellowstone National Park and other scenic spots they returned to southern Utah and settled in Glendale, where they have lived since, and reared a family of eight children, giving them college education as soon as they are ready and desire it. Their oldest son is doing road building and construction work and is superintendent of the Ward Sunday School. The fourth child and second son enlisted in the Air Force January 2, 1951 for a period of four years service to his country. Two daughters are married.

Malcolm's occupation of ranching keeps him away from home much, but he does not let it interfere with his church interests and activities. He has served in different capacities. For the past ten years he has been in the Bishopric of the Glendale Ward. His wife who was a trained school teacher of six years experience before her marriage is carrying on her profession in the auxiliaries of her Church-Sunday School, Primary and Relief Society. With her large family, house and garden she keeps busy and happy watching her children grow into fine, self reliant young people with a faith in God, our Heavenly Father, which keeps them humble and close to his guidance.

JAMES GRAYDON ROBINSON, born 2 May 1908 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is the son of George Heber and Susan Elizabeth (Little) Robinson. He spent his childhood years in the sunny little village of Kanab, except for the summer months when his parents moved to the ranch.

In the fall of 1914 when he was six years old he began his schooling in the elementary grades of the district school, and continued through high school, graduating in 1927. During this period he was also active in boy scout work; and was a fine leader among the boys. In 1928 he began his college at the Brigham Young University at Provo. Because of financial conditions his college work was intermitant with work periods. In 1931 he began study in the School of Forestry at the State Agricultural College at Logan where he graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree in June 1938-ten years after his entrance in college. He had, in the meantime, acquired a wife and a baby son.

During the years 1929 and 1933 he worked at the Skutumpah Ranch and gained some head of cattle. The summers 1931 and 1932 he worked for the Forest Service in Kiabab Forest in Arizona, and was in Missoula, Montana from 1934 to 1936. He was located next at Roundup and then Malta, Montana from 1939 to fall of 1941 when he moved to Glasgow, Montana. In 1937 he with his older brother, Malcolm, and brother-in-law, Burton McAllister purchased the Skutumpah Ranch in anticipation of his returning to Southern Utah. In December of the same year Graydon returned to Logan to finish his college course at the Agricultural College.

His marriage to the talented Miss Fawn Ivins took place in the Salt Lake Latter-day Saints Temple the 1st of June 1936. An apostle, George Albert Smith, with whom Graydon became acquainted in his scout work, and the man who later became President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, performed the ceremony.

Fawn Ivins is a niece of the well-known and beloved Anthony W. Ivins (A past member of the First Presidency of the L. D. S. Church). She is a graduate of the Brigham Young University, where she met Graydon. She was elected Student Body Vice-president in her Junior year. After graduating in 1933 she taught speech, English, music and typing in the Garfield High School in Panguitch. In 1935-36 she taught in Overton, Nevada. She loves this work and since her children have grown older she has gone back to teaching. She spent two years in Overton, one year in Mocassin, Arizona and the past three years in Kanab school.

Together the family has struggled to make their one third interest in the ranch pay their way.

Though their work on the ranch keeps them away from town each summer they are active in their church. Graydon is a member of the Stake Genealogical Committee, leader of the Explorer group in the M.I. A. and is an ordained Seventy taking part in Priesthood work. Fawn's church activity began after she graduated from elementary school. She has been organist in various organizations, Bee Keeper, and drama and dance director in the Mutual Improvement Association, and has been a member of the Stake M.I. A. Board, both at Overton, Nevada and Kanab, Utah. She is at present, Literary class leader in the Relief Society of Kanab Ward.

They are striving to bring up their children to be God-fearing upright citizens, with a sense of responsibility, as well as appreciation for the many modern day advantages.

LELA JACOBSON, daughter of James and Harriet (Little) Jacobson, was born 17 October 1893 in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico. Her grandparents James Jacobson Sr. and wife Annie Rasmussen had been called from Arizona to help colonize Mexico. Her grandfather, James A. Little, had come from Utah because of plural marriage. Her parents were young people in their teens at that time.

Lela was reared in a small colony where all but two or three families were of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and most of these families were polygamists. They had left their homes in the United States that they might live in peace with their families without persecution and without feeling that they were law breakers, for surely their religion taught them to be law abiding. The 12th article of their faith reads: "We believe in being subjects to kings, presidents, rulers and magistrates, in obeying, honoring and sustaining the law." They also believed that in the sight of God it was honorable for a man to have more than one wife, to raise a family and to cherish and support them. So Lela grew up among children of polygamist families and found them good and bad as children of other communities, and other faiths. Though her father did not enter into plural marriage, as she said, she grew up without that horror of the practice that is common to non-believers.

She attended the grade school, and the L. D. S. Church auxiliaries, Primary, Sunday School, and M. I. A. - Mutual Improvement Association.

In this colony the people lived chiefly by tilling the soil. They were farmers and stock raisers. In the earlier years when the large open country furnished range for the cattle's grazing, round ups and large herds of semi-wild cattle driven through the streets to certain corrals was not an uncommon sight. The cowboys with their spurs and lariats were part of the scenery. But as the years slipped by the country was taken up and fenced by private ownership. Lela's father did less of riding, confined now to his own large pasture. In summer the family moved from town to the pasture where dairying, butter and cheese making was carried on.

Early one morning in July 1912 the peaceful stillness was broken by the cry from a rider - a Paul Revere if you please - sent from the Stake Authorities at Colonia Juarez with the message that all must leave at once for the United States, evacuate the colony, leave only a few men to look after the livestock. It is hard to imagine the hustle and bustle and excitement of the next few hours. They could take with them only what could be put into their wagons; and neighbor must help neighbor, for not all had wagons and teams. So it was that only the most needful articles were carried along. The best silver, the best dresses and suits and all furniture were left behind. By ten o'clock that morning of the 28th of July the caravan of between 600 - 800 people was slowly moving northwest toward the border. Lela recalls that a tub of milk was left on the stove. That cheese was never made!

The cause of this commotion? Most of these colonists were U. S. citizens and wished to remain neutral and not take sides in the revolution. Then came the order to give up all firearms. The colonists dared not subject themselves to the treachery of the rebel bands without arms for their own defense, and so the exodus.

The caravan crossed the border at the Corner Ranch into New Mexico, and traveled north to Hatchita, stopping a few days at Dog Springs Ranch on the way. Here they camped. The U. S. Government furnished tents and food and put into effect sanitary regulations. The town these people had called home was plundered and burned; there was no returning. The U. S. government offered the homeless exiles free transportation to any place in the United States. So, the camp was soon disbanded and its people scattered through Arizona, Utah, and Idaho. Lela's father built a house in Columbus, New Mexico where they lived for a year. In 1913 he sent his family to Provo, Utah where the children could have the advantage of good schools.

During the summer of 1914 Lela worked at a canning factory in Provo. Everett Johnson from Canada came to the cannery to visit his niece, Edith Glover, who introduced him to her. That evening he told his niece that if the girl did not have red hair he would marry her. However, this was not the last call, and there was a change of mind, for on 31 March 1915 Lela and Everett were married and went to Canada to make their home in what is now known as Barnwell. It was a new country. His father had homesteaded there in 1903. The young couple endured many hardships and privations in this pioneering life. In 1928 they bought land of their own and built a house. This was centrally located so that the children could walk to school. Most of the children came from greater distances on school vans. The struggle went on for years to pay for their home and send their five children to school. Both of their sons served in World War II, and the younger, Max, was later killed in an accident while driving an oil truck. All their children are married, and Lela and her husband are alone in their new modern home wishing they could have had it earlier in the lives of their children.

WILLIS LITTLE JACOBSON, third child of ten, is the son of James and Harriet (Little) Jacobson. He was born 25 July 1897 in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico, a thriving little village founded twelve years earlier by "Mormons" who had left Utah because of persecution for polygamy. There in childhood he frequently saw the cowboys drive through the streets a herd of wild cattle brought in from the range. They held a fascination for him; he liked horses and cattle, and while he was small a visit to his aunt Rebecca's at the Richardson Ranch five miles northeast of town was looked forward to with great anticipation because of the animals there. He could ride a horse and help feed the calves. He recalls the return of his father from his mission for the L. D. S. Church to Mexico City because it afforded a visit to the ranch while his mother went to El Paso to meet him.

Willis began his schooling in the village in a school established by the Church, but because of many moves by the family he did not graduate from high school till many years later. He was persevering, however, and added to his schooling as opportunity permitted. He attended a well-graded school at Provo, Utah, a one room school at Thompsonville, Utah while his father lived on a ranch, and in the spring of 1916 graduated from the eighth grade at Marysville, Piute County, Utah. A winter quarter at the Branch Agricultural College prep school, a semester at the L.D.S. Business College in Salt Lake City, a term at the Granite High School during the depression when work was slack, and finally courses by night school from the West High led to a diploma about 1943.

Willis remembers well the year he was fifteen years old, for it was then the family left Mexico. He remembers the earlier rumors of roving bands traveling through the country confiscating horses, saddles, and fire arms wherever they found what they wanted, and the breaking out of the Mexican Revolution in 1910 under Francisco I. Madero. Willis saw and knew of atrocities inflicted upon the colonists by the lawless bandits or emboldened citizens who seemed to forget their former courtesy and goodwill toward the Americans.

In 1912 after failure to make friendly relations with the revolutionist leaders, the stake authorities of the Church Colonies felt it wise to evacuate temporarily their villages and take refuge in the United States. The Stake Presidency sent out runners to inform all the Colonies of their decision and instructions for action. The rider from Colonia Juarez, who had traveled all night, arrived at Colonia Diaz with the breaking of dawn on the 28th of July and delivered his message to the town officials. Bishop Ernest V. Romney and his counselors immediately made plans and relayed the news to outlying ranches and the town in general. Just at sunrise Willis and his family at Box Pasture Ranch listened to the story related by Rue Lemmon, and watched him whirl his horse around and speed off toward the Richardson Ranch.

The cows had been milked and already milk was warming on the stove to make another cheese, but there was no time now to think of that. They must be ready to join the caravan in town by eleven o'clock. Willis was sent to wrangle the horses, calves and cows were turned into the pasture, provisions and necessary articles were packed into a wagon, and a team of light horses hitched to it. Mother and children in the wagon, Willis on his horse, Snip, and father on another horse, and they were ready to leave never to return.

At the gathering place in town they discovered that Dukie, A Scotch terrier, was left behind locked in the house. They all thought a great deal of the little dog and could not think of leaving him a prisoner, Willis was dispatched to release him and instructed to overtake the caravan at a place known as the Salt Lake pasture gate. He rode fast the three miles back to the ranch and released the dog who was glad to see him. Then Willis went to the roof to see if he could spy the location of the caravan. A cloud of dust could be seen for miles along the road, so he knew the town folk were on their way. On the flat roof he found a pair of his father's spurs.

Not wishing to leave them he put them on and hurried to his horse and mounted. Excited and eager to be on the way he put the spurs to the horse, but Snip was not used to spurs and instead of breaking into a gallop as desired, he put his head between his front legs and commenced bucking. Willis, used to riding, stayed in the saddle until the horse fell and landed him on the ground. All excited Snip broke into a run westward (the way Willis wanted to travel) with Dukie nipping his heels at every jump. Willis tried to call off the dog, but no use. Away they both went as fast as they could run, leaving Willis on foot. He had no idea he would ever catch the horse for it was loose on the open range and not very gentle. However, as soon as Dukie got tired he stopped, so also did the horse who stood dead still in his tracks permitting Willis to walk up to him and mount. Willis has believed this to be an act of Providence in his favor.

Willis overtook the caravan and in late afternoon crossed the border into New Mexico at the Corner Ranch. That night all the camp, except babies and a few elderly people who were sheltered in the one-room house were soaked to the skin in a drenching downpour of rain. Next day the caravan traveled northward to Dog Springs, then on the Hatchita. There the whole camp was issued tents and rations by the U.S. government. A little later the government offered transportation at one cent per mile to all who wished to move on. Colonia Diaz had been plundered and burned. There was no returning to their homes. The refugees began leaving camp going to different states in the west.

For years Willis' life was one of many changes and considerable hardship. After being forced to leave Mexico his father found it difficult to adjust, for he had been a cattle man and was untrained for other work. He wished his family to have social advantages and his children educational opportunities but it was difficult, for his work required his being on the outskirts of civilization. Willis also liked the outdoor life and was ever ready to leave school to help his father, or take a job of his own. He worked as camp tender for Charles Pugh at Sink Valley-his first job with a salary. He helped his father on the ranch at Thompsonville, Utah and together they cared for the herd at House Rock in northern Arizona. He worked for the Z̄ (bar Z) Cattle Company where he helped throw a thousand head of cattle onto the Buckskin Mountains for summer range. He sandwiched in his schooling as best he could.

With the signing of the Armistice after World War I in November 1918 Willis was free from army draft so he accompanied his father to El Paso, Texas with the purpose of going into Mexico to buy up cattle. On this trip Willis was to go through a frightening experience long remembered. After weeks of waiting their passports were at last ready and they boarded the Mexican North Western train at Ciudad Juarez to go to Colonia Dublan, one of the Mormon colonies maintained through the revolution. Here they outfitted themselves with horses, saddles, and packs and set out in search of cattle to buy. They made Ojo Frederico Ranch their headquarters then went on north to Ascencion district only five miles from the old home in Colonia Diaz. After several weeks of buying and grazing the cattle at the Ojo Frederico they went west to Janos.

There on the 13th of March 1919, as if from a clear sky, fell the bolt that struck terror to their hearts. They were taken prisoners by a band of three hundred fifty Villistas under command of Manuel Castro. This band was traveling to Ascencion so took the prisoners along with them. Upon arriving there the prisoners were separated and held under guard in different houses neither knowing what was happening to the other, nor the reason for their captivity. The guard over Willis accidentally discharged his gun shooting a comrade. The bullet went in at the mouth and out at the top of the head. The man fell like a beef steer almost at the feet of Willis. The victim, however, recovered.

In the meantime the father was being harried for a $1000.00 ransom. Not having the money he offered a check which was refused. The rebels wanted cash. Later in the day the prisoners were allowed to be together and given something to eat. Willis was informed that he must go to Ojo Frederico to deliver up their belongings to the rebels. That night he slept on a cowhide without even a blanket. Returning next day he was allowed to join his father. For a few days they were unmolested and allowed some freedom in the town. Early in the morning of 19th March Willis and his father were taken to an abandoned adobe house on the edge of town. Here they were stood against the wall facing a firing squad of four. Knowing how lightly these bandits valued human life, Willis indeed felt that his life hung as by a thread. In this precarious situation the bandits again demanded a thousand dollars ransom. Again Jacobson stated he had no cash. When asked if he could raise the money among his friends if given freedom, he replied he didn't know but would try. Jacobson was released and informed his son that the rebels were leaving for Janos and would hold him hostage until the money was brought to them. After some delay a mule was brought to Willis and he was ordered to mount and get in formation for the march.

As soon as free Jacobson went to the home of Pancho Fernandez who was a mutual friend of the prisoners and the captors. He pleaded with him to intercede in their behalf, then continued his calls on other friends. Through the intercession of Fernandez, Castro agreed to turn loose the prisoners and himself went in search of Jacobson to deliver the message of freedom. Rushing to Willis the father cried out, "Get off that mule, we are free!"

Immediately Willis and his father went to the home of Fernandez to express their gratitude for such friendship. They heard shooting and saw a few straggling bandits mount their horses on the run and leave town urging their mounts to full speed. The shooting grew in volume creating a feeling of excitement. They could not resist going to the roof to see what was happening. There they witnessed a running battle between the Federal troops, who had just arrived from Casas Grande, and the Villistas. Again Willis feels that it was an act of Providence that he was not still a prisoner of the rebels when that battle was fought. The Federal troops brought the dead into town and laid them side by side in the street and invited the Jacobsons to identify their captors.

The Villistas had left the Jacobsons without horses, saddles, bedding or food. It was eighty miles to the nearest U.S. town. Ascencion had also been depleted of its horses. Jacobson managed to procure an old mule and a buckboard, and drove to the United States. They reoutfitted themselves and returned to Mexico. In May they drove over the border at Columbus,

New Mexico two hundred twenty odd head of cattle which Willis tended while his father worked for wages. In 1920 the cattle were put into a pasture on the Mimbres River north of Deming, New Mexico.

For the next two years Willis was employed by W. J. Wamel at his Victoria ranch where roamed a thousand head of cattle and three hundred horses. It was here that Willis learned to handle wild horses. His first job was to break and train thirty-five young horses which had been sold to the government for the cavalry. When these were shipped to Fort Reno, Oklahoma, Willis was hired to care for them during transportation.

In May 1922 Willis decided to go north, so saddled his horse and with a pack outfit "hit the trail." He traveled seven hundred miles through New Mexico and Arizona, stopping by the way to work in a grain harvest, or at a road construction camp, and now and then to visit relatives and old associates along the way. At Kanab, Utah his trail ended. This was his mother's birth place and relatives lived there. It was his planned destination. Here he was given a warm welcome by the family, and truly felt he had found the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, for he met Ann Carrol who was to become his companion and wife.

Though he had opportunity through the next year to observe the fine qualities of his new friend, and decided she would make a congenial companion he readily accepted a mission call when it came in October 1923. For nearly three years he gave his heart and time to his missionary labors in Mexico under President Rey L. Pratt. He corresponded with Ann but their letters got no further than the "yours truly" stage. Upon his return to Utah in 1926 courtship began, and on 12 October 1926 they were married in the Salt Lake Temple.

For a time Willis turned to farming out in West Jordan, but because of his inexperience, drouth, and years of depression he gave it up and went into the poultry business, which for the most part he has followed since, working also for the Utah Poultry Association for eight years.

In the fall of 1943 Willis volunteered for a short term mission, this time going into the interior of Mexico. Upon his release his wife met him in the City of Mexico and they toured the country returning by the west coast. Then for a time he was employed by the War Food Administration as director and camp manager for the Mexican Nationals who worked on the farms in Idaho, and at Spanish Fork, Utah. In 1951 when the First Presidency called for more missionaries Willis, true to his religious convictions, again volunteered for mission duty. He left 6 February 1952 for Mexico City; however, because of ill health in the hot damp climate of the Gulf coast he returned home after nine or ten months.

Beside his mission Willis and his wife have been active Church members in their local wards holding various positions. Together they worked on the Genealogical Committee, visiting homes, explaining the importance of record keeping. Because as Latter-day Saints they believe that they are responsible for gathering the records of their forefathers, and that the earthly ordinance of baptism, which is the initiation into God's Kingdom, is necessary for all earth children both the living and the dead in order to progress in the eternal worlds.

MARTHA ANN CARROL was born 21 August 1896 on a farm at the mouth of Ashley Canyon near Vernal, Uintah County, Utah. She was the older of a pair of twins. When she was four years old, her parents decided to seek their fortune elsewhere; so in April 1901 family belongings were packed into a covered wagon, and in company with two other families they set out for a destination unknown. They traveled first to Colorado where an irrigation project was opening up; then hearing of the wonders of Big Horn Basin in Wyoming they directed their course northward. They traveled through valleys and over mountains where roads were little more than trails. In July after three months of traveling the weary group arrived at Burlington, Wyoming. A few small settlements in the Basin had been founded a year earlier under the leadership of an apostle, Owen Woodruff.

Renting a room the Carrols wintered in Burlington while a sawed log house was being built at Byron; twenty miles north. Later Mr. Carrol homesteaded eighty acres of land and they moved to Penrose. It was here that Annie, as she was called, grew up amid pioneering hardships without any comforts and hardly the necessities. At Christmas time she wished Santa would bring her a bright colored story book, but received instead a china cup and saucer, or a pair of shoes. One pleasure she recalls was Easter and May Day when with a group of friends she hiked into the hills where they ate their lunch and roamed about in freedom.

Ann received her early education in a one-room, one-teacher school where progress was slow because of unfavorable conditions, and though she was given special promotions, and was at the head of her class she was sixteen years old when she graduated from the eighth grade. Penrose had no high school, but the church had established the Big Horn Academy at Powell, so Ann and her sister rented a room there and batched it for four years while attending high school. Conditions were often trying and expensive, but they had a goal to reach and were rewarded by receiving their diplomas in the spring of 1917. That same year the girls took a summer course at the University of Wyoming at Laramie, and after three days of writing exams received their teaching certificates.

Ann's first school was on a sheep ranch in Pat O'Hara Valley north of Cody, Wyoming. She had six to eleven pupils. Two years in this position, and three years in Penrose, her home town, gave the girls courage to venture out of their own state. They applied for and received a position at Kanab, Utah. It was here in 1922 that Ann's real adventure began, when soon after school had started Willis Jacobson, a newpew of Susie Little Robinson, at whose home the girls boarded, arrived after riding seven hundred miles from southern New Mexico. Willis remained to work for his uncle; so the young people saw much of each other in a setting of homelife. In 1923 Willis accepted a mission call to Mexico. Ann taught another year in Kanab then transferred to a school in Spring Glen, Carbon County, Utah.

In the spring of 1926 when Willis returned and visited Ann at Spring Glen the wedding date was set, and they were married 12 October 1926 in the Salt Lake Latter-day Saints Temple. Ann has been a faithful and devoted wife, and though her health has not been the best she has reared two daughters who are a credit to their parents. Margaret is a graduate nurse from the Dr. Groves L. D. S. Hospital where she continued to work for a year. She has worked in the County General Hospital in Fresno, California, and at present has a position in the Shriner's Hospital in Salt Lake City.

Verna the younger daughter is at present training in the L. D. S. Hospital. She was graduate in another year.

GRANT AUSTIN JACOBSON, seventh child of James and Harriet (Little) Jacobson was born 18 March 1907 in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico. His parents were Americans and members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints - commonly called "Mormons." "Mormon" is in no way a name for the church, but a nickname given in derision early in Church History because of the Book of Mormon which was translated from the gold plates.

In 1912 during the Mexican Revolution, when Grant was only five years old his family was driven out of Mexico along with all other residents of Colonia Diaz. After a year in New Mexico near the border the family went to Provo, Utah where the mother's sister, Christina Nuttall lived, and good schools were available.

Here in Provo Grant started school, but because of several moves his schooling was interrupted. In 1915 and 1916 while the family lived on a ranch at Thompsonville he attended school at Marysvale, Piute County, Utah. The following year found him in Hurricane, Washington County. In 1918 the move took him back to Provo. While here his two older sisters were married, and his brother Kenneth, who had volunteered in the armed services in World War I was fatally wounded just before the Armistice was signed. In 1920 Grant's mother with four small boys - Grant about thirteen years, the oldest, and baby Jimmy not yet two years, went to Columbus, New Mexico to her husband where he cared for a herd of cattle.

Because of scarcity of feed for the animals Grant's father decided to take them into Mexico. Here was a new experience for Grant which impressed his young mind with its unpleasantness. He and his father were to drive the cattle down to "Espia" then return for the family. It took them ten days to trail the cattle to their destination. All the provisions they had for the trip was a sack of flour and a can of baking powder. They had nothing in which to mix the dough so mixed it in the top of the flour sack making it stiff enough to be wrapped around a stick and baked over the fire. The water was poor he could drink it only in the morning when it was cold. They traveled along the Casas Grande River, but it had no flowing stream at this time of year, only stagnant pools of water. At Espia the family lived in an abandoned house which had once been a custom house and a lookout for the gendarmes, or military police. After five months here the family and herd moved south to Colonia Dublan. Two years in Mexico and Grant says, he accomplished nothing except to become a second class Boy Scout. None of the children were able to attend school.

While on the farm at West Jordan, twelve miles south of Salt Lake City, Grant was able to go to school, and enjoyed it very much. In his eighth and ninth grades he excelled in his studies, and in every type of sports. In high school he discovered he liked mechanics, and took every course along that line.

He did not like farming, and needed money, so he quit school at the age of sixteen and worked at various jobs. He enjoyed dancing and spent most of his money for clothes and dances. By this time he had become totally inactive in church work and started smoking and drinking alcoholic beverages when he went to dances.

In 1926 he obtained work as a steel worker's helper in California. He saved his money for they were high in the Sierra Nevada Mountains and there was no place to spend it, except at playing cards which he didn't do. In July 1927 he went to San Francisco and began work in a food processing plant, but seeing no future in this he started night school to become a mechanic. He learned much and received good grades. After ten months training he started work for auto parts companies. He did all kinds of work, and found he liked best brake relining and clutch rebuilding. He continued night school taking bookkeeping and typing and in 1936 machinist work, drafting and welding. At this time he worked for Motor Parts Sales, and was in charge of the clutch and brake department.

In 1941 he was hired by the San Francisco Unified School District to teach men in the army about clutches and brakes, but army regulations and the strain of teaching bothered him; so after five months he left and began work for Pollock Shipbuilding in Stockton, California where he worked till 1943. It was here in Stockton his real opportunity came. He found work as automotive machinist which had been his ambition for a number of years. He worked in this position approximately five years, and did well financially. He saved enough money to realize his ambition of having a business of his own, which he opened in June 1948.

Grant had previous to this time met the charming Donna Fern Bodge whom he married 24 August 1929 in San Francisco. They have two daughters. As stated earlier he had grown completely indifferent to religion and never went inside a church except when he was married, and it mattered so little that he doesn't even remember what church it was. After coming to Stockton he began to change. Perhaps it was new associates, perhaps it was the long submerged teachings of his parents that stirred uneasily in his memory. Whatever the cause he saw the folly of his indifference and neglect in following the plan laid down by an all wise creator. He gave up smoking and drinking, and started paying a full tithing to the church - The Lord's portion - for he had come to see that all we have is a blessing from a kind Heavenly Father. We are but Stewards asked to return only one tenth. And has the Lord not promised blessings upon those who obey?

The prophet Malachi says, "And prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts!"

Grant pondered these things and made a turn. He went to church and became an active participant. He is sure his ambition and courage to start his own business and carry it through successfully thus far has been aided by powers beyond his own. He has held various positions of responsibility in his Ward and Stake. He has been general secretary of Aaronic Priesthood, Sunday School Superintendent, Stake missionary and is in the Stake Mission Presidency at the present time. When his wife lay unconscious for weeks in a hospital - the result of an automobile accident - he learned to appreciate the services of the Relief Society women who sat with her day and night until he could secure nurses, and of his Bishop and others who answered the call to use their authority to administer to her.

Their oldest daughter, Joan, is married and Jean who was born on their tenth wedding anniversary is a source of joy and comfort continually. She makes high grades in her studies, and is gifted in rhythm and music.

Beside his trade as Automotive Machinist Grant has a store in Stockton called the Clutch and Brake Xchange which he opened in 1948 and is operating successfully now.

DAVID ABRAM LITTLE, son of David Baldwin and Hettie Maude (Acord) Little, was born 12 November 1899 in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico. Before he was one year old his mother and little sister, Thelma, died. He was then taken into the home of his grandmother Acord and cared for by her and Aunt Cecilia. He went to school in Colonia Diaz for three years, then when his father married again in 1909 he went to live with them on the ranch at LaCabeza, Durango, Mexico. Here he was tutored a year by his stepmother who was a trained teacher. Having only Mexican children to play with he soon learned to speak their language. In September 1910 when his stepmother returned to her home in Colonia Diaz for a visit he was placed in the Palmore Boarding School in Chihuahua City.

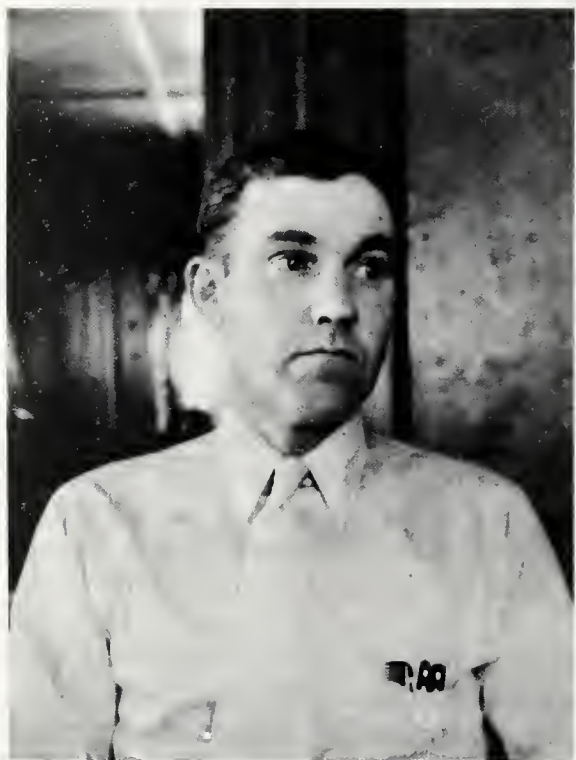

In November of the same year the Mexican Revolution broke out and because of war conditions, his father was unable to take him to Colonia Diaz for Christmas as was planned. His little sister and stepmother remained in Colonia Diaz and he stayed on at the school till June 1911 when his uncle, James Jacobsen brought him to El Paso, Texas where his father was on his death bed in a hospital. Only a few days and his father passed away. Abe returned to Colonia Diaz and for awhile lived with his stepmother and little sister of whom he was very proud and very fond. The next spring he decided to go back to grandmother's home.

In July 1912 he was one among the caravan from Colonia Diaz to leave home and all possessions and travel by wagon to the U. S. , because the towns people would not take up arms. For a short time they lived in tents at Hatchita, New Mexico. Then his grandmother went back to her old home in Spring City, Utah. Here Abe finished his grade and high school, then after a period of wanderlust he returned and graduated from the Snow Junior College at Ephraim. Sometime during this period he met Florence Little, of Moroni, a third cousin, and formed an attachment. They were married 8 June 1928 at Nephi, Juab County, Utah. Together they taught school at Indianola for one year then he entered the U. of U. and graduated with a B.S. degree in June 1931.

Graduating as he did during the years of the depression his achievement seemed rather empty for there were no positions open to him and jobs of any kind were hard to get. For a year they lived in Salt Lake City and he sold life insurance for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Their little daughter Shirley was born 6 March 1932. That fall he accepted a position to teach in the elementary school at Moroni. Next year he became Principal of the Lincoln Elementary School in Moroni which position he has held now for twenty years.

To supplement the limited income from teaching he has raised a garden each year and kept a flock of turkeys and chickens, as well as a few sheep, cows, and pigs. He is a member of the Moroni Feed Company.

His wife is a good home manager. She has canned and bottled foods so they are always well stocked and able to set a good table, and even serve delicious trout out of fishing season. She is an expert with the needle and does the family sewing.

Florence is the oldest daughter of Frank Clifford Little and a grand daughter of Feramorz Little. She grew up and was educated in the elementary school of Moroni, Utah. She attended the University of Utah in Salt Lake City, and the Agricultural College at Logan, and began teaching in the Woodbine School in Duchesne County. She next taught four years in North Sanpete District, one year in Weber County, then in Jordan district, Salt Lake County. Following this she went to her home town in Sanpete County.

Then when her two children were older and the war brought on a shortage of teachers she went back to her profession. She has been teaching first grade in Moroni for ten years.

Through extension courses and summer school resident work she accumulated credits at the University of Utah and graduated with a B.S. degree in June 1951.

From the time she was a girl she has been active in church work. She has been secretary and organist, as well as class leader in Sunday School; 1st counselor to the President of the Young Womens' Mutual Improvement Association; and has worked on the M. I. A. and Relief Society Stake Boards. At present she is working on the Moroni Primary Stake Board.

Abe has held the position of Ward Clerk for the past six years, and was a member of the Moroni Lion's Club for some years. He has been a member of the Moroni City Council for the past year. Abe is sincere and honest in his efforts and gives his best to his work. He dislikes sham and hypocrisy. He is interested in nature and outdoor life, and enjoys fishing and hunting as part of his vacation recreation.

Their two children, a daughter and a son, is the pride of their hearts, and now that the daughter is married and with her husband in the services of his country they are proud of being grandparents to a wee granddaughter.

JUNIE ETTA LITTLE is the daughter of David Baldwin and Harriet Wilhelmine (Fredericksen) Little. She was born 20 September 1909 at La Cabeza, and registered at El Oro, Durango, Mexico. La Cabeza is a ranch house in the northern part of the state. A trained nurse had been brought down from El Paso, Texas for the event.

For nearly a year Junie Etta lived with her parents on the ranch. An elderly Mexican woman, who helped in the home, took much interest in the baby, and of course talked Spanish to her; consequently when baby began to talk her first words were in Spanish.

When baby was nearly a year old mother took her to Colonia Diaz in the state of Chihuahua, Mexico to visit grandmother, and because of the Mexican revolution breaking out they were not able to return to the ranch where her father was employed by the Guadalupe Mining Company. She saw her "Daddie" next at a hospital in El Paso just before his death in June 1911. She was too young to retain any recollection of her father, and as a child felt cheated of family associations such as other children had.

Her early life was full of changes and adjustments, for her mother was a school teacher trained and educated in Utah; so before Junie Etta was three years old she left Mexico and all her family connections and went to Utah. There she lived among strangers while her mother was away all day in the schoolroom. When four years old, with her mother, Junie Etta went to Kanab where her father's people lived. During the three years there she became acquainted with her relatives and had her first year of school.

In 1916 her mother accepted a position in Jordan School District which took them to near Salt Lake City where mother felt there were greater opportunities. Junie Etta attended elementary school in Jordan and Granite districts. She graduated from Granite High School in May 1927. At this school she was interested in athletics and extracurricular activities, she was on the girl's swimming team that won the cup in the year 1926, a member of the debating club, and took part in the school operettas.

In January 1928 she entered the Holy Cross Hospital School of Nursing and graduated from training May 1931.

On September 9, 1930 she married Milford Clark Dunlap, and in the fall of 1931 they went to Oklahoma, his home state. After getting acquainted with his family they went into business and stayed three years then moved to Lincoln, Montana. There they bought a small cabin among the pine trees and enjoyed fishing, hunting and out-door life. One summer they lived on top of a high lookout tower high up in the mountains where their duty was to watch for and report any signs of forest fires. The year of 1936 Junie Etta worked at St. Peter's Hospital in Helena. In 1939 they moved to Long Beach, California. They remained there five years and she worked at a hospital and industrial nursing during that time.

In 1945 they returned to Lincoln, Montana and in December 1946 they adopted their little girl, Kathryn June, at the age of three and a half months. She is a darling child and they are very happy with her. She is now seven years old and in her second year of public school. In 1948 they moved to Helena, and since 1950 have operated a motel where they meet many fine people from all parts of the country.

Junie Etta is slender and a typical blond. She is friendly and sociable, but never gushing. She is loyal to friends. She has musical and dramatic talents, but because of conditions during her growing up periods she had not the advantage of developing these talents beyond a few lessons in singing and piano, and the ordinary school opportunities.

ELBERT JACKSON LITTLE, born 23 August 1914 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is third son of John Tullidge Little and wife, Pearl (Jackson) Tullidge. Elbert's grandparents, James Amasa Little and Mary Elizabeth Tullidge, had settled in this isolated southern village with its red sandstone hills as early as 1871 when the community was being founded. Even as late as the time of Elbert's arrival, Kanab was still set off by itself for lack of transportation facilities. The horse drawn buckboard that brought in the mail three times a week - and occasionally a passenger struggled through the drifting sands often sinking hub deep in the unstable road bed.

But this condition began to change soon after the entrance of the first caravan of automobiles in the fall of 1913. That was an occasion welcomed by the townspeople and long remembered, with excitement by the youngsters to whom outside influences were strange. Here Elbert went to school and grew used to changes. Hard surfaced, roads were built across the desert sand, making motor travel possible. The village took on new life and importance, and has today become an attraction to the moving picture producers, and many films have been made from the scenic surroundings.

When Elbert was a little more than fifteen years old, his father died. After the three oldest children were married his mother with the three younger children moved to Salt Lake City.

On the 31st of July 1937 Elbert married Helen Kennedy. They made their home in Salt Lake City till 1939. For a time he worked as fireman on the Union Pacific Railroad. The next two years they lived in Kanab. Then a few months in Cedar City, and moved on to Los Angeles, California in 1941. There he worked as precision grinder holding his job for six years.

But desiring to get his boys out of the city he looked about for a suitable farm to purchase. In 1948 with his family he moved to a farm twelve miles out of Port Angeles, Clallam County, Washington. Here he keeps himself and boys busy on the farm and interested in outdoor life. He works part time in a small sawmill.

They attend the Peninsula Mission Sunday School regularly or they furnish transportation which is otherwise one of their problems.

FREDA LITTLE, born 10 November 1905 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is the oldest child of Edward William and Maude (Roundy) Little. She was brought up by parents who believed in the Scriptural statement, "Bring up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart therefrom." They also set an example of faith in church activity which was followed by children and grandchildren.

Freda's marriage was consummated according to the ideals of every true Latter-day Saint girl, in a Latter-day Saint Temple where she could be sealed to her husband by true authority for eternity. She was married on 5 August 1924 in Logan, Utah, to Leslie James Juchau.

They made thier home in Eden, Idaho, where they are prosperous farmers, both active in church work and also their children as they grow up. At present Freda is President of the M. I. A. of Hazelton Ward, her husband is Sunday School Superintendent, a son is counselor to the Bishop and a daughter is serving on the Minidoka Stake Sunday School Board.

They are happy and feel blessed in their efforts to serve the Lord.

LA VADA LITTLE, born 16 August 1909 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah, is daughter of Edward William and Maude (Roundy) Little. The first ten years of her life she lived in the warm southern town of Kanab, and began her schooling there. In 1919 she moved with the family to Virginia, Bannock County, Idaho. Six years later in 1925 they moved to Eden, Jerome County, Idaho.

Here she met and on 21 July 1930 she married Wilburn Daniel Davis, who was a Navy man in the services of his country. He is now a commanding officer and has served over twenty years. Their first child, Marcia Mae, was born in San Pedro, California. As duty called him to different parts their home has been in many places. For two years they were stationed at Christobal, Panama Canal Zone, and were evacuated from there in February 1943 after the disaster at Pearl Harbor. The voyage was safe but very hazardous. They were required to wear, or carry life belts most of the time aboard ship. They made stops at and visited Costa Rica, Puerto Limon, and Haiti.

They lived nearly two years in Honolulu, Hawaii, where he was attached to Pearl Harbor. His family went with him on many of his tours of duty, some of which lasted two years. Among such tours are New London, Connecticut; Norfolk and Portsmouth, Virginia, Bremerton, Washington, Long Beach, Vallejo and San Diego, California. They are now permanently located in the Paradise Hills section of San Diego, where he is instructor in Gyro Compass and Interior Communications at the Naval Training Center in San Diego.

They have three children, and in spite of their many moves found opportunity to keep in touch with their church. They did temple work in the Salt Lake Temple, the Hawaiian Temple at Laie, Oahu, Hawaii and the Temple in Mesa, Arizona. She is President of Y.W.M.I.A. at National City, California.

MY PERSONAL SKETCH

by Gertrude Oliphant Smith

I was born in Monticello, Utah in the home of a Mrs. Perkins July 10, 1920. I was the second of eight children. A twin boy and girl born two years after I was, died of immaturity, but all the rest of us grew to maturity and married.

My parents moved around a great deal. The first thing I can remember was Payson, Utah, my mother's home town, where we moved after leaving Southern. Shortly after that we moved to Salt Lake City where I entered school.

Then in 1932 the depression struck and we moved back to Southern Utah, to the "homestead", 640 acres of timber and sagebrush north of Monticello. Those were colorful years. There, a child of 12, I learned to ride horses-- broncs fresh off the range. I learned on Babe, and Clare, my brother, learned on Doll. But the horses seemed to understand and have compassion on us. One time, I remember, while still a novice, I fell off, and Babe stopped and waited for me to pick myself up and get back on her. After I learned to ride better though, she had no such compassion.

We lived in a peeled pole pine cabin which consisted of living room, kitchen, and loft where the beds were. Many's the night, I can remember, when we'd climb the ladder to the loft and Dad would stay down in the living room and read to us-- The Prince and the Pauper, and other old favorites.

But the work was hard there and my mother was forced to bed with heart trouble. The doctor said we must go to the coast or we couldn't expect her to live. So Dad got two cars and a trailer and we went to San Diego. Mom got better there and it wasn't long before we were on the move again, this time to Missouri. We got some timber land in the Ozarks and ended up there for a time.

This was another colorful, if hard phase of our life. I remember with vivid clarity the great greenness of the country, the flitting of fireflies at dusk, and the lonely and weird wail of the whippoorwill or the owl after dark --the owl especially, since it sounded like the cry of a lost child. We had our first acquaintance with the deadly copperhead snake there, which the natives dreaded because it would strike on the run, and the big black snake which ate the copperhead. And there we had our first experience with chiggers.

We got a herd of goats shortly after arrival, with two baby kids-- Lim and Abner, which had to be nursed through the cold winter. Lum was foolish and went out and got himself eaten by wolves, but Abner stayed around and became our pet. He followed us around like a dog, and he would do tricks for us, rolling and balancing himself on a barrel.

But Mom was sick again and we had to go back to the coast, and we ended up in Bremerton, Washington. We stayed here for a longer period than anywhere else we had ever been. We went there in 1940. In 1942, on Burt's Birthday, Dec. 13, my mother died. She slipped away so quietly that though we were in the same room we weren't aware of her going.

I was seized with a great remorse, and also a great rebellion. The following February I broke away from the home ties and joined the WAACs, later WACs, where I was in the service three years. These were also violent years for me. I was violently homesick, but didn't know what to do about it. I trained as a radio operator for a highly secret intercept position, and we weren't allowed to tell anyone what we were doing. This wore on me, and I saw it ravaging also the lives of many around me. Finally I snapped, and went to the hospital, spent Christmas 1944 in the hospital.

I was transferred after that to the medical corps and went to California where I spent the remainder of my three years, and where I was discharged January 1946 and went home.

But I was still pursued by that gnawing hunger and unrest. I went to school for a time, then gave it up and went back to Bremerton where I got a little apartment and lived, first with my sister, Ruth, then when she married, with Peggy Smith, a girl I had met at Utah State Agricultural College. Then Peggy married Burt in August 1953, and I again came back to Utah to school, and graduated from the University of Utah June 1955 with a BS degree in journalism.

I had, while in Bremerton, met and gone with a number of young men, but the most persistent, I think, was Loren R. Smith. I met him in March 1953 at a Gold and Green Ball and went with him through the summer. Then I came to Utah in September. He followed me here a year later, January 1955. We were married Nov. 14, 1955 in the Mesa, Arizona Temple. We chose Mesa because Dad and Jeanne were living in Phoenix, and Ruth came from San Diego to the wedding, and Clare came down from Provo, and they sang at the reception. Loren's sister, and her husband, Betty and Bob McLean, came from Los Angeles also for the reception.

Our honeymoon was somewhat sketchy because it was so short, only a week, but it was lovely, exploring an old prison museum in Yuma, Arizona, staying at the ElCortez in San Diego, and a refreshing moment in the old convent gardens of San Juan Capistrano.

We are presently staying in Salt Lake City, where Loren plans to finish business school, and we're buying a new home out west of Salt Lake City, in Granger.

MY PERSONAL SKETCH

By Loren Ronald Smith

I was born Nov. 15, 1924 in Tacoma Washington, in one of two homes my father had built there. I was the second of three children. We lived in Tacoma and California during my childhood. We lived in Tacoma for a few years, and then moved to California. We lived in Oakland about nine years and before that we were in foster homes in El Cerrito, California. I remember how happy I was when I was eight, when my father came to see us and take us away with him. It was the first time I had seen him in a long time.

We moved around a lot. I went to work when I was 15 years old, and at 17 was working in the Oakland shipyard. Life at home didn't appeal to me so I joined the Army. After that I joined the Merchant Marine for about three years, and got to see a few foreign countries, including South America.

Oliphant Guymon.

JEANNE OLIPHANT, daughter of Clare Howe and Martha Gertrude (Hiatt) Oliphant was born 17 April 1929 in Salt Lake City, Utah. When she was only three years old, because of conditions during the depression her father lost his home, and from that time on there were many changes in her life. First they went to the old homestead in southern Utah, then to Monticello and Moab next because of her mother's poor health, (she had a bad heart) the doctor advised a lower altitude and warmer climate; so they went to National City, California. There, Jeanne remembers they had a nice home, and mother's health was much improved. In 1937 the family moved to Missouri. Her father had made a deal for 1400 acres of land, but this venture proved unsatisfactory. Mother was not happy nor well. They went next to Bremerton, Washington where they bought a home and forty acres of land. In 1942 Jeanne's mother died and the family began to scatter. They moved into Seattle that Margaret might attend the University of Washington, Clare Jr. and Gertrude went into the services of their country in World War II. In 1945 Burt also joined the armed forces. When Margaret married in 1944 her father with Jeanne and Ruth moved back to the farm.

Jeanne graduated from high school in 1947, and the same summer went to Utah to attend the Centennial celebration commemorating the pioneer's entry into Salt Lake Valley. She stayed at the home of her uncle, Ralph Oliphant, in Salt Lake City, and there met Jay William Guymon who was a student at the University of Utah. They were married 26 September 1947. They lived in Salt Lake City until her husband graduated.

Jay William Guymon was born in Orangeville, Utah 26 April 1926. He is the son of William Lee and Una Geneve (Seely) Guymon. He attended grammar school in Orangeville, and high school in Castle Dale two and a half miles distant. He also had one year of college before going into the armed services just prior to his 18th birthday. He spent two years in the Navy as a pharmacist mate. Then he continued his college work and graduated in 1950 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Pharmacy.

Immediately after completing his school he took his wife and baby to Bremerton, Washington where Jeanne's father and stepmother lived. There Jay practiced pharmacy till June 1951. When the wet weather augmented an arthritic condition they went to Pullman, Washington where the State College was located. He wished to get his Doctor's degree, however, by fall he was forced to leave school and work full time to pay for an appendix operation. In December, due to heavy snow and cold his arthritis became very painful requiring all his strength and courage to keep at his work. They decided then to go to a warmer climate, and on Christmas Day with about thirty inches of snow on the ground and more falling they left for Phoenix, Arizona.

He soon found employment there as Pharmacist at the Good Samaritan Hospital, and is now chief Pharmacist at this institution. He is completely free from arthritis, and able to enjoy his work.

Jay feels that the Lord has blessed him, and he is happy to take active part in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints as a Stake Missionary. Jay and Jeanne are happy with their four children.

WILLIAM LACY STILSON, son of William Lacy and Sarah Lauretta (Davis) Stilson was born 17 January 1892 in Orangeville, Utah. His grandfather and family had moved into Emery County with the early settlers about 1880 to 1885. His father died there in Orangeville in 1895 preceding in death the grandparents by nearly eighteen years. His mother was left alone with two small children, himself and a sister, a babe of three months. Before long Sarah Lauretta moved to Jackson Hole, Wyoming where a brother and other relatives lived. On the 1st of January 1900 she married the second time, Frank S. Wood.

Here in this rugged mountain country William grew to manhood, strong and sturdy with a love for the great out-of-doors. On 17 January 1915 he married Lavern A. Eynon, and they have reared a family of five children. One son is now in Korea in the service of his country. With his other two sons William is in business as Outfitters and Guides for hunting parties.

They keep a "Dude Ranch" and have many guests in the summer months. Quoting from his business card we read, "Red Rock Hunting Lodge is situated in the most beautiful scenery in the world, the grand Teton Mountains." The ranch is isolated and beautifully located in the mountains on a forest service road. William Stilson has had thirty years experience in Jackson Hole, and knows all the trails that lead to mountain lakes and streams where trout fishing is good. He knows where to find elk, deer, bear, moose, and mountain sheep during the fall open season, and sometimes he gets spring bear hunters.

The Stilsons keep about fifty head of horses, saddles and pack saddles, tents and all camping equipment. He has said, it is a lot of work and expense to feed and take care of these horses through the winter, and in the summer to keep track of them, shoe them, and break in some new ones. He says there is no harder work, nor longer hours, at times, but it is interesting, and he is making a living doing the work he likes to do. They meet many fine people from every state in our country. Their winter residence: Jackson, Wyoming.

MARY LOUISE BUELL, born 13 May 1890 at Monte Vista, Rio Grande County, Colorado, is eldest daughter of Warren Cyrus Buell and Louise Bell McMillan. When she was three years old her parents moved to San Pablo, Costillo County, Colorado, where her father engaged in missionary work for the Presbyterian Church. Four years later they moved to Omaha, Nebraska, that the father might enter the Theological Seminary and prepare for the ministry.

From 1900 to 1905 they lived in Taos, New Mexico. Mary Louise then went to Guthrie, Oklahoma to live with her grandparents while she attended high school, and there received her certificate in 1909. In 1926 she received her B.S. degree from New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, and a Master of Arts degree from the University of Southern California in 1945.

From 1909 to 1931 she taught in the schools of New Mexico, and in Central State Teacher's College at Stevens Point, Wisconsin as a critic teacher from 1931 to 1934. Her sister, Grace says of her, "She was a very ambitious and studious person, sensitive and musical. She has known keen disappointment and struggle because of years of very poor health, making achievement nearly impossible, but feels that her parents bequeathed all their children a wonderful heritage of valient and courageous spirits.

From 1949 she has given private lessons to piano pupils. She became a member of Chi Omega social fraternity in December 1939. College life had been belated for Mary Louise, she was in her thirtys when she stopped teaching to get her degree. She happened to be in college when the new Professor, Percy Baldwin, arrived and was in some of his classes. They became interested in each other within a few weeks, but marriage was postponed till she had reached her goal and received her college degree. They were married 1 June 1926. Both of them have been interested in the intellectual aspects of life and have felt that though a Professor's income is not very adequate they could not be satisfied with a life not connected with academic interests.

PERCY MALLET BALDWIN was born in Beeston, Nottinghamshire, England, 30 July 1885. His father died when he was eight or nine years, and he was sent to school at the Crossley and Porter School in Halifax, Yorkshire. Here the small studious boy suffered at the hands of larger and rougher boys and became unhappy.

At fifteen, after six years in school he passed the "Cambridge Examinations" and his education was supposed to be finished. He had studied Latin, French, Euclid, and other subjects reserved for older pupils in this country (U. S. A.). He feels now after nearly thirty years of college teaching that he knew more at the age of fifteen than most of our boys know at eighteen or older.

Dissatisfied with what he considered his limited opportunities in England, he emigrated to Canada, where he worked on farms, taught school and finally earned a Bachelor's degree in 1913, and a Master's degree in 1915 from Queen's University at Kingston, Ontario, Canada. He served three years with the Canadian forces in World War I, being with the troops that marched into Cologne in 1918. Upon his return to Canada he obtained a fellowship at the University of California at Berkeley, and spent three years there as a student and "Fellow" teacher, received his Doctor's degree in 1924.

His first teaching position in the United States was with the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, the state college in New Mexico, where he went in the spring of 1925 as Professor of History. In 1928 he was offered the position of Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, a position he held for twenty years. He is still teaching (1953), but no longer the Dean.

Dr. Baldwin has never confined himself to any one small area or field of knowledge. A specialist has seemed to be against his concept of "education" as a "broadening" of ones interests and concepts. As Dean he found it more interesting to learn something of the subject matter in the various departments, understanding the work in foreign languages, mathematics, biology, chemistry, music etc., as well as his own fields of philosophy, history, political science, and international relations. For list of his articles that have been published which show his wide range of interest see Who's Who in America volume 27.

GRACE ELEANOR BUELL, born 21 July 1895 in San Pablo, Colorado, is a daughter of Warren Cyrus Buell and Louise Bell Mc Millam, and is a great granddaughter of Nancy Little who is a sister to Moses, Malcolm, and James. Their ancestors date back to Thomas Little who fought in the famed battle on the Boyne in Ireland in 1690 under the victorious commander, King William III.

Grace grew up on the frontiers, and from experience she can make comparisons of the advantages for children of today as contrasted with her own early years in the village of Taos, New Mexico. However, the family later moved to the vicinity of Las Cruces, the seat of the State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, where there was opportunity for the best of education.

On Christmas day of 1916, Grace married Charles B. Vesper, A Texan, and a small cattle owner. Two of their children were born in the border city of El Paso, Texas. Eight short years and her companion was taken from her. He was killed instantly by an accidental discharge of his gun while he was putting some things into his car where his gun stood between the seats. She was left alone with three small sons to care for, and in a few weeks a baby daughter was added to the family. Grace is the motherly type of woman who reared her own children and enjoyed them. She mothered her sister's girls and nursed her older sister, Mary, when ill on more occasions than one.

After several years of widowhood she married again, Oral Kipling Jackson, a man she had known at the Agriculture College in New Mexico. He is an engineer in civil service employment, a student and book lover. They reside in Montebello, California.

Mrs. Jackson is very active and energetic and while more of a homemaker than business woman she does sell insurance for the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company, and does very well in her work. She is very capable and always full of ideas for interior decorating, club programs, parties, and almost everything. She belongs to various clubs and organizations because she likes people, and likes to do things. The Montebello News mentions her as program chairman and having written a skit to get the audience keyed to the proper tempo for the program, a winter scene with snow and sleighbells, as being so good that it really stood on its own as a show. She has taken lessons in making rugs, corsages, and decorating cakes, et cetera.

Her children have all turned out to be fine capable people, nice to know. She enjoys them, and also her eight grandchildren.

WALTER ERNEST BUELL, fifth child of Warren Cyrus and Louise Bell, (McMillan) Buell was born 17 July 1902 in Taos, New Mexico. When five years old he moved with his parents to Las Cruces, Dona Ana County, New Mexico.

He finished his high school at the New Mexico A. and M. College Prep school, June 1919, and took freshman college work, then entered Nevada University for Sophomore work.

He was a member of National Guard for seven years, and ran his mother's farm four years.

In 1926 he entered oil field work in the drilling department, in Texas. From 1928 to July 1942 he continued in drilling department working all along the Texas Gulf Coast.

He entered the U.S. Army July 1942 and received training in the 13th field hospital Unit in the Medical Corps in both Texas and California. He left New York October 1943 for overseas duty, was attached to the 1st Army and remained in England until June 7, 1944; landed on Normandy Beach, France 8 June 1944, followed 1st Army through France, Belgium and into Germany; was in Eisenach Germany at time of that country's surrender. He was discharged from the army 5 July 1945 at Camp Beale, California.

After visiting with relatives and friends in California and New Mexico he returned to the Texas Gulf Coast and entered oil field work again. On 14 November 1945 he married Mamye Killiom of Houston, Texas. They have lived in Beeville, Texas since that time.

On April 17, 1950 he was seriously injured in an oil field accident and received multiple fractures, the skull, femur, both pelvis, left instep, left heel and left small leg bone. The nerves of the left leg and foot were injured. The right lung became infected and the upper lobe was removed December 11, 1950. After spending nine months in three different hospitals he spent several months convalescing at home.

Resulting from the injuries he now has some partial permanent disability and cannot work in the oil field again. However, he is employed as office clerk in the field office for the same company that he has worked for since 1928. He is a lover of most all sports and especially enjoys fishing.

MAMYE KILLION BUELL was born on a farm ten miles from Palestine, Anderson County, Texas and lived there until eleven years old before moving into Palestine. When she was seventeen years old her father's health failed him to the extent that he was never able to work again. Mayme, one of six daughters and three younger, sought work as saleslady in a store instead of continuing her education after high school. In February 1938 the family moved to Houston, Texas where again she worked as saleslady in one of the leading department stores.

Since her marriage to Ernest in 1945 she has devoted her time to homemaking and being a devoted wife. Their life together has been very happy.

RICHARD SEATON TERRY, born 30 April 1877 is the son of Dr. Wildridge Goldsmith and Florence (Seaton) Terry. He is a graduate of the St. Lawrence University in 1908, and of the Albany Law School in 1911. He practiced law for two years in Watertown, New York then went to New York City where he lived for thirty five years and worked for the Title Guarantee and Trust Company. This long time service for one firm attests his efficiency and value to the company.

On the 1st day of January 1906 he married Florence Longtin of Henderson, New York. They have three children, all of whom he sent through college. Wildridge Lester, the oldest, is now located at Albany, N. Y. Leonard Seaton is of Henderson, and Florence Desir'e Palmer lives at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

In 1943 he retired and has since resided in Henderson, New York.

HARRIETTE ANTOINETTE TERRY, daughter of Dr. Wildridge Goldsmith and Florence Chapman (Seaton) Terry was born 5 May 1879 in Henderson, Jefferson County, New York, where she has lived most of her life. Her great grandfather Seaton was a pioneer of the village. Her grandmother Martha Maria Little Terry lived at Depauville.

Harriette attended the grade school in Henderson and graduated from the Union Academy at Belleville with the class of 1896. Then was a student at Syracuse University where she studied music. Through her life she has been a teacher of the piano giving private lessons in her home.

She has been active in community affairs, is a member of the Universalist Church and at present the organist, also a member of the Henderson Grange, and of Eudora Chapter, Order of Eastern Star. She is a charter member and a past Matron of this Order. She is a member of the Daughters of American Revolution, and once served as president of Jefferson County

Women's Christian Temperance Union.

On February 21, 1901 she married Joseph Aiken Montague, son of Thomas D. and Edwina Fuller Montague. He was born 25 November 1871 in Henderson. His family were early settlers here, his great grandfather having migrated from Vermont in 1815. He attended the grade school in Henderson and graduated with the class of 1892 from Union Academy at Belleville.

While his teaching career began in the Henderson district school, and most of his activities centered here he did teach in Ellisburg, and at the Northern Business College of Watertown, New York. Then for a short time he was employed as bookkeeper and stenographer at Chaumont. In January 1899 he rejoined the Henderson school faculty and was active in the movement which converted the village school into the Union Free school with a charter from the state board of regents. Mr. Montague was the first Principal of this Union School for six years. Then was Principal of the La Fargeville school. Except for this period he has been a resident of Henderson.

In 1908 he gave up teaching and took up different types of occupation. He purchased the old Seaton Homestead, and engaged in farming, carpentry, and raising sheep on Stony Island.

His interest in education, however, kept him in close touch with school affairs. As a school trustee he was a leader in the merger of the village district and a dozen other one-room schools into a central unit. He became the third president of the Henderson Central Board of Education, and took an active part in the planning and erection of the new and modern school building. This position he held for ten years - until 1941.

Mr. Montague is a charter member of the Bay View Lodge F. & A. M. of Henderson. They have one son and two lovely grand children.

The compiler visited the Montagues in their home at Henderson Harbor. She found them very friendly and hospitable. Mrs. Montague is a small vivacious woman with sparkling dark eyes, intelligent, deeply interested in community affairs, and could tell many interesting stories of family history. It is she who preserved the genealogical work gathered by Nellie Terry, and passed it on to us. We appreciate her cooperation and assistance through correspondence right up to the finish of the book.

NAT TERRY FRAME, born 25 February 1877 in Depauville, Jefferson County, New York is the son of Silas Wright and Harriette Antoinette (Terry)

634-E Nat Terry Frame

Frame. He comes from a line of several generations of country doctors, which has given him a rich background for his work in Rural Sociology.

When he was about eighteen months old his father moved to Belleville, New York where his family could have the advantage of an education. Nat graduated from the Union Academy in the class of 1892 when he was only fifteen years old. He was also a graduate of the Colgate University holding a Bachelor of Arts, and a Doctor of Social Science degrees. He gives the Union Academy much credit for his success in life. The letter which follows, written by his teacher and principal, on his twenty-first birthday shows something of the fine influence of that school on its students.

My Dear Nat,

"On my record book I find the date opposite your name - born February 25, 1877. So you have ceased to be a boy. I congratulate you on the basal elements of your new manhood; such as a cheerful home full of good companionship; residence where ideas are respected; love of reading preponderating; unity of purpose in life. I congratulate you on reaching manhood without any stain, without any period of waste, inaction, or low ideals. It really is a good beginning, a promising start. You have, young man, my hearty handshake and most interested good wishes.

"Doubtless every one of us needs a goad or a spur, and no keener goad exists than a thought - the thought for example, that our friends are looking earnestly at us. Your friends expect from you a genuine outcome.

"Stand on your own ground, and you will always be able to stand your ground, that is genuineness."

Very truly,

C. J. Galpin

February 23, 1898

A recommendation by the same Principal bears the date of September 5, 1896 and reads; "Mr. Nat Frame is a courteous gentleman of good family; he is a man of tact, carefulness and fidelity. I recommend him without hesitation or reservation for any business place requiring ability, accuracy and trustworthiness."

Charles J. Galpin

Principal Union Academy
Belleville, N. Y.

Nat was engaged in teaching in early life, later he went to Martinsburg, West Virginia where he went into the field of agriculture, farming, orchardist, and associated activities. His work with the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in the U. S. Department of Agriculture was very interesting and far reaching. He began work at West Virginia January 1, 1917 as State Agricultural Agent; he was made Director of extension work in 1919. He established the first state 4-H camp during his administration; he was educational supervisor of Civilian Conservation Corps at Fort Hayes, Columbus, Ohio 1934 - 1937; Social Science analyst, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture since 1939. He is originator of the Community Score card used to evaluate a given community and mark its progress against accepted standards. He was chairman of the West Virginia Beautification Conference 1925 - 1927, and secretary and vice president of the American Country Life Association, and many others. See: "Whos Who in America 1940 - 41 Vol. 21."

On January 29, 1900 he married at Belleville, New York, Grace Overton Boomer, daughter of Edward and Mary Angeline (Overton) Boomer. She was born 27 November 1875 at Belleville, New York. She and her husband played together as children, went to the same village school, and grew up together knowing each other's families. She learned to admire his good principles and worthy ideals. Together they took active part in the school and community life. She has truly been a helpmate, and shared in her husband's success. They have three prominent sons, a doctor, a dentist and a Public Health Sanitarian. Another son died in childhood.

Resolutions of respect from the 27th Conference of the American Country Life Association is here quoted.

Berea, Kentucky
July 13-15, 1948

The Twenty Seventh National Country Life Conference is the first major meeting to be conducted by the Association without direct assistance from Nat T. Frame. No other man has equaled his record of consistent participation and support. He was one of its founders. He served on its board of directors. During two of the most critical periods he served as secretary. In the 1930's when the American people were most severely feeling the economic depression he was its president. His loyalty, vision, and courage have been one of its greatest assets.

"When Nat T. Frame passed on in March 1948 he left a record which will long stand as a guiding beam for all who work for better country life in America. As a teacher and administrator of agricultural extension work in West Virginia he was a pioneer in promoting programs for rural youth, for farm homes and for more adequate rural communities. In his later years he helped carry forward research programs clarifying the factors and setting guide posts. Through the nation those endeavoring to strengthen human, spiritual and community phases of rural life respect him as a helpful consultant.

"The conference, with its membership representing more than a dozen of the national and regional programs which he helped to establish, and more than twenty states in which he has worked, pauses to pay respect for the long and useful career of Nat T. Frame. We ask that this resolution be published in our Conference proceedings and also that a copy be forwarded to his lifetime partner and coworker Mrs. Nat T. Frame. We further express the hope that the time will come when an adequate record of his pioneering service will be prepared and published so that others may benefit from knowing more about this statesman and crusader for the type of rural life in America which is a first essential if we are to maintain and advance our democratic type of civilization."

Motion to Adopt by W. H. Stacy
Seconded by David E. Lindstrom

"His interest and enthusiasm in the work and his personality made him so successful. Dr. Frame's life was so full of activities; enough to fill many more years if years were counted by deeds and all these were for the benefit and the uplifting of others, especially the young, and those living in rural communities. His work will live in the lives of those he served. He has left a rich heritage in kind words and loving deeds."

FANNY LOUISA FRAME, daughter of Silas Wright and Harriette Antoinette (Terry) Frame was born 11 August 1882 in Belleville, Jefferson County, New York. Her parents had moved to this place that their family might have the advantages of good schools. Fanny is a graduate from high school and Normal College. She came west to Colorado to teach school. There she met Hugh Claud Harris who changed the course of her life. They were married 9 June 1906 in Pueblo, Colorado.

Her husband is a miner so they have lived in the hills a good deal. They have resided in Idaho and Montana. Their life has been the usual activities of small towns. Fanny is past President of Womens' Club, past Matron of the Order of Eastern Star, past President of Ladies Aid, and at present president of the Matron's Club. Since her husband retired they have built their own log cabin at Thompson Falls. Her main hobby is growing flowers, with plenty of interest in birds, pet squirrels, and deer. Because of deep snow they winter in town. Residence: Thompson Falls, Sanders County, Montana.

ROXY HELEN FRAME, daughter of Silas Wright and Harriette Antoinette (Terry) Frame was born 10 December 1886 in Belleville, Jefferson County, New York. Her father was a doctor born and lived in Depauville, N. Y. until sometime after his first child was born, then he moved to Belleville that his children might have better facilities for education.

Roxie grew up and received her schooling there, and married George Alonzo Chamberlain a farmer at Ellisburg, N. Y.

For a time they lived at Skaneateles, Onondaga County, New York where their first three children were born. They have since lived at Ellisburg. His occupation was farming until a heart condition required his retiring from hard work. He has since been very active in the milk business, a director of the Metropolitan Bargaining Agency Cooperative. He attends all important meetings at Syracuse, and keeps well informed on the outlook for the farmer.

Roxey, who has a happy cheerful disposition belongs to the church societies, though she says not too active. She keeps up with her music by playing the pipe organ in the Masonic Temple at special affairs, and during school commencement.

She has reared three children to maturity. Her youngest son enlisted in the air corps in November 1950, but was transferred to the Army in December 1951. He was stationed at Fort Riley, Kansas waiting to be assigned to Officers Candidate School.

Before he entered the services he completed high school and worked on the farm. He was a scoutmaster, and active in the Masonic lodge, also took part in church plays and musical affairs.

CLYDE JAMES BROWN, son of James Tanner and Mariam Martha (Little) Brown was born 5 July 1886 in Salt Lake City, Utah. When he was twelve years old his parents moved to Cardston, Alberta, Canada, later they came to Weiser, Idaho. After his elementary and high schools Clyde attended the Utah State Agricultural College in Logan, Utah.

About 1924 Clyde settled in Boise, Idaho where he lived for 23 years, and was prominent in business as President of the Brown Real Estate and Loan Agency. He was also active in agricultural work and was associated with lumbering and timbering operations. He was an expert in the financial field, and gave advice to many. In a business way he was highly respected by all who knew him, and by all who dealt with him. Many there are who are beneficiaries of his generosity. His acts of kindness to widows, orphans, and others in distress are many.

Clyde has been active in various capacities in his church, but especially in the Welfare Program. He was chairman of the agricultural and budget committees of the General Welfare Committee. He traveled about the Church as a representative, and investigated agricultural possibilities for the welfare organization. His advice was sound and effective.

Those who traveled with him from Stake to Stake in connection with Stake Conferences greatly appreciated his manhood, his courage, his broad experience, and his ability. He was a humble man and faithful. He loved his Church, his family, and his country.

On the 1st of October 1908 in Salt Lake City he married Fannie Catherine Morgan and reared to maturity a family of five sons and daughters - one had died in childhood. He died 1 January 1947 at his residence in Boise, Idaho.

HEBER JAMES BROWN, son of Frank and Harriet Amelia (Little) Brown was born 20 October 1907 in Cardston, Alberta, Canada. He grew up in this place and received his early education in grammar school and in the Church Auxiliaries which gives fine training in the principle and qualities that build for good character. He attended high school, but filled with an ambition to be at work he left before graduating. He worked in Alberta, Canada, in Montana, and at Glacier Park. There he did plumbing, carpentering, and similar trade work.

In 1928 he went to Oakland, California and began work for the Safeway grocery stores later he became a government clerk. In January 1931 he began to study law at the Oakland College of Law, a night school. He continued his studies for four years, and after graduating passed the California Bar examination. He qualified as a Real Estate Broker, and for a few years worked independently combining real estate and law practice. After a time he took over the practice of two lawyers who had been appointed to government positions. This so filled his time that he gave up the Real Estate Brokerage.

Sometime during this period he was naturalized as an American citizen and became active in the Democratic Party. He served his State as a member of the Social Welfare Committee, and was a member of the delegation to the Democratic Convention in Chicago where Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated for the third term.

From early life he has been an active member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. While a young fellow in Cardston he was a leader in his Priesthood quorums, and in Oakland Ward of San Francisco Stake he continued participation in Sunday School and Mutual Improvement Association as well as in Priesthood work. Since he had missed the opportunity to serve a full time mission he was eager to have some missionary experience; so immediately after graduating from law school he accepted a call to a Stake Mission in Oakland. In this he participated for several years.

The church in Oakland grew and the ward was divided froming Claremont Ward in which Heber resided. For three years he served in the Bishopric of this new Ward. Change of residence took him back to the Oakland Ward where he continued work in the M. I. A. , in the Boy Scout Organization in which he had been constantly active for more than twenty years. He is Boy Scout Troop Committee Chairman of the Camping and Activities Committee of the Sunset District of the Oakland Area Council.

Heber has been accepted in Masonry and became a Thirty-Second Degree Mason and a member of the Aahmes Shrine temple. He has been much interested in horses and horsemen, so joined the Aahmes Shrine Mounted Patrol. For a year he was President of the Metropolitan Oakland Horsemen's Association.

On the 7th of September 1930 he married Dorothy Elizabeth Feuerhelm whom he had the privilege of baptizing a member of his church some months earlier. The following June they were married in the Latter-day Saints Temple at Cardston, for they wanted their union to last through the eternities. The wife and four children are all active church members.

At present Heber is a member of the Alameda County Bar Association, the California State Bar Association, and the American Bar Association, and is also active with the Chamber of Commerce in Oakland.

JAMES CLIFTON BEVAN, son of Heber James and Maria (Little)

Bevan was born in Salt Lake City, Utah 16 February 1891 where he lived till he was eight years old. Then his parents moved to Canada in April 1899, but in the fall of the same year returned southward and settled in the Teton Basin, Idaho.

He had just turned eleven years when his father died leaving his mother a widow with seven children to support. James being the oldest had much responsibility placed upon him in caring for the chores and farm work. He hired out to work for farmers following a hand plow for fifty cents a day. When the grain was harvested it had to be hauled to market by team and wagon, for there were no railroads or other transportation in the Basin at that time. James and his younger brother, Ross, hauled the grain to St. Anthony, and brought back supplies for the home. The trip took three days, and sometimes the roads were so bad it was almost impossible to travel.

His boyhood was spent on the farm except one winter when he and his sister Mattie went to school in Tooele, Utah. They stayed with his uncle Arch and aunt Christine Bevan who were so wonderfully good to them that this winter stands out as a high light in his young life.

It was in Tooele that he met Agnes Stewart whom he married the 24th of September 1924 in the Salt Lake Temple. They have been very happy in this marriage, and blessed with a daughter, Marjorie, and a son, Lynn who have been a joy to them. Their whole married life has been spent on a ranch in the Teton Basin. Their occupation has been raising cattle and sheep.

History of Heber Ross Bevan written on Jack Pine Creek
August 6, 1952

I was born in Salt Lake City 9 September 1892. My parents were Heber James and Maria (Little) Bevan.

I lived in Salt Lake City till the spring of 1899 when we all moved to Alberta, Canada. We stayed there one summer then moved to Teton Basin in Idaho where my father homesteaded a ranch in Dry Creek. The country was fast settling and it wasn't long until there was a family and a log cabin on every hundred and sixty acres. There were many children so we had to have a school and a church. Our school was first held in a log cabin on N.H. Hansen's place. The one room cabin was packed full of pupils from five to twenty years old. Father was one of the trustees. Later a church was started, R.G. Mickle was Bishop. They named the ward Cache Ward.

Father died in 1902, that was a dickens of a note. I was nine and Clifton eleven and we had five sisters younger, our ranch was way off by itself. The blizzards howled in the winter and the cold got to forty degrees below. Coyotes howled at night. We moved to Haden to be closer to school.

Clifton and Mattie, the oldest girl, went to Tooele, Utah to school. They stayed with their uncle Arch, one of father's brothers. I stayed home to do the chores, and that was the hardest winter I remember. There were three cows to milk and a team of horses to take care of and chickens and pigs to feed. I drew water for the stock with a rope and bucket. The rope would get covered with ice and so slick I could hardly hold it, and I would howl with the cold, but always the chores would get done. Then we walked to school one mile away. This school was different, 110 pupils enrolled with only one teacher. Some of the pupils were grown men and women. You see many of them had lived in Teton Basin before there were any schools; so now they came.

There were bullies among those big boys so fighting and running was part of my life. Clifton came back in the spring so things were never so bad after that. Clifton got a job for fifty cents a day with old Bill Hill, a cranky old Englishman. I worked at as many things as I could and did the chores at home. About two years later we moved back to the ranch where Clifton worked for wages here and there, and I got a job hauling milk to the creamery about eight miles away. I was on this job for years and had my ups and downs. I wasn't very big so the folks along the route had to build stands to put the milk on so I could get it into the wagon. Rain or shine, good roads or bad, for years I ran that route for $1.50 a day for me and my team. There was no one to help me if things went wrong. At first I had plenty of trouble and would get the harness all tangled up with the she horses on the wrong side. Greasing the wagon was an awful job for a boy my size. One day some boys took the lines out of my harness and I couldn't find them. I hitched up and went away riding one horse and guiding the other as best I could. The milk got there on time.

I liked to hunt and fish, the river and creeks were full of fish and there were thousands of ducks in the swamps. Great flocks of sage hens flew in off the flats to drink and feed along the river banks. What I caught and what I shot helped a lot on the table.

The schooling I received after father died didn't amount to much. Too many chores to do - hay to haul, wood to get and barns and corrals to build so we built them.

When I was twenty-one I filed on a ranch in Horse Shoe Canyon. It was a beautiful, wild and lonely place with only a dim road and a cattle trail leading into it. I was the first man to settle there. I drove in there in a covered wagon on the 28th day of April 1914. I made my camp on the bank of the creek with not a person for miles around. I had never been alone like that before. I killed a chicken and caught some fish. There was green grass and flowers everywhere. I thought and still think it was a wonderful place. One of the most beautiful canyons in the world, but as night came I was frightened at the solitude and the noises I heard. I didn't sleep much the first night or two. I felt like hooking up my team and getting out of there, but didn't. As time went on I got used to being alone and liked it. The wild chickens and rabbits kept me in meat and I could catch enough trout in a noon hour to last me a week. I took to wildlife like a duck takes to water.

There were wild horses to break and cattle to herd. I sat around the campfire and saw my visions and dreamed my dreams; with my ax and plow I would carve a ranch out of that wilderness; I would build me a home and people it. I have made that dream come true. Twenty six years ago I married Eliza Higley, a very fine woman. We have raised a family of five children; three girls and two boys.

In my life I have been many things: a farmer, a rancher, a timber man, and a trap-line runner. I have been a builder of roads and breaker of trails. The love of the wild was born in me for all four of my grandparents crossed the plains with the Mormon pioneers. I have had the strength and health of a man who has lived a clean life in the outdoors. I am proud of my strength to endure and I have enjoyed hardship and danger. I have been in lots of tight spots and have come out alive. I have suffered broken bones, frost bite, and famine. I have bucked deep snow for four days in a blizzard and have slept outside when it was forty degrees below zero.

I invented a weeder which is fashioned after a push-hoe. It will cut any weed that grows and trees up to fifteen feet tall.

Through the last part of my life my hearing has been poor, which has been a great handicap. I had a scar across my cheek and a broken nose. My face was red as my hair and I was big and I was homely. At the present time I am sitting on a log in Jack Pine Creek and writing on my knee. The boys are cooking breakfast for four of us. We are a first class logging crew.

MARTHA LITTLE BEVAN, called Mattie, was born 8 July 1894 in Salt Lake City, Utah, and was blessed there by Lorenzo D. Young. With her parents, Heber James and Maria (Little) Bevan, she moved to Haden, Idaho (now Teton), and began her schooling in 1900, but finished her grade work at Tooele, Utah, where she was staying with her uncle, Arichibald Bevan. She became a teacher and taught her first two years in her hometown, Haden. Then two years in Victor, Idaho where she met Ray Barker Curtis, the man she married on 18 February 1916 in the Salt Lake Temple.

From early in life she had been active in church service. She began with secretarial work in Sunday School and Mutual Improvement Association about 1909 to 1912. She was a member of the Teton Stake Primary Board until 1915 when she was appointed President of the Young Ladies Mutual Improvement Association of Cache Ward. In Victor she was President of the Primary Association two years.

In 1922 with her husband and two children she moved to Phoenix, Arizona. There, at Mesa, her third child was born 2 June 1922. She passed away 30 August same year, at Phoenix, and was taken to Victor, Idaho for burial 4 September 1922.

EVA MARIA BEVAN, fourth of seven children, is the daughter of Heber James and Maria (Little) Bevan, born 25 March 1896 in Salt Lake City, Utah. When about three years old she had the experience (though too young to recall the events) of traveling with her parents to Cardston, Alberta, Canada, on which trip in the spring they were delayed by floods caused by the warm chinook winds; and on the return in the fall, by covered wagon, they encountered a severe blizzard which held them refugees at a kindly farmhouse for a full week. Both events happened in the state of Montana. Her father homesteaded a farm in Teton Valley, Idaho where she grew up and saw the struggles of her mother to carry on after the death of her father. She was six years old when left fatherless.

Eva received her elementary education in the Cache school, and high school in Driggs. In 1919 she entered the Nurses Training school at the Latter-day Saints Hospital in Salt Lake City, Utah. Though she did not stay to graduate it was a wonderful experience and gave her preparation and understanding in services to the sick. She has said of her work, occasionally in maternity cases doctors were late in arriving, babies wouldn't wait, she had no one to rely on but the Almighty, but with his help everything seemed to be successful.

On the 25 of January 1922 she married Theodore Mickelsen, who had earlier been married to Millie Harris, and had two boys, age about three and seven. These Eva mothered and reared along with her own three daughters and one son. On March 27, 1939 her husband died quite suddenly from a stroke. After another year on the farm she moved her family to Pocatello, Idaho, where she has resided since, and given many a helping hand in nursing.

She has also been active in church work. For five years she was secretary of the Sunday School, and two years president of the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association. But it was her seven years experience as Relief Society President that has given her the greatest satisfaction. She feels that in assuming the responsibility for directing this Womens' Association with its activities for the socials, funerals, making of temple and burial clothes, and helping the needy and sick she gained a blessing for herself through sympathetic understanding of her fellow sisters.

From childhood she had been taught the value of work, and honesty in whatever she did. She was taught to rely on the Lord at all times, and prayer has been her guiding star.

Her three daughters are married and doing a good job with their own families. Her son who served in the artillery department of the infantry for two years in Austria returned in the fall of 1952.

For nine years she has been employed at the Idaho State College as "baker lady", doing all the baking of bread, rolls, cakes, and pies etc. used on the campus. Her residence: 850 So. 4th St. Pocatello, Idaho.

EVA MARIA BEVAN, daughter of Heber James and Maria (Little) Bevan, born 25 March 1896 in Salt Lake City, Utah, married 25 January 1922 in the Salt Lake Temple, Theodore Mickelsen, son of Anton Peter and Birgitte (Jensen) Mickelsen. He was born 6 June 1881 in Denmark, (Hjorring County). He died 27 March 1939 in Tetonia, Teton County, Idaho.

He was first married to Millie E. Harris, daughter of William McGee and Harriet Ann (Pearson) Harris. She was born 29 November 1885 in Richmond, Cache County, Utah; died 8 April 1919. They had two sons.

1. Talmage McGee Mickelsen, born 29 February 1912 in Cache Teton County, Idaho.
2. Reed Theodore Mickelsen, born 12 October 1915 in Cache, Teton County, Idaho.

MARY BEVAN, daughter of Heber James and Maria (Little) Bevan was born 28 March 1898 in Salt Lake City, Utah. When she was only a year old her parents moved to Alberta, Canada, but finding conditions unfavorable returned the same fall and settled in Teton Valley, Idaho. She grew up on the farm homesteaded by her father, who died when she was not quite four years old. Her first school days were in Haden, but after the first two years she attended the Cache school, and graduated from the eighth grade, then attended the Teton High School in Driggs. Her school days were happy days. She made many friends and loved everything about school.

On the 30th of October 1920 she was married to Maynard McIntosh at her mother's home. For two years they lived in Shelley, Idaho, then in September 1922 she and her husband went through the Salt Lake Temple and were sealed, or married, for time and eternity. Since her husband's death in 1950 it has been a comfort to her to know that their marriage ties were not ended, but would continue and they would be companions again over there.

She has held various positions in her church, class leader and executive offices; she has been President of the Primary and Young Women's Mutual Improvement Associations, also of the Relief Society. She has loved her church work and appreciates the opportunities it has given her for progress.

Her husband died 22 July 1950 and she feels that without a knowledge of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and her faith in its redeeming principles she could not have endured and carried on alone. She is grateful for the good and friendly people of her community.

MARY BEVAN, born 28 March 1898 in Salt Lake City, Utah, married 30 October 1920 in Cache Ward, Teton, Idaho, Maynard McIntosh, son of William Henry and Nora Mae (Morrill) McIntosh. He was born 5 February 1895 in Junction, Piute County, Utah; died 22 July 1950. Family Residence: Junction, Utah.

- 1967-F 1. Lois Eva McIntosh, born 25 June 1922 in Shelley, Bingham County, Idaho.
- 1968-F 2. Marva McIntosh, born 28 January 1927 in Junction, Utah.
- 1969-F 3. Rea McIntosh born 2 December 1932 in Junction, Utah.
- 1970-F 4. Maynard Bevan McIntosh, born 4 October 1935 in Junction, Utah.

ANNIE MARIE BEVAN, born 23 May 1900 on her father's homestead in Teton County, Idaho, is the daughter of Heber James and Maria (Little) Bevan. She is the sixth child of seven, and was only two years old when her father died. Two weeks after this event her sister Estella was born making seven small children for her mother to care for.

Annie was always happy and well kept, little did she realize the hardships her mother went through. The children were very proud of the four room frame house father had built for them. Most of the homes in the valley were log cabins.

She attended the Cache district school, a two room building one mile from her home, until her graduation from the eighth grade. Then she went to the Teton High School in Driggs.

After the death of her sister, Estella, in June 1920, and the marriage of Mary in the fall she was the only girl at home with her mother and brothers Clifton and Ross. She was lonely, for the companionship of her sister had been very close and dear. However, plenty of work on the farm proved a good cure. For recreation she danced on Saturday nights and rode horseback with her friends. Her favorite mount was a little brown mare called "War Hoop" because it had been purchased from the Indians. It had been wild and hard to break, but with much patience and kindness was tamed and became very gentle and trustworthy, and so surefooted that Annie felt perfectly safe riding over the steep mountains where others feared to ride.

In August 1922 when her sister, Mattie, died, she left three children, baby June, three months old came to their home, and when mother Bevan had a serious illness and operation the care of little June fell upon Annie who learned to love the babe as her own. Then when mother was stronger they took the other girl, Leah, and the two little girls brought much joy to the home.

In the winter of 1928 Annie married Reed Isaac Alldredge and they took over the farm while mother moved to Driggs. Later they moved to Driggs, and in 1939 to Pocatello where work was more plentiful. For four years he did construction work then became an employee of the Union Pacific Railroad where he has remained since. They bought a small house in Alameda and lived there twelve years, then moved to a larger house on North Main street in Pocatello in December 1950. Annie's sister Eva and mother had also come to Pocatello and bought homes. They were all happy to be near each other.

Annie's home has been one of peace and happiness, the children have been proud of each baby that came, and loved them all. Beside her own six Annie took in an orphaned nephew of her husband for three years till he joined the U. S. Navy where he is now serving. When her mother's health began to fail Annie took her home and cared for her till death 30 July 1951. Life did not seem the same without mother, but her advice, faith, and teachings will long be remembered by her children.

RUEL EDMUND PAUL, born 13 September 1897 at Victor, Teton County, Idaho is the eldest son of Edmund Allen and Marcia (Little) Paul. He had one brother and four sisters. At the age of nine years, with his parents he moved to Utah, settling three miles east of Magna in Salt Lake County. His early life was spent in fruit farming.

Ruel was bethrothed to a young woman of his choice, Hanna Rasmussen, but shortly before the wedding she was snatched away by death in the flu epidemic of 1918. He saw her laid away in her wedding gown.

On 8 October 1920 he married Eleanor Elizabeth Gunnerson with whom he reared three daughters.

His trade is that of pipefitter, and by 1945 he had worked continuously 20 Years for the Kennecott Copper Company. For a period in early married life he tried growing flowers - Gladiolus being his specialty. He became quite well known as a florist, later he gave up this sideline.

He is a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints haveing been baptized at the regular age of 8 years. He has advanced through the steps of the Aaronic Priesthood and has been ordained an Elder in the higher order, or Melchizedek Priesthood. He was later ordained to the office of A Seventy and served for a time as one of the quorum presidents. He has also served for two years as home missionary in the University Stake.

In March 1944 Eleanor divorced him, and he later married Maybell Cleverly, widow of Blasius John Cassutt. Ruel gained, as he says, another daughter and a son, and now has 14 grandchildren from the two families.

At the present time he owns a home in the Fairmont Ward where he continues his church activities, helping to build a chapel, doing Ward teaching, and as Aaronic Priesthood Committee member. Residence: 823 East 27th South Salt Lake City, Utah.

JUNE ENGBERSON, daughter of Alma Johnson Engberson and Eve Little, was born 30 June 1908 in Driggs, Idaho.

All her life she has lived in Teton Valley except for the years she was away at school. She graduated from high school then spent two years at Ricks College in Rexburg, Idaho. She attended summer school at Albion, Idaho, at Portland, Oregon (Extension of Oregon University), and at the Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

Outside her home, Church activities have filled her life. Church positions have been varied, and have given her much joy. For several years she was Relief Society secretary of the Stake Board. During much of this time her mother was Stake President. June has also worked as teacher in Sunday School and in the young people's organization, the Mutual Improvement Association. At present she is a counselor in the Stake Primary Association.

June's husband, William A. Strong, was born in Utah but came to Idaho when a very young man. He too has been an interested church worker, and of their eight children all who are old enough to take part are active in their groups.

The family all enjoy their home in the Valley of the Tetons. Even the winters do not seem bad with the many modern comforts. The greatest desire is to continue faithful to their Church, and to rear their children so they will find the same great joy in living the gospel.

At present Mr. Strong is president of the Teton Stake, and as such has the opportunity and privilege of entertaining the General Authorities of the Church in his home. President George Ablert Smith has been at their home to partake of their hospitality at meal time. President David O. McKay of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and his wife have graced their home on several occasions. June and her family felt it was a wonderful privilege to be hosts to these noble and spiritual men.

Utah, was deeply inspired by the beauty of these snow capped peaks and named his daughter after them, and added Mattie as a token of his love for the dear mother.

Teton's first year of school was at Fruita, Wayne County, Utah. (Grades two to eleven) inclusive were enjoyed at Nampa, Idaho. The last year of her high school was at Magna, Utah in 1926. On the 16th of May of that year she gave a reading on a Seminary program in the Pleasant Green Ward. After that program she met Golden Leon Jackman - her Prince Charming- and not many weeks later they were married in the Latter-day Saints Temple in Logan, Utah.

Golden was a school teacher and began his career by gaining experience in the outlying counties of the state, ever working toward the higher centers. He taught at Vernal, Uintah County, in Cannonville where he was Principal for five years, in Hatch in Garfield County, and later in Salem and Mapleton in Utah County. Teton was active in these places in a church capacity as president of the Religion Class organization and leader of the Gleaner Girls in the Mutual Improvement Association. She was also able to pinch hit for her husband when he had rheumatic fever and unable to teach his school.

For the past thirteen years they have lived in Provo, one of the higher educational centers of the state, it is the home of the Brigham Young University.

Teton has a family of four sons and two daughters. She has a record for perfect attendance at the Provo Fifth Ward Sunday School for near five years. She is interested in genealogical work and enjoys helping her friends and neighbors gather material and arrange the records of their family ancestors. She enjoys using her family car to take her family and friends to meetings, to the temple, or other gatherings.

Teton is tall and dignified, she has dark eyes and brown hair. She has an optimistic and cheerful disposition, and is convinced that "If a person is to be master of a situation he must not be annoyed by it."

FLORETTA HANKS was born 18 December 1911, a daughter of Mattie Little and Arthur Eugene Hanks. Her birth place was the George and Martha Little homestead which lies almost in the shadows of the grand Teton peaks in Haden, Idaho. The snow was deep and the morning sun made it sparkle like diamonds over the fields and hills to welcome this wonderful baby into the world.

Arthur and Mattie and their oldest child, Teton, had come from their home, the Floral Ranch, in Wayne County, Utah so as to be with Mattie's parents for this wonderful event. When Floretta was six weeks old they took her back to their southern Utah home where they enjoyed serene peace and quietude until Floretta was four years old. At that time they moved to Nampa, Idaho where Floretta received her elementary education. Her later schooling was at Magna and in Salt Lake County, Utah. She was graduated from the Granite High School while the family lived in Salt Lake City.

As a child Floretta loved to sew and tend babies. At the age of thirteen years she took care of the home and three younger brothers while her mother worked in a store.

After her graduation she was employed for several years as a clerk in Grant's dry goods store in Salt Lake City. In the summer of 1935 she went to Oakland, California where she was employed by Grant's and later by Montgomery Ward and Company. She has now, for several years, been employed as manager of the drapery department in one of the largest department stores in Oakland.

In California she met Lawrence John Sears and they were married in "The Chapel of the Flowers" February 1, 1936. Floretta's mother and many of her friends and relatives were present.

Lawrence became a convert to her church, and was baptized 1 August 1936. He is the oldest son of Thomas Sears and Delhelie Brown. He has collected a library of almost all the books published by the Latter-day Saints Church, and is an avid reader seeking to learn their truths. He has been active in his priesthood quorums, and they have both served as Stake missionaries. They are both diligent church workers. Floretta has served as an instructor in the Young Women's Mutual Improvement Association. In 1950 she was chosen Stake President of the organization in Oakland Stake. She has held the office for over three years, and has received praise and joy for doing this job so well. Lawrence has always sustained and helped her in her church work. As a crowning satisfaction and joy to their union on 2 April 1940 Floretta and Lawrence were sealed for time and eternity in the Latter-day Saints Temple in Salt Lake City.

They both have a host of friends and are loved for their kindness to others.

RAYMOND EUGENE HANKS, commonly called Ray, was born 4 March 1914 at Floral Ranch, Wayne County, Utah, a son of Mattie Little and Arthur Eugene Hanks. He has two older sisters, Teton and Flora, and two younger brothers, Lincoln and Reed. When three years of age his family moved to Nampa, Idaho. Here his father engaged in farming, together with fruit and sheep raising. During these early boyhood days Ray gained two impressions that will always remain with him: first, a love for his grandmother who saved him from a good spanking for letting the cows get into the grape vineyard, and second, an answer to his prayers in rounding up a herd of sheep.

When he was years old his family moved to Magna, Utah. Here he helped his uncle George Little pick and sell fruit.

Ray attended junior and senior high school and college for one year in Salt Lake City. During the years 1938 to 1942 he attended the Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah, graduating in Marketing and Agricultural Economics. His extra curricular activities were serving as cheerleader, in school politics, and in music.

In 1935 to 1937 he filled a mission to the Southern States for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

In 1941 Ray married Edith Slack, who had two children by a former marriage. They now have four children and are enjoying a happy married life.

During the years from 1941 to 1953 he has had many varied experiences. He has worked for the Utah State Agricultural Department grading turkeys and tomatoes; he has managed a grocery store; he spent eleven months in the infantry service, which included a trip to Japan and worked seven and a half years in a real estate - insurance business. He now owns and operates his own real estate and insurance business in Provo. For the past three and a half years he has been Bishop of the Timpanogas Ward, of the L. D. S. Church, at Orem, Utah.

Ray enjoys fishing and hiking when time permits. He enjoys working with the young boys, having served in two troops as a scoutmaster. He has a firm faith in his church, in his country, and in God, our Heavenly Father.

LINCOLN HANKS, fourth child of Mattie Taylor Little and Arthur Eugene Hanks was born 8 March 1918 at Deer Flat, Nampa, Canyon County, Idaho. He has blond hair and blue eyes, and a cheerful disposition.

His schooling commenced in Nampa and continued in Utah. He graduated from the West High School in Salt Lake City, and later attended the Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah.

During World War II he served nine months then was given a medical discharge on 7 December 1944, and was in a hospital for seven months. Among other treatments he was operated on for ulcers of the stomach. The family feels that it was only through the power of the Lord that he was restored to health.

Lincoln has been interested in Boy Scout work, and served as Scout Master and Explorer Leader for five years in the Manavu Ward, Provo, Utah, where he did an outstanding job. In 1950 he accompanied a group of scouts on a three week trip of the Hawaiian Islands. He has been an inspiration to many a boy, and started several on the road to a more useful and successful life.

Lincoln married Duella Opal Stevens 20 March 1940. They had three children then separated. On 26 November 1948 he married Maxine Walker in the Latter-day Saints Temple in Mesa, Arizona.

Lincoln has a noticable ability in mechanics and has registered patents on some of his ideas. He works independently and does his own advertising, selling, and distributing.

He and his wife, Maxine, have bought a home in Salt Lake City and now reside at 3115 Melbourne Street.

He attended school at Magna, and Salt Lake City, Utah, and graduated from high school at Monrovia, California. He spent one year at the Utah Agricultural College in Logan, Utah, and graduated in June 1952 from the Brigham Young University in Provo.

Read enlisted in the Air Corps 19 February 1942 and gave three and a half years to the services. He was trained in the United States till March 1944 then was sent to England and to Naples, Italy. His bombing missions were over Germany. On 29 May 1944, Read's fiftieth mission, their plane had dropped its load of bombs on a target near Hanford when the enemy spotted them and shot flak into their plane making thirty six holes in it. The pilot was injured in the side of his head filling his oxygen mask with blood. Read took over the plane while another fellow not badly injured bandaged the rest of the crew. Flak had passed within six inches of Read's back but he received not a scratch. He had Nick Briggs took turns flying the plane back. They passed over France without any difficulty and reached their own territory where an ambulance was waiting for them. Read knew that the Lord had another mission in life for him.

On 24 January 1944 in Tuscon, Arizona, at a military wedding Read and LaRue (Betty) Whitaker of Provo were united in marriage. They now own a home in Santa Ana, California where they reside.

Avery Caine's relationship to the Little Family is that of great grandson of Feramorz Little, who was son of James Little the brother of Moses and Malcolm Little, who in turn were sons of William Little Junior our emigrant ancestor from Ireland.

Avery was born in Salt Lake City, Utah in 1898, the son of Charles A. and Mary (Roundy) Caine, and was baptized and confirmed a member of the L.D.S. Church at the age of eight years. He spent most of his boyhood in Salt Lake City except for a period of about two years (1910-12) when his family made an extended visit to Sidney, Australia, where his grandparents, the Roundys, had settled many years before. He made the second trip to Australia in 1916.

Avery graduated from the Latter-day Saints High School in Salt Lake City and from the University of Utah, where he majored in medical bacteriology. Following this he obtained a position in the L. D. S. Hospital in Idaho Falls, Idaho. His home was in Idaho for many years. During this period he married Miss Julia Alleman of Springville, Utah, and was ordained an Elder in the L. D. S. Church.

Leaving Idaho in 1937 the Caines spent several years in graduate study at the University of California and the University of Utah, where Mr. Caine obtained his master's degree. Afterward they moved to Provo, Utah, where they are now living. Mrs. Caine teaches in the Brigham Young High School and Mr. Caine operates a medical diagnostic laboratory. Both have been steadily active in Church work in Provo and Mr. Caine now holds the rank of a Seventy in the Priesthood of his Church.

CURRENT LIFE'S MEMOIRS OF G. Bradley Williams

George Bradley Williams born September 2, 1915 in Salt Lake City is the son of George Malin and Catherine L. Clawson Williams. He is at the present time President of the Little Family Organization.

At the time of this account in his forty second year, Bradley is enjoying excellent health although sickness has been has lot on occasion, beginning with rheumatism in his seventh year making it necessary for him to be carried to school. Born to a rich heritage of the Gospel through fine and very spiritual parents; he very early had a strong and abiding testimony of the divinity of the restoration of the Gospel through Joseph Smith. Before reaching his teens he knew definitely he wanted a mission call from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. It came right after his nineteenth birthday; not to Australia as he had always fancied; but to the Southern States. In Georgia this young man fell in love with the peasant countryside; and the poor, meek became his own people. Twenty-seven months of ministry rewarded him with labor not only in the country, but also in the larger cities of Augusta, Macon, and Atlanta. Wonderful friends made for all eternities, and new members in the Church, together with the responsibilities of Branch President, brought development and satisfaction to the missionary. During his assignment in Augusta, he met a local missionary from Greenville, South Carolina who with charm and friendliness gave color to his mission and future life.

The young lady came west to Salt Lake City, some fourteen months ahead of Elder Williams' return, and somehow became rather fostered by the Williams household. Upon his return he courted this eighth child of Talley H. and Lessie Hudson for three months, almost every night. On May 27, 1937, Elder Joseph F. Merrill of the Council of the Twelve sealed the Holy bonds of marriage upon George Bradley Williams and Elva Morene Hudson.

Being a spiritual minded man, he was early called to hold responsible offices in his Church. In January 1946 he became a counselor in the Bishopric of Cottonwood Ward. After three years of service in this position, the family moved to Riverside, California for Bradley's health. In six months he was again called to be a bishop's Counselor. In March 1951 the Williams family returned to Salt Lake City and settled in the Fairmont Ward. A year and a half later when a new Bishop, Denton Jackman, was appointed, G. Bradley was again asked to serve as counselor to him. His church services have been most enjoyable.

Bradley's livelihood has been earned variously commencing in the Douglas Grocery in 1937; through service station for Ballard Motor Co., Arms Plant Construction with Broderick and Gordon; Weighmaster and clerk, American Smelting & Refining Co. Murray plant; Bookkeeping and yardmaster for Petroleum Supply Co. in Riverside, California; thence in the field of salesmanship with Nutrilite; and currently Supervisor for the American Building Maintenance Co.

VAL CLOVE LITTLE, born 14 February 1917 in Glendale, Kane County, Utah is the second son of James Alfred and Mary May (Clove) Little. After graduating from the Valley High School at Orderville in 1935 he attended the Utah Agricultural College at Logan, Utah, and later the Vocational school at the Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

In 1941 he was drafted into the army and served overseas with General Patton's Third Army. While in training he was called into the bugle corps and served there during the war. He was also Post Office Orderly, and looked after the telephone. He returned home 12 October 1945.

Val is interested in livestock and farming. He began early as a sheep herder, and by buying some head of short-horned durham cattle as a nucleus of a herd. He now works on the old Little Ranch with his brother, Kay, during the summer months, and attends school at the B. Y. University through the winter.

He is interested in his church and has been ordained to the different orders of the Priesthood. On 5 September 1952 he married Hazel Vivian Haynes in the Latter-day Saints Temple at Manti, Utah.

JAMES CLOVE LITTLE, third son of James Alfred and Mary (Clove) Little was born 2 July 1919 on Littles Ranch in Garfield County, Utah. He began his schooling in Glendale at the age of six years. When he was ten years old he had the serious misfortune of losing one eye. He and a group of town boys trying to celebrate the 4th of July threw some 22 bullets into an open fire with the result named.

James became a "Trail Builder" in the first group organized by the Primary Association of the Glendale Ward, and took an active part in scout work. In 1933 he graduated from Junior Seminary, and after four years of high school he spent the winters on the ranch with his father until the latter's death in 1943. He then took over and lived one winter alone, but the next summer he had the house and place fixed up so he could have his mother and grandmother live with him. His three brothers were all serving in the army.

The family joined the Hatch Ward and there James continued his Church activities, and was drama and dance director fro the Mutual Improvement Association.

On the 23rd of November 1949 he married Sarah Dee Houston at Springville, Utah. In 1946 he started working on construction jobs and has kept at it since. He bought a trailer house and takes his family with him. He is very sociable by nature and has a ready story for all occasions. He is six feet tall, his eyes and hair are brown.

FLORA MARIA LITTLE, daughter of E. Ross Little and Lilly Laura Wilkerson, upon completion of high school, left Utah where she was born, and went to Los Angeles, California, where she attended school and worked until she met George Fredrick Holland, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Walter Holland, of Fishertown, Pennsylvania.

They were married in Santa Barbara, California, on February 20th 1945, Fred, as he was called, had just returned from two years of combat in the South Pacific as a lieutenant in the Air Force. Shortly after their marriage he was discharged from the service and they began a great deal of traveling in the United States, Hawaii, and the Phillipines. They began their own business which took them to the Orient and for a year and a half they lived in the Phillipines. From there they went to the United States and settled in New York City for a time, and then business called them to Los Angeles, California. They finally returned to Honolulu, Hawaii in 1948 and their son Michael Fredrick, was born on August 20th, 1949. They plan on making Hawaii their permanent home and have established a thriving business there.

MARY J. GALBRAITH, called Mamie, was born 29 March 1896 in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico, the first child of Christopher Layton and Mary Heva (Johnson) Galbraith. She was a fortunate child to have eight direct ancestors living in the community. There were grandparents Galbraith, and Johnson, and great grandparents Johnson and Little. Perhaps she had need of them too, for when she was only three months old her father left for England to fill a mission call for his church.

In 1902 when Mamie was about six years old the family left Mexico because of her father's poor health. The mother with four small children and a sick husband traveled to Idaho where a brother, William Galbraith lived. Mamie recalls that her father was so ill that at every important train stop a bed was made on the station floor that he might rest quietly.

They lived at different periods in Lorenzo, Thornton, Lyman, and Ammon all in Idaho. Then in 1919 he moved to Ogden, Utah and soon settled in a big brick house at 2903 Washington Avenue. This is still Mamie's home, but the large family gone, it has been remodeled into four apartments.

At the prescribed age of eight years Mamie was baptized on the 22nd of July 1904, in a canal that ran through the field, and the following day she was confirmed a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. All her days she has been a faithful worker in the cause of her Lord and Master. For Thirty eight years she has been a Sunday School teacher and has been happy in this work, for she loves children and it has helped to fill a void in her life as she never married and had no children of her own. She has been pleased that children and grownups alike affectionately call her, Mamie. She has labored in various capacities for her church. In earlier years in Idaho she did secretarial work and has been teacher in Religion Class and in the M. I. A. beside an opportunity to serve she appreciates the blessings offered by her church. She has received her endowments in the temple and is pleased that she can help her kindred dead in ordinances they cannot do for themselves in the spirit form. She has had a patriarchal blessing given by Patriarch Hyrum G. Smith which has been a great comfort to her. Many of the promises have come to pass, and it has helped her to understand the joys and the sorrows that have been her lot.

She received her early education in the schools of Ammon and Lyman, Idaho, and attended high school at Idaho Falls. She has worked at the American Linen, the W. H. Wright and sons dry goods store, and the A. B. C. Coal company belonging to her father. At his death she and her brother Elmer, took over the business.

Mamie is proud of her father and mother as the parents of eleven children, and proud of all her brothers and sisters who, all but two who died in infancy, are married and have good families of their own.

CHRISTOPHER LAYTON GALBRAITH was born 19 October 1898 in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico, the second child and first son of Christopher Layton Galbraith and Mary Heva Johnson.

When Layton was three and one half years of age the family moved to Lorenzo, Idaho. A farm was purchased and with the income from a local post office the family was able to live. In 1905 the farm was sold and a country store was built. The store was later moved to Thornton and the family lived in Lyman during the winter while the building was being moved. The family again moved to a dry farm in the spring of 1912 which was located about seven miles east of Ammon, Idaho. Another farm was purchased in Ammon during 1916 and the family spent their time in the valley while Layton cared for the dry farm for one season. Prices being tempting the valley farm was sold in 1919 and the family moved to Ogden, Utah.

While in Ammon, Layton attended the Idaho Falls High School for three years. His schooling had been interrupted for two years when the move was made to the dry farm and again for one year during the latter part of the first war. He entered Weber Academy in November 1919 and after being absent for eight weeks in the winter with smallpox and influenza graduated with the class in the spring.

During the next summer he worked on a farm in Idaho and then did odd jobs during the winter. It was then that the idea of being a school teacher was born, and the next year, with one year of college completed, he was employed by Weber County schools as a teacher of seventh and eighth grades at Eden, Utah. It was here that he met Mildred Stallings, who was an important factor to the rest of his life. After teaching for three years in Eden and in Pleasant View for one he accepted a job as teaching principal in McGill, Nevada in the fall of 1926. In 1928 he received a B.S. degree from Utah State Agriculture College, majoring in Economics.

The summer of 1928 he was a student at Stanford University, and was offered a fellowship in economics which he refused. The next summer his major was changed to Education.

In the Salt Lake Temple, 9 June 1930 he married Mildred Jane Stallings. For the next two summers (1930, 1931) he studied at Stanford and received his M.A. degree in City School Administration.

The superintendent of School in McGill, Nevada resigned in May 1932 and Layton was appointed as Superintendent the same day, the position he held until retirement.

Having been baptized at the age of eight by William Allred and confirmed by his father he made the usual priesthood progress. When seventeen he was made Ward Clerk of Ammon, Idaho. Later while in Ogden he was on the Ogden Stake Board of Sunday School. In the Nevada Stake he was on the Mutual Stake Board, Sunday School, High Council, and Stake Presidency.

As an educator most of his organization appointments have been on the National level. Twice over a period of four years he was a director of the National Education Association, once the chairman of one of the committees, and at the present time State Advisor to the American Association of School Administrators.

Farming has been a sideline since 1934 and he now has a farm at Corinne, Utah and one in Eden, Idaho.

Another mile stone was when on August 9, 1952 his daughter Sharon married Garth J. Blackham and moved to Ithica, New York where he will attend school for the next two years. Lynne will enter the Brigham Young University in the fall.

Mildred, his wife, has been a good homemaker, a teacher and active in church and civic groups.

ITHA J. GALBRAITH, born 16 February, 1900 in the Mormon settlement of Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico is the third child of Christopher Layton and Mary Heva (Johnson) Galbraith who had eleven children. Her parents and grandparents had settled in Mexico because of polygamous persecutions in Utah, their home state.

In 1902 Itha's family left Mexico in a covered wagon, traveled as far as El Paso, Texas, and then by train to Lorenzo, Idaho where her parents farmed, kept the Post Office, and later built a general store.

The family lived at different periods in Lyman, Thornton, and Ammon, Idaho. It was there that Itha received her elementary schooling, and attended high school one year in Idaho Falls. Itha knew her parents sacrificed much to give the children schooling, and being conscientious she felt guilty at leaving them all the work and chores on the farm while she and her sister Heva batched it in town one year. The family moved to Ogden, Utah in December 1919, and Itha continued her education at the Weber Academy for a year and a half. She then took employment as clerk in dry goods store for the next four years.

On 19 June 1924 she was married in the Salt Lake L. D. S. Temple to Paul Samuel Bieler who had become a convert to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints while he was living at her home. He was born at Sainte Suzanne, Doubs, France. He came to America when four years of age, and to Utah in 1922. He is a skilled draftsman and photographer, and has been working for the U. S. Forest Service for many years.

Itha has been an active church worker since she started as assistant secretary of Sunday School at the age of fourteen. She was so frightened when she read her first minutes that she wished to resign, but instead prayed hard for strength and knowledge to do the work. Her prayer was answered. After six months she became the secretary and held the position for five years. She has served as Primary, Religion Class, and Sunday School teacher, and for a dozen years past has served successively as Magazine Representative, Secretary, and Counselor in the Ward Relief Society. Her husband has been active in Scouting, boy work and in music, and together through the years they have done much temple work. They have belonged to several choirs, and for about twenty years she has been a member of Camp T, Daughters of the Utah Pioneers, and has held some of the offices.

Their travels have been confined to trips east and west to visit relatives. In 1925 when Mother Bieler was ill, and again in 1932 when Paul was laid off work during the depression they traveled to Jersey City to see her. Itha has also visited her sister in Norco, and Long Beach, California.

The Bielers own their own home, keep a good garden and fruit trees, and to show their faith in the Church Authorities have followed their advice and canned and preserved a good supply of food, having on hand of some items, enough to last through a year. Their children have all done well in music and are active church members. The two older daughters are married and each is rearing a family of three. The two younger girls are in college and high school.

HEVA J GALBRAITH, fourth child of Christopher Layton and Mary Heva (Johnson) Galbraith was born 15 September 1901 in Colonia Diaz, Chihuahua, Mexico. She was about six months old when her family moved to Lorenzo, Idaho where times were hard for them. That first winter was cold, mother has cried when she told of her baby's feet as it toddled around.

Later the parents had a general mercantile store and Post Office, and got along better. As a little girl Heva loved to skate on the ice and enjoyed times when her father would go out with the children and skate for hours letting them hang on to his coattail. She remembers that when she was baptized on 7 November 1909, the ice on the canal had to be broken to perform the ordinance.

The family moved to Ogden in 1919 and for a time they felt it was a mistake, for all were so homesick for their little country home and friends. However, they made the adjustment and found it a blessing. Here Heva met Walter Gordon McPhie and on 21 June 1922 was married in the Salt Lake L.D.S. Temple. Their home has been blessed with three lovely children.

Heva has found joy in her membership and work in the church. She began her activities when fourteen years old and has continued to the present time. She has held secretary and teaching positions in the auxiliaries. She has a good voice and has enjoyed chorus and choir work in the different wards where she has lived. Residence: 5902 So. 1900 W. Box 87 Roy, Utah.

ERMA J. GALBRAITH, born 15 October 1903 is the fifth child of Christopher Layton and Mary Heva (Johnson) Galbraith, and the first child born to them in Idaho after leaving Mexico.

With her eight brothers and sisters she lived a normal happy life - not much of worldly riches, but a wealth of greater values, sweet contentment; respect and honor for parents; congenial and considerate association with all in the family circle; good health; and a spirituality developed through faith in God; and active participation in church work all through the years. She has been president of the Mutual Improvement Association Counselor in the Primary and Relief Society, a Visiting Teaching in that organization for eleven years as well as a member of the Singing Mothers.

Erma received her elementary schooling in Ammon Idaho, her high school education in Ogden, Utah, and two years in the Weber College in Ogden. She became a school teacher, but in the second year of teaching she met Julian Wallace Halls, and was soon ready to give up her profession for a home career. They were married 8 October 1926 in the Salt Lake Temple, and have three children. They lost their son who died from nephritis when about twelve years old.

Erma has had many changes in residence through her life. She has lived in Lorenzo, Lyman, and Thornton in Idaho; Ogden, Salt Lake City, and Park City in Utah; Owensmouth, Norco, and Long Beach in California. Her husband is now employed by the City of Long Beach. Before marriage he filled a mission to the Eastern States. Residence: 5032 Gundry, Long Beach, California.

ELMER J. GALBRAITH, born 19 December 1905 was a twin and son of Christopher Layton and Mary Heva (Johnson) Galbraith. His twin sister, Esma, died at the age of three months.

When he was three years old he had his first long journey, with his mother he traveled from Idaho to Mexico to visit his grandparents. He was an active child and on occasions gave his mother a bad time. When very young he ran away one day, and when found was at the railroad depot telling the conductor he wanted to go to Rigby. He was one of nine living children in a good home where they were taught to love and respect each other. They were taught to work and help on the farm. They were trained in the principles of the Gospel as taught by Jesus, and learned how to live by these rules.

At the age of 14 Elmer's family moved from Idaho to Ogden, Utah. There he finished his schooling and began to work. He delivered papers, and worked for his father in the coal business until 1927 when he took employment with the Sperry Flour Company in Ogden. In 1934 he was transferred to Salt Lake City. In 1942 during World War II he worked for the Remington Arms in Salt Lake City and a year later was sent to Richland, Washington as a supervisor at the Atomic Bomb Plant. He remained there three years, then in 1946 when his father died he bought an interest in the retail coal business. He became manager and returned to Ogden. He has served as president of the Coal Dealers Association.

On 30 June 1926 he married Eva Irien Nielsen in the Salt Lake Temple. She is the daughter of Soren Nielsen and Johanne Lauridsen who were converts to the church and migrated from Denmark when Eva was 2 years old. Elmer and Eva have two children. His family moved with him from Ogden to Salt Lake City, then to Washington and back again to Ogden.

They have both been interested participants in Church work, besides teaching positions and Sunday School Superintendent he has coached the M Men and the Explorer Scouts basketball teams. He has also been a member of the High Council of his Stake. He had a pleasing personality, and was loved by all who knew him. He was a good father and a good provider. December 15, 1949 he suffered cereberal hemorage and passed away very suddenly leaving his family stunned from the shock.

WILLIAM J. GALBRAITH SR., was born at Lorenzo, Idaho, 3 May 1909, the eighth child and third son of Christopher Layton Galbraith and Mary Heva Johnson. At the time of his birth his father was in the grocery business at Lorenzo.

Until the age of ten William attended the grade school at Ammon, Idaho. Then the family moved to Ogden, Utah where he attended Washington and Lewis Junior, and Ogden High schools. He was active in sports at school, and after hours and on Saturdays he helped his father in the A. B. C. coal yard which business his father started in 1922 and continued till his death in July 1946.

William J. was baptized a member of the Mormon Church on 30 June 1917, and later played basketball and did coaching for the Eleventh Ward of Weber Stake.

He began working for the O. U. R. & D. Railroad 2 September 1928, and has continued in their employ to the present time, first as fireman then as engineer.

On 2 August 1929 he married Maxine Lutz, who with all her family belonged to the Methodist Church. After thirteen years of marriage she was baptized a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on 15 May 1942. A year later husband and wife were married in the Salt Lake L. D. S. Temple and had their three children sealed to them for eternity. On 9 May 1945 a fourth child came to bless their home. Since then they have been active in temple and Church work. He has been Superintendent of the Young Mens Mutual Improvement Association, served for five and a half years as Bishop's Counselor, then as High Councilman of the Weber Stake until he moved to Ogden Stake where he is now serving on the Ogden Stake Sunday School Board.

Their oldest son has filled a mission for the Church in Northern California.

ILA J. GALBRAITH is the ninth of eleven children of Christopher Layton and Mary Heva (Johnson) Galbraith. She was born 26 October 1910. Her birth place was a bedroom located in the rear of a store owned by her parents in the village of Thornton, Idaho. An interesting item was that her brother William J., next older, had been born in the same room, but in the city of Lorenzo, Idaho. The store had been moved from Thornton to Lorenzo between the births of these two children.

When Ila was eight years old her parents moved to Ogden, Utah where she has resided since. She often recalls fond memories of her childhood in Idaho; the delicious fragrance of the apple orchard in spring, near their home in Ammon; her father speaking in Spanish to the Mexican laborers he employed on the eighty acre farm; and the summers when they lived on the dry farm with many, rattlesnakes on it. And she recalls the first season in Ogden when the younger children got a thrill out of riding on the trolley cars, sometimes they would run blocks in the opposite direction in order to get a longer ride on the street car.

Her education was received in the Lewis Elementary, the Junior High and Ogden High schools through the eleventh grade. She left school to take employment as an operator for the Bell Telephone Company, where she worked over six years.

On the 17th of April 1934 she married Andrew Leon Rasmussen in the Salt Lake Temple. His grandparents on his father's side were Danish immigrants to this country, converts to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They crossed the plains with the pioneers in one of the hand cart companies, settling first in Salt Lake City then in Huntsville, Ogden valley. His maternal grandparents came from England, residing in Pennsylvania for a time then came to Ogden by train.

Leon Rasmussen is an employee of the railroad in Ogden working as clerk since 1929. His activities in church have been leader in Explorer Scouting, Counselor and Superintendent of the Young Mens Mutual Improvement Association, Ward Clerk, and is now a member of the High Council. Ila's church service has been in the music department. She has been organist in the various organizations of both Ward and Stake. This service has given her great satisfaction. She has also been teacher in the Primary Association.

After a year and a half of married life Ila and her husband were blessed with their first children - a pair of twins, Boyd Leon and Barbara Ila. Only three months and four days after birth Barbara Ila passed away after just twenty four hours of illness diagnosed as stomach infection. Many babies were afflicted at this time, also little Boyd; but he recovered and has lived to maturity. Ila and her husband have four more children. They all live a happy family life striving to be good American citizens, and worthy children of God. Residence: P 98 Victory Rd. Washington Terrace, Ogden, Utah.

BELVA J. GALBRAITH, born 24 October 1915 in Ammon, Idaho is the tenth child of Christopher Layton and Mary Heva (Johnson) Galbraith. In 1919 the family moved to Ogden, Utah. There she resided in the family home at 2903 Washington Boulevard until the time of her marriage and going to Eureka, California.

Although their circumstances were moderate they had a wonderful home and happy childhood due to the loving companionship of father, mother, brothers, and sisters. She escaped most of the serious childhood diseases, but was caught in the smallpox and influenza epidemics.

Her schooling commenced at the age of six in the Lewis Elementary, and continued in the Lewis Junior, and Ogden High schools.

On the 1st of August 1935 when she was nearly twenty years she married Edward Dean Naylor. The wedding took place in the family home and Bishop Riley of the 11th Ward performed the ceremony.

At the present time they have two sons both born in California, Larry the older is a sophomore at the Eureka Senior High School and James attends the grammar school. Belva had been brought up in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and been an active member of the 11th ward. When Larry was of age for baptism his parents made a trip to Ogden in 1945 that he might be baptized in the same Ward as his mother. He was baptized by his uncle William J. Galbraith.

Before her marriage Belva had worked for the telephone company in Ogden. After a time in Eureka, California she took employment with a ladies ready-to-wear department store until the war when she went to work as an ambulance driver for the Navy at the Chicago Bridge and Iron Company drydock. Her husband now owns and operates Naylor's Sporting Goods Store in Eureka, and she is a housewife residing at 2102 E St. Eureka, California.

LA VEIVE BLACK was born in Salt Lake City, Utah in 1923, but has lived most of her years in Provo, Utah. She finished elementary and high school there, and had two years of college at the B. Y. University. She has a naturally sweet and lovable disposition.

At college she met a young man from Montana to whom she was attracted. Edison Carnot Breckenridge was a convert to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He and his family had heard the message of the missionaries and felt in their hearts it was true. He was seventeen years old when he was baptized. Later the family moved to Provo, almost as if by appointment to meet his life's companion.

Edison served three and a half years in the Air Force as a mechanic. It was during this time in October 1943 that he married La Veive at Pratt, Kansas. Upon his return home he continued his schooling and graduated in 1950.

In 1952 he was called on a mission to Hawaii, and spent two years laboring for the church spreading the light of the Gospel that others might be made happy as he has been. His wife at home caring for their two small children deemed it not a great sacrifice to share her husband's time in the worthy cause of our Master. Residence:

ARCH MADSEN, born 4 December 1913 at Lake View, a rural community just northwest of Provo, Utah. He is the oldest child of Parley William and Christina (Nuttall) Madsen. When very young, he showed a marked interest in music. He was especially attracted to the violin, and began taking lessons when he was ten years old. He played a selection in a concert after taking only ten lessons. When he was four years old, his parents moved to Toppenish, Washington, but because of his ill health there, they returned to their Utah home after three years.

Arch finished his grade school in Lake View, and graduated from the Lincoln High School at Orem in 1932. During these years, he and his violin were prominent in the Music Department. He next attended the Brigham Young University for one year.

Arch seemed to have a natural interest in radio, and with the first money he earned bought a small crystal set with earphones. When he was fifteen years old, he built what is called a ham radio station in his bedroom, and spent many hours night and day at this station.

When he was eighteen years old, he and a friend, Cutler Miller, were selected by the Commanding General of the Ninth Corps area of the U. S. Army to go to Fort Missoula, Montana to erect and operate a point-to-point radio station for the U. S. Army Corps. While in Montana, Arch had a key part in the organization of radio communication for the U. S. Forest Service Region One, and directed the first major use of radio in combating forest fires during the summer of 1934 when a disastrous fire struck Northern Idaho.

He returned to Provo in 1935, and after another year of college at the B. Y. University he again turned to radio, and was first employed as temporary engineer at station KSL in Salt Lake City, then went to Cedar City, Utah where he helped open station KSUB serving as its chief engineer and manager. While in Cedar City he had the privilege of taking the part of his great grandfather, James A. Little, as the first sheriff of Iron County in a radio drama telling the story of early Utah history.

In 1938 Arch married Margaret Dee Higginbotham in the Latter-day Saints Temple at Salt Lake City. For a time they lived in Cedar City then moved to Salt Lake City where he was employed by radio station KUTA.

In 1939 he came to Provo as manager of Provo's first radio station the KOVO. He was co-founder and organizer of the Intermountain Radio Network in 1940. He returned to KSL as director of commercial operations and remained there for four years. In 1949 he moved back to Provo as vice-president and manager of station KOVO. This position he held until the spring of 1954 when he moved his family to New York where he is a member of the executive staff of Broadcast Advertising Bureau.

Arch and his wife have five children, and they have both been active in the church organizations. Arch was counselor in the Bishopric of Colonial Hill Ward in Salt Lake City, he was a member of the High Council in Sharon Stake, and the Bishop of Oak Hills First Ward in East Sharon Stake.

Written by his mother Christina N. Madsen.

VELMA MADSEN, born 8 January 1917 at Lake View (Provo) Utah, is the daughter of Christina Nuttall and Parley William Madsen. Her early years were spent in Lake View and Toppenish, Washington.

When she was five years old her family returned to their former home in Utah. Here she attended the grade school completing the sixth grade, then went by bus to the Lincoln Junior and Senior High School in Orem until her senior year. During this winter because of the illness of her mother who needed her help at home her attendance was so irregular that she could not graduate with her class, however, she completed the years work at the Brigham Young High School and graduated in the spring of 1935.

In the fall of 1935 she enrolled in the Provo Beauty School where she studied for nine months, and after successfully completing this course she worked for Mrs. Marie Woodhouse. Velma's supervisor at school who had recognized her ability and skill encouraged her to go into business for herself; so with help from her parents she and Mrs. Woodhouse purchased a beauty salon a few months later. They called the shop Mar-Vell and operated it successfully.

During the times she worked in Provo, she lived at home, and was active in her church as second counselor in the Young Womens Mutual Improvement Association, and a teacher in Sunday School.

On September 18, 1939 Velma married Aaron Williams in the Salt Lake L.D.S. Temple. He was the son of Hugh and Ingrid (Petersen) Williams. His mother died when he was about two years old, and he was reared by his grandparents, Charles Williams and Louisa Christensen, who were converts from Denmark.

Velma and Aaron lived for a while in Provo, where three children were born. After the husband's return from service in the U.S. Navy they built a home in Lake View. They moved to Mapleton, Utah in 1953, where they now reside.

went across to England. In July after first flying a special mission to Greenland, he was navigator on one of the first three B-17 bombers to fly the Atlantic non stop.

While in England Parley attended the Royal Air Force Navigation School, and was awarded a certificate as R. A. F. Navigator, one of the few men in the U. S. Army Air Force to have completed both schools. Later he flew four anti submarine patrols in B-24's over the Bay of Biscay during the African Invasion, and twenty one bombardment missions over continental Europe including the first raid by U. S. bombers over German soil. On the 29th of May 1943 on his twenty second bombardment mission he was shot down over the Brittany Peninsula having to resort to a parachute when the airplane caught fire from enemy gunfire. After eighteen hours of freedom he was captured by the Germans, and spent twenty three months as a prisoner of war. He was liberated 29 April 1945.

He returned to the United States by ship arriving in Utah 6 June 1945. On the 27th of June same year he married Romaine Christensen in the Salt Lake L. D. S. Temple. He remained in the armed services three years after victory was declared over Japan. He was assigned to Ellington Field, Texas and Fairfield Suisun Air Force Base in California. After completing an Air Force Officers Weather Course at Chanute Field, Illinois he was assigned to weather reconnaissance work over the Pacific.

Returning to inactive status 1st September 1948 he entered the Brigham Young University and graduated with a B. S. degree in Zoology in 1950. He then transferred to the University of Utah College of Medicine where he graduated with an M. D. degree in March 1954. He interned at the Dr. Groves L. D. S. Hospital in Salt Lake City, Utah, as a first Lt. U. S. Air Force (Medical Corps). Upon completion of his internship, he was transferred to Mitchel Air Force Base, Long Island, N. Y. where he was assigned for nine months. He was then assigned as Chief Medical Examiner, Armed Forces Examining Station, Newark, N. J. On 23 April 1957, he was retired for medical reasons from the Air Force. On 1 May he started residency training in the field of physical medicine and rehabilitation at the Institute of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, N. Y. U. - Bellevue Medical Center, N. Y. C. After one year, his health required him to return to the dryer climate of Utah. It is his intention of continuing in his chosen field in Medicine of helping the physically handicapped.

Parley had always enjoyed reading, with preference for biography, history, and scientific writings. Through learning to knit while in prison camp he has developed a hobby in the line of handicraft.

1100-E Kenneth Russell Madsen

1100-E Sandra Lucy Snow

(1100-E)

KENNETH RUSSELL MADSEN, was born in Lake View (near Provo) Utah, on July 24, 1925, the sixth child and fourth son of Parley William and Christina Nuttall Madsen. His childhood and youth were spent in Lake View. He was graduated from Lincoln High School, Orem, Utah, in 1943. In October of that same year, he was inducted into the United States Army.

At the start of his military service, he was assigned to the Army Specialized Training Program to be trained to become an officer in the Corp of Army Engineers. At the conclusion of his basic training at the Infantry Training School, Fort Benning, Georgia, however, the Specialized Training Program was abolished and he was, along with the other participants in the program, transferred to the infantry.

On July 24, 1944, Kenneth was alerted for shipment overseas. He was sent to the European Theatre of Operations. In combat in the Alsace-Lorraine area of France, he served as company and battalion scout until wounded by a German artillery shell on December 14, 1944. By March of 1945 he had recovered sufficiently to be flown back to the United States for additional surgery and treatment. On January 10, 1946, at his own request, he was discharged from the service to attend Brigham Young University while continuing to convalesce. For his military service he was awarded, among others, the Bronze Star and Purple Heart medals.

Kenneth was graduated from Brigham Young University in June of 1948, with honors. In June of 1951, he was graduated, with high honors from the University of Utah College of Law, at the head of his class. Having previously accepted a position with a law firm, he immediately entered private practice with this firm in Washington D. C. In May 1953, he accepted a position in the legal department of American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York City, moving to that city in September 1953 and then to Short Hills, New Jersey in 1955. He is admitted to practice law in the courts of the States of Utah and New York and in the District of Columbia, as well as several Federal courts.

While in Washington, D. C. , he met Sandra Snow, daughter of Glenn E. and Laura Gardner Snow. On July 15, 1953, Kenneth and Sandra were married in the St. George L. D. S. Temple.

Kenneth has served in many Church positions including Y. M. M. I. A. Superintendent in the Washington (D. C.) Ward and New York Stake, Sunday School Superintendent of the Manhattan Ward and Counselor in the Presidency of the New York Stake Mission. On June 25, 1958 he was ordained a high Priest by Apostle Harold B. Lee and set apart as First Counselor in the Bishopric of the Short Hills Ward, New York Stake.

RONALD EARL MADSEN was born 15 July 1928 in Provo, Utah. He was the seventh child and the fifth son of Christina Nuttall and William Parley Madsen. He was a small active child and made life interesting for both parents and school teachers. During his high school his friends often remarked that he must get his information through his arms from carrying his books because they never saw him quiet enough to study. He always received good marks in his classes and graduated at the age of seventeen from the Lincoln High School.

Having passed the Eddy Test given by the Navy for electronic aptitude, he entered the U. S. Navy immediately after graduation from high school. He entered training in electronics at Great Lakes, Illinois and at Treasure Island, California, earning the rate of petty officer second class. After a short period of sea duty he was discharged March 10, 1948, returned to his home in Provo, and entered the Brigham Young University.

In October 1948 he went on a mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to the Eastern States. He spent most of the time in Western Pennsylvania, and in the city of Philadelphia. He was released from his mission in the spring of 1950 because of ill health. That fall he again began school at the Brigham Young University where he graduated from the College of Commerce with a B.S. degree in accounting, in the spring of 1952. At the same time he was honored with election to Phi Kappa Phi, national honorary scholastic fraternity. He attended the George Washington Law School in Washington D. C. on a scholarship awarded him by that school. He graduated with an LL. B. degree in 1955.

On March 9, 1951 he married Kathryn Elizabeth Heacock of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She is a convert to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints whom he met on his mission. She came to Provo to attend the Brigham Young University on a scholarship awarded her by the Mastbaum Vocational Technical High School of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She hopes to continue her studies with her husband.

JAMES ARLO NUTTALL, son of James A. and Leona (Bunnell) Nuttall was born 26 October 1919 in Provo, Utah County, Utah. He began his schooling in Somerset, Colorado where his father was superintendent of schools. He completed the first grade there. Then the family moved to Huntington, Emery County, Utah. Here, he finished the elementary grades and three years of high school. He was a participant in several of the extra curricular activities, the school band, public speaking, dramatics, and debating, and was on the staff for the school yearbook in 1935-36. He graduated from the Ephraim High School in 1937 - then entered Snow College where his interest in these activities continued; debating, dramatics, and extemporaneous speaking being his specials. He was also interested in sports and was on the school tennis team. At college, he was a member of the International Relations Club, the German Club, and the Sigma Delta Chi. The year 1938-1939 he was class president and was chosen Representative Man of the studentbody that year.

After graduating from Snow College, he accepted a call to a mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He was set apart by Antone R. Ivins on 21 June 1939 for a mission to Germany, but when war closed that mission, he spent several weeks in Denmark, then was transferred to the Northern States Mission where he labored in Akron, Ohio, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and in Detroit, Michigan. At Detroit, he was a member of the mission male chorus, and there finished his mission.

Shortly after returning home, he went into the services of his country in World War II. He was taken prisoner in the Philippine Islands and held by the Japanese for forty-two months.

Following his release and return home, he studied medicine, graduating from the University of Utah School of Medicine in 1950. He served his internship at St. Luke's Hospital in Chicago. Doctor Nuttall settled in Kamas, Summit County, Utah in September 1952 after having practiced a short time in Beaver, Utah.

Doctor Nuttall was of a shy and unassuming disposition. One really had to get acquainted with him to know him. His mother has said he continually amazed her with his keen insight into her emotions and needs. He was most kind and generous, always had a great love for humanity. After his return from his years in prison camp, he had no evil or ill to speak of the Japanese, just sympathy for the very meager living they had.

Upon being asked by his mother how he liked his profession, he told her that he wouldn't want to do anything else, if only he had some other way of making a living so that he wouldn't have to charge people for his services. That seemed too much like kicking people when they were down.

On 21 March 1947, he married Nada Paulsen in the Latter-day Saint temple at Manti, Utah. They have two daughters. He died 23 December 1952 of a heart ailment.

WHITNEY AMASA LITTLE, second son of Lorin Amasa and Loretta (Swapp) Little was born 26 May 1919 in Kanab, Kane County, Utah. When he was three years old, his father moved to Weiser, Idaho and engaged in farming. In about two years, the family moved to Mt. Hebron, Siskiyou County, California. Here his father engaged in ranching and logging business. Whitney finished his first six years of school at Mt. Hebron. The next move was to Camas, Washington where they lived till 1931 at which time the father's health failed and they went to Arizona living in various locations in the state. Whitney finished his second year of high school in Flagstaff, Arizona.

At the age of fourteen, he began to work on his own. He drove a dump truck for a construction company. This work he followed in Arizona and New Mexico till the fall of 1938 when he went to Cedar City, Utah. While living there, in the spring of 1939, he married Phyllis Glover of Alton, Utah. With his wife, he went back to New Mexico, and returned again to Utah in 1940. Their daughter, Patricia, was born in Heber City.

He and his family have had many changes of residence, but California has been the seat since 1940, and he has engaged in different kinds of work. At the outbreak of World War II, he was working on defense projects as diesel mechanic. In 1943, he went to the Yukon territory as mechanic for a Utah Construction Company on the Alcan Highway. Returning from this job, he enlisted in the U. S. Navy Seabees as a M.M.1/c. He was discharged in 1946 at Port Hueneme, California. With his family, he moved to Pittsburg in Contra Costa County where he worked as a welder in a machine shop. In 1947, Whitney went into the garage business for himself at Greenville. After four years, he closed out this business and took a job with the Fruit Grower's Supply Company at Westwood.

Though he has made many moves and had many kinds of work, he has shown a persistence in making adjustments to existing conditions and forging ahead for the good of his family of three children.

LLOYD EDWIN ERICKSON was born in Klamath Falls, Oregon, 6 February 1930. Shortly thereafter, his parents moved to San Francisco in the hard times of the depression. They were divorced about 1934 although they had been separated for a long time previous to this. Meanwhile, Lloyd was boarded out in strange families till he reached 11 years of age. About this time, 1941, his mother married Carl Anderson, a carpenter by trade. Then, he (Lloyd) and his mother and stepfather moved to the Sonoma Valley, California and built a home in El Verano, California, where Lloyd also completed grammar school in 1943. In 1945, Lloyd's mother divorced Carl, and so he, with his mother, moved to Santa Rosa, California. There his mother married her present husband, Martin Christian Anderson, a furniture man. There at the Santa Rosa High School Lloyd completed high school in 1947. Thereafter, he studied chemical engineering at Santa Rosa Junior College for one year. Then, he joined the Navy for one year enlistment. Upon completion of this tour of duty, he found part-time work in Berkeley, and started as a Sophomore in the University of California in the pre-legal curriculum. By working at Rounds and Kilpatric Lumber Mill, Cloverdale, California, during the summers and working part-time during the spring and fall semesters, he managed to put himself through the University, receiving his A. B. degree in General Curriculum in 1952. He was then admitted to the Boalt Hall School of Law in September 1952 and with his former savings and summer work at the lumber mill, he completed two and one-half years of that graduate study. The third year was completed by keeping a part-time job during the semesters. In June, on the 17th day, 1955, he received the L. L. B. degree.

He served a two year mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the North Central States from October 1955 to October 1957. He was admitted to the California Bar in the spring of 1958 and is now practicing with the Iverson and Hogoboom attorneys in Los Angeles, California.

2777-F 3. Jaclyn Thomas, born 16 October 1949 in Riverside, Riverside County, California.

LELAND WAYNE THOMAS, was born 1 July 1915 at Redondo Beach, California, a son of John Scott Thomas and Vera Carlton French. He lived most of his life in California.

On 25 August 1940 in Kanab, he married Gayle Jones, a granddaughter of Susan Elizabeth Little and George Heber Robinson. The rites later were solemnized in the St. George Temple, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 26 June 1947. Wayne joined the church as a convert on 18 June 1940 when he was baptized by Brother Fred C. Heaton in the St. George Temple. He and family have lived in California, Henderson, Nevada, Kanab, Cedar City, and then made a permanent home in St. George, Utah.

Wayne had been employed as a gasoline distributor, salesman, carpenter and builder, building inspector, and had also worked as a policeman and a deputy sheriff. In this work, he contributed by loyal effort and efficiency; he was industrious and dependable.

Wayne was blessed with a winning personality - made friends easily. He was always kind and considerate to others. He said, "Wherever I go, I want to be a good neighbor, and naturally, I want to have good neighbors." He was a friend to everyone - a Good Samaritan. He had faith in his fellow men and loved them. He would rather suffer wrong himself than to hurt anyone. He filled the Savior's command, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul and with all thy mind, and thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

James Cameron of the St. George Temple Presidency and a neighbor said, "Wayne was a man of God - he loved the Gospel of Jesus Christ - he had a testimony of the divinity of this great work and he knew Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God. He knew that the Church Welfare Plan was of God and he said, "I give it whole hearted support. I believe firmly that the authorities of the Church were inspired when they told us to store up against the hour of want."

He was an active member of the Church - was a member of the High Priests' quorum of the St. George Stake, was a high priest group leader in the First Ward and a Sunday School teacher at the time of his death. He was also a member of the genealogical group which was presenting the Temple Pageant in the St. George Temple district. He had served previously as a member of the bishopric of the Arlington Ward of San Bernardino Stake in California, and as a Sunday School superintendent there. And he remembered, too, the words of the Lord to the Prophet Joseph. "Wherefore, let every man learn his duty and to act in the office to which he is appointed in all diligence." He was not a slothful servant. A speaker at the funeral said, "Wayne demonstrated to the Nth degree those principles which our Lord and Savior taught while he was here on earth. Wayne was kind; he was charitable; he was humble. He accepted of every responsibility that was extended to him in church service, and devoted every ounce of energy to his work."

After moving to St. George in March 1951, and building a home for his family, Wayne seemed more contented and satisfied. He loved his family and enjoyed his home - this he expressed often. One of his favorite expressions was, "I just love these old red hills." He was happy having made a home in Utah's Dixie with its red hills and beautiful temple.

He was killed suddenly one night when the car he was driving hit a slow train at a crossing near Salina, Utah, 24 April 1952. This was the first accident he had ever had. He was an excellent driver and respected the law of the land - especially traffic laws. So why! Only God knows!

At the funeral, Bishop Ashby said, "Among other duties of a bishop he is ordained to be a common judge in Israel; to be judge of those over whom he presides. It is significant that here today three bishops have rendered beautiful judgment; have testified to the goodness and the worth of a man who has departed this life. I know that in the Book of Life pertaining to Brother Thomas, that judgment will be recognized, and our Heavenly Father will be happy for it."

TERRY SEATON MONTAGUE, son of Joseph Aiken and Harriette Antonette (Terry) Montague, was born 7 August 1905 in Henderson, Jefferson County, New York. This village has been the ancestral home for several generations, both the Seatons and Montagues were early pioneers of this community.

Here Terry grew up and went to school in one of the many small schools which he saw later consolidated into one large unit. His home environment was rich in culture and educational influences. His father was a school man - had been a teacher, a principal, and a president of the school board. His mother found joy of expression in music at home and also in her church where she served as organist. Terry attended the Union Academy at Belleville and graduated in 1922 from the same institution where his mother was a graduate twenty-six years earlier. He then entered the Syracuse College of Medicine and graduated with the class of 1930.

Dr. Terry S. Montague practiced medicine in Henderson and Newton Falls, and later was resident physician at the Jefferson County Sanitarium. After completing a course at Johns Hopkins University School of Public Health in Baltimore where he received his Master's degree in Public Health, he became assistant district health officer for Jefferson, Lewis, and St. Lawrence counties with headquarters at Gouverneur. In 1942, he left this position to practice in Adams, and in December 1943, he left his Adams practice to become Watertown's first full-time City Health Officer. This position he held until November 1947 when he again became Assistant District Health Officer, and upon the retirement of Dr. Stanley Slayer in April 1948, Dr. Terry S. Montague was appointed District Health Officer to succeed him.

Zola Eddy Montague, Dr. Terry's wife, is a teacher of social studies and mathematics. She has acquired her Master's degree through summer school study.

The Montagues belong to a yacht club and for recreation sail their boat in the races on Lake Ontario. They are expert swimmers, too. They own a cottage on the lakeshore, and a herd of sheep on Stony Island, which he hopes in time to build up to a thousand head.

With all their successes, their highest attainment is the rearing of a lovely son and a daughter, who are outstanding in their achievements up to the present time. From the Watertown Daily Times of June 1950, we learn of the honors to their daughter.

Florence Antonnette Montague, eighteen years of age, heads the Watertown High School graduating class of 185 students in June 1950 as valedictorian with an average of 95.26%. She is one of seven honor students of her graduating class, and received one of the coveted awards at the exercises - the William E. Hewitt Chemistry Award, given by the Rotary Club in the honor of the late William E. Hewitt, former chemistry teacher and principal of the high school, to a pupil who has been outstanding in chemistry work. This award was presented to Ann Montague. The theme of her valedictory was, "The History of Education in Watertown." A changing world requires changing schools and changing systems, "The old order changeth yielding place to the new."

At the University of Syracuse, Ann is now one of the first three in her nurses class with 36 members.

ALDEN HENRY BEESLEY, the eldest of seven children of Henry Cooper and Edith (Little) Beesley was born 29 December 1922 in Driggs, Teton County, Idaho. He comes through a line of talented musicians. His great grandfather, Ebenezer Beesley, Sr. wrote this song.

"Come children, let us join and sing
Sweet praises to our heavenly King,
And thank Him for our glorious birth
Midst light and truth upon the earth.

"We live amid the realms of day,
When Gospel light has spread its way,
And truth divine, down from above,
Has come to fill the earth with love."

This hymn and many others that he wrote are still among the songs used by the L. D. S. Church, and at one time, he was the leader of the Tabernacle Choir. Alden's mother, Edith Little, was the eighth of ten children of Edwin S. and Zina Wallace Little.

In November 1935, when Alden was only thirteen years old, a tragedy and misfortune fell upon the family. A fire broke out and burned their home to the ground. It also took the mother and the three youngest children. Three years later, in 1938, his father passed away and Alden, with a younger brother and two sisters were left orphans. They had had good training by their parents and now carried on according to their teachings. These children appreciated the opportunities afforded by the Latter-day Saint Church and were active members.

When Alden found the girl friend of his choice, he was ready and prepared to take her to the temple to make her his companion, not only for this life, but for eternity. He married Phyllis Bowles 17 November 1943 in the Latter-day Saints temple in Salt Lake City. They now have five lovely children.

In January 1945, he was inducted into the U. S. Navy Reserve where he served until April 1946. A year later, he accepted a call to a mission for his church, and spent two years laboring in the Central States. During this time, his wife, Phyllis, carried on at home and gave him every encouragement. Upon his return, he bought a farm near Rigby, Idaho and they are becoming established as farmers.

Alden and Phyllis are members of the Rigby Third Ward and are now studying genealogy, becoming interested in their forbears, and in methods of research and record keeping, for their religion teaches that they have a grave responsibility to their ancestors who lived during the centuries when the true church was not on earth.

Jesus himself set the example of baptism, and said, "Unless a man is born of the water (baptism by immersion) and of the spirit, he can in no wise enter the kingdom of God." On first thought, that would seem to show injustice on the part of a Divine Creator - but no! An all wise plan was made whereby every child of God has opportunity to accept or reject that initiation into the Kingdom. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints teaches that we who live in the light of the Gospel can perform that important ordinance for our ancestors by proxy. Baptism being an earthly ordinance must be performed here - it cannot be in the realm of spirits. So that is an important work of the L. D. S. temples.

Alden and Phyllis are happy that their hearts have been turned to their fathers as the Prophet Malachi said, and that they are able to keep the promise made to their fathers in the great plan of salvation.

DANIEL WALTER BROWN, born 12 February 1926 in Magrath, Alberta, Canada, is the son of Walter Edwin and Vada (Crookston) Brown. He has two sisters, Maurine and Sylvia. Together they attended the grade school at Magrath and continued on in high school where their father was one of the instructors.

After graduating from high school, Dan deferred his education to give time to a mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Every true Latter-day Saint boy and girl looks forward to that experience as one of the most worthwhile in their young lives. They are willing to give two years of their time, their energy, and their means, for it is in the cause of our Master. They preach Jesus Christ, the son of a living God who came to earth and set the pattern of life for all earth children to follow. Which plan, if followed, will lead to the happiness of man here, and makes possible the redemption from mortal flaws, and gives the ability to live with our Eternal Father in Glory.

Dan labored two years in the Northern California Mission under President German E. Ellsworth, and says one of the highlights was the visit from President David O. McKay when he toured the mission.

Dan returned home in 1947 and soon enrolled for the winter quarter at the Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. He pursued the course of Bacteriology and received his B. S. degree in August 1952.

This summer was an eventful and happy one for Dan. His parents and sisters were in Provo, and he was thrilled that his father, after completing the requirements in summer school, could graduate at the same time as he. The climax of the summer was his marriage to Vauna Heaton in the Latter-day Saint temple in Salt Lake City on 15 August 1952. There they were sealed as man and wife - not "till death do you part," but for all eternity, for it was pronounced by one holding the priesthood and authority from God. They had first met in December 1951. In February, they were betrothed, and then they were married by Elder Ezra Taft Benson of the Council of the Twelve. He also awarded the certificates at graduation.

Vauna was born in Glenwood Springs in Colorado and began her schooling there. When she was eight years old, with her parents and three brothers, she moved to Ephraim, Utah. This was their home till 1915 when the family moved to Hiawatha in Carbon County. She attended high school and Carbon Junior College at Price and graduated in 1950. She then worked for a year before attending the Brigham Young University in 1951 and 1952.

Soon after marriage, Dan and Vauna moved to Ogden, Utah. There they both worked at the Thomas Dee Memorial Hospital. He worked as a bacteriologist, but found that his chosen field was not what he really wanted; so, after a little more than two months, he left the hospital. He has now decided to become a teacher and is enrolled at the University of Utah in the Department of Education where he expects to complete his course by March 1955 and to be qualified to teach.

In the meantime, he has sold vacuum cleaners and works evenings as an elevator operator to support his family, for he now has a strong, healthy baby boy that they call Von.

Dan and Vauna have both been active in their Church holding various positions of responsibility. At the age of sixteen years, Vauna served as acting ward clerk at Hiawatha Ward and at Price worked as a stake missionary. She has been Sunday School teacher, and since her marriage, is a teacher in the Primary Organization. Dan has worked as Sunday School teacher, as counselor in the Elders' Quorum, Scout Master, and has been Branch Mission President. In June 1951, he received his Master M-Men award, and about the same time, Vauna was awarded a Golden Gleaner. These awards are given to young people for outstanding accomplishments in their church activities, and the completion of prescribed courses. They are happy that they can work together in their church, and thankful for the blessings of a loving Father for their efforts.

ESTHER MICKELSEN, the daughter of Theodore and Eva Bevan Mickelsen, was born 19 August 1926 at home on her father's ranch in Cache Ward, Teton County, Idaho. There she grew up and attended the Cache Grade School, a two-room building that held all eight grades. In the winter when it became too cold to walk the mile to school, her father took her and her brother and sisters in a sleigh. Esther's mother always had nice warm bricks from the oven to warm their feet on the way. The schoolhouse was heated by a large "pot-bellied" stove. Those children who sat near it roasted and the others were always cold.

Esther's father died 27 March 1939, then after a very trying summer for her mother trying to manage the farm, the family moved to Pocatello, Idaho. At first, the schools seemed strange and the ways different, but as the years went by, it became home. Esther entered the Pocatello High School in 1940, and worked part-time at Montgomery Ward store.

When World War II began, the Army opened an air base at Pocatello, and in 1944 at a dance at the Veteran's Memorial Hall, she met Thomas Williams who was stationed at the air base.

Thomas L. Williams, the son of William H. and Martha Louise (Teskey) Williams was born 4 March 1918 in a farming community called Troy. It is near Blackhawk, Sauk County, Wisconsin. He was the eleventh child in a family of twelve children: six boys and six girls. His paternal grandparents emigrated from Wales to the United States in 1845, and his maternal grandparents came from Germany approximately twenty years later.

When he was very young, the family moved to Tomahawk, Wisconsin. Here the father became nearly blind, and the older boys who were still at home found work to provide for the family. In 1926, the family moved to a rural community near Sparta, Wisconsin. His father never recovered his eyesight and was totally blind at the time of his death in 1939.

Tom graduated from high school in Sparta, Wisconsin in 1938, and after attending the University of Wisconsin in Madison for a year, he entered the U. S. Army at Camp Blanding, Florida on 5 December 1940 where he became weather forecaster in the Air Corps. In 1945, he left Los Angeles and after forty-two days aboard the troopship U. S. GENERAL FREEMAN, landed at Calcutta, India. Later, he was transferred to the China Theater where he was stationed at the Peishiyi Air Base near Chungking. While he was here, his mother died at Laredo, Texas on 21 August 1945. The trip home at the end of the war took him through the Suez Canal and into New York completing a round-the-world voyage.

After leaving the Army 8 January 1946, he returned to Pocatello, Idaho to make his home. He became a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints on April 21, 1946, and was married to Esther Mickelsen on 28 April 1946. They moved to Salt Lake City in June 1948 where Tom attended the University of Utah. He received a Bachelor of Science degree in Meteorology in August 1949 and a Master of Science degree in Meteorology and Mathematics in 1950. He taught in the Department of Meteorology at the University of Utah from 1950 to July 1952. At the present time, they are living in Stadium Village while he is working toward his Doctor's degree in Mathematics at the University of Utah.

DONA G. BIELER, the first child of Itha Galbraith and Paul Samuel Bieler was born in Ogden, Utah, 17 April 1925, and was baptized in the Latter-day Saints church 5 July 1933.

She attended the Pingree and Washington Elementary Schools and the Central Junior and Ogden High Schools. In her senior year, she met Harold Duane Harris whom she married on 6 November 1942 in the L. D. S. Temple in Salt Lake City.

They lived in Colorado Springs, Colorado until February 1943 - then returned to Utah when Duane entered the Navy. He was later transferred to Patuxent River, Maryland as a parachute rigger. There she joined him when their first child was seven months old. He was discharged in December 1948 at Norfolk, Virginia.

In 1948, Duane enrolled at the Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah where he received his B. S. degree in Geology in 1951, and later his M. S. degree. During this time they lived in Wymount Village near the school where Dona was active in Church work, teaching in the Primary and Sunday School organizations, and doing chorister work.

During this time, to supplement his G. I. allowance, Duane worked at upholstering. He had earlier been employed as upholsterer for the Browning Chevrolet Company in Ogden. He has since been employed in geological work in Nevada.

VIRGINIA G. BIELER, the second daughter of Itha Galbraith and Paul Samuel Beiler was born 16 February 1927. Her first home was at 2928 Grant Avenue in Ogden. When she was seven years old, she began school at the Pingree, and she and a cousin, Betty Galbraith, won a box of chocolates for perfect attendance that year in the first grade.

When Virginia was eleven years old, the family moved into a house of their own in the east part of Ogden. This gave the child some exciting experiences getting acquainted with new playmates, and making friends at the Lorin Farr School. She made the adjustment and was happy through the elementary and high school years. She graduated from Seminary and also studied piano, and very much enjoyed playing though practicing was irksome to her. In high school, she was vice-president of the school club, and held different positions of honor.

In 1945, she left home to attend the Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah. She studied Home Economics and sang in the University Chorus. Here at school, she met a really fine fellow, and they were married 21 August 1946. Their reception was in the beautiful outdoor setting of her parent's home.

Dale Richard Waterlyn graduated from the Brigham Young University Department of Education and in 1950, he taught in the Intermountain Indian School at Brigham City, Utah. A year in Ogden at the Burch Creek school, and then in 1952, he was employed as teacher in the Granite School District of Salt Lake County. Virginia and "Rich" both enjoy working in their church organizations.

MILDRED McPHIE is the daughter of Walter Gordon and Heva (Galbraith) McPhie. She was born 1 October 1923 in Ogden, Weber County, Utah, where she grew up and became known for her musical activities.

Her twin brothers played the cornets and she the piano. They were in much demand in their own Eleventh Ward (an L. D. S. church division) and other wards in Ogden and vicinity. The young people enjoyed these opportunities and give credit to their mother for her devotion and energy to the supervision of their musical education. Mildred loves to sing and has at times belonged to three different choirs - the Ogden High School A Capella Choir, the Union Pacific Chorus, and the Ogden Tabernacle Choir. One of her greatest thrills came to her in 1940 when with the Ogden Choir she went to Los Angeles and was asked to sing a solo in The Philharmonic Auditorium at the National Musical Convention.

After graduating from high school, she attended the Weber Junior College for a year. During this time, she met and became engaged to Darrell S. Cramer. She left school and worked as a typist until December 1943 when Darrell returned from the South Pacific war zone.

They were married 22 December 1943. They are now stationed in Furstenfeldbruck in Germany where their last daughter was born in the 98th General Hospital in Munich. Darrell is a Squadron Commander in the 36th Fighter Bomber Wing.

Darrell and Mildred have found in Munich a branch of the Latter-day Saints Church and feel fortunate, along with other servicemen and their families, to associate with this small group of German converts who truly have the spirit of the gospel.

WALTER EVAN McPHIE. On 20 March 1926, twins were born to Walter G. and Heva (Galbraith) McPhie in Ogden, Utah. I, being one of those twins, was christened by my father into the L. D. S. church. At the age of eight, I was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. At the age of twelve years, I was ordained into the Aaronic Priesthood as a deacon. As I grew older, I advanced in the Priesthood in the following order: Teacher, Priest, Elder, and finally Seventy in 1947. The last mentioned ordination took place at the hands of Bruce McConkie just prior to my departure for the French Mission.

I spent three and a half months in the Eastern States while waiting for official papers to enter France. Once in the French Mission, I labored in Neuchatel, Switzerland, Lousanne, Switzerland, Nimes, France, Colmar France, Chavlevoi, Belgium, and Paris under President James Louis Barker. After my mission, I toured Europe visiting France, Belgium, Switzerland, Luxembourg, Italy, England and Scotland. At the latter two, I did some research in Genealogy.

In a general way, I will mention that I was privileged to hold several offices in the church. Among them were the following: priesthood quorum officer, group leader and twice the second counselor in the Sunday School Superintendency.

I commenced school at Pingree Elementary School in Ogden, Utah and continued through grades one to six. Next came Washington Junior High and Ogden High Schools. I received an Associate of Science degree upon graduation from Weber Jr. College, and a Bachelor of Science degree from the Utah State Agriculture College, and at present am working toward a Master of Arts degree in Educational Administration at the University of Utah.

In 1944, I entered the U. S. Air Force and traveled extensively throughout the United States. During the next two years when I was stationed on both coasts, (Florida and California) I was not required to go overseas and in 1946 was discharged from Kearns Army Air Base, Kearns, Utah.

On the 6th of July 1951, I was married to Marilyn Norma Jones in the Logan L. D. S. Temple. President El Ray Christiansen performed the ceremony. In April of the next year, we became the proud parents of a daughter born in the L. D. S. Hospital at Logan. Her name is Susan. I christened her in the Ogden L. D. S. Twenty First Ward.

WALLACE GORDON McPHIE, I being one of twins born to Heva J. Galbraith and Walter G. McPhie first saw the light of day on 20 March 1926. It was in Ogden, Utah that the newly acquired bundles were received. We were christened by my father two days later.

I went through the usual childhood trials, tribulations and sicknesses. After surviving my education in Pingree Elementary School, I was moved to Washington Jr. High School. At the same time, my scholastic education was being furthered, my religious education was being perpetuated by the constant efforts of my mother.

I was baptized at the age of eight into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. By the time I had finished Washington Jr. High School, I had been ordained a Deacon in our church, and had been advanced in the priesthood to a Priest. I remained in this office through my years at Ogden High School.

Upon graduating from high school two important things happened to me. The first and most important - I was made an Elder in the Holy Melchizedek Priesthood. Second, I was inducted into the U. S. Navy. While in the Navy, I served three months in the States, and seventeen months in the Philippine Islands.

After being discharged from the service, I continued my education with two years at Weber Junior College, then to Brigham Young University where I graduated three years later with a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Music.

On 14 September 1950, Jo Ann Affleck and I were married in the L. D. S. Temple in Salt Lake City by President J. Reuben Clark, Jr. I have twice served as counselor in the Mutual Improvement Association. The first time in the South Eighteenth Ward of Salt Lake City, and at present in the Canyon Rim Ward of Highland Stake, also in Salt Lake City. We are happy and proud of our two children.

JEAN HALLS, daughter of Julian Wallace and Erma (Galbraith) Halls, was born in Long Beach, California on the 16th of February 1928. While very small, her parents moved to Utah and lived in Salt Lake City, and Ogden until she was five years old. They then went to Norco, California where her grandparents, Halls, lived.

Here Jean began her education in the Norco Elementary School and continued at the Corona Jr. High School until 1941 when the family moved back to Long Beach. There her father worked in the shipyards. Jean graduated from the Lindberg Jr. High School in 1942, and from the Jordan High School in 1945. There she won a scholarship to Long Beach City College from which she graduated in 1948.

She soon got a civil service job with the Long Beach City Schools, and worked four years in the elementary school libraries.

On the 18th of July 1952 she married Cordell Howard (Pat) Phelps. They now have a son and a daughter who arrived as twins.

Jean has been a participant in church work from early years. She has been a Sunday School teacher, a stake missionary, and secretary of the girls' committee. While Jean grew up in a Latter-day Saint home, her husband is a new member. He was baptized in May 1952. Together they now hope to share the light and blessings of the restored Church of Jesus Christ.

BETTY JEAN GALBRAITH, was born 6 April 1927 in the Dee Hospital in Ogden, Utah. Her parents are Elmer J. Galbraith and Eva Irien Nielsen. The baby was blessed (christened) by her father in June of the same year. When she was two years old, her mother entered her in a baby contest, and she won a blue ribbon as one of the prize babies. At the end of her first grade in school, she was awarded a box of candy for perfect attendance throughout the year. In 1935, when she was eight years old, she was baptized in the tabernacle font in Salt Lake City, and was confirmed the following Sunday at church by Elmer W. Johnson, her great grandfather.

From the age of seven to seventeen, Jean lived in Salt Lake City, and received her schooling in the city system through the fifth grade, then continued in the Granite District out in Salt Lake County where she attended the Granite Junior and Senior High School.

Music, she says, was her first love. At the age of seven, she started violin lessons, and by the time she was in junior high school, she was concert master for the school orchestra. Her second year in junior high school, she was asked to play with the Granite Senior High School orchestra. At the age of fourteen, she started piano lessons, and at sixteen years, she began voice training. She was only four years old when she made her first appearance in song at a church gathering.

When she was seventeen years old, the family moved to Richland, Washington where her father had a good job. It was there that Betty Jean finished her last year of high school, and was prominent in school activities. She took the leading part in the school opera, was business manager for the school paper, secretary of the Girls Association, and won her letter in sports. That same year, she was chosen queen of the Gold and Green Ball. (An M. I. A. annual affair in her church.)

In the fall of 1945, she left home to attend the Brigham Young University at Provo, Utah. There she played with the University Symphony Orchestra, and went with them on their playing tours.

While at the Brigham Young University, she became engaged to Keith Wells Larsen and was married 12 December 1946.

Betty Jean was brought up in a good Mormon home where she was taught the principles of truth and error. Her parents set a good example for the children to follow. They all enjoyed going to church and taking part in its activities, and were willing to give of their talents. Betty Jean served as chorister in Sunday School and as conductor for the ward choir.

Upon the death of Grandfather Galbraith in September 1946, Betty's father became partner with his sister in the coal business, and moved his family back to Ogden; so Betty Jean feels that her family are near by.

Keith and his brothers have a good business as electrical contractors in Salt Lake City, which they took over after their father passed away in 1947.

Keith and Betty Jean are happy with their two children.

SUPPLEMENT

George Bishop - Son-in-law of Jane Little Bussey. We do not know the name of, nor which of her two daughters he married.

Probably George Bishop's wife. Is she Letitia Jesten or the other daughter of Jane Little Jesten Bussey?

We do know that George Bishop was the informant of Jane Little Jesten Bussey's death, and was also clerk at Elmvale, Simcoe, Ontario, Canada which was Jane Bussey's place of death. Any additional information would be appreciated by the compiler. (Contact publisher)

ROBERT LITTLE CAMPBELL is a member of our Little family, but just where the connection is and what the relationship is, the compiler has been unable to determine. His mother is a Miss Little, but none of the family contacted by the compiler knew her name or parentage. Helen Little Smith of Detroit spoke of "Little" Campbell as a cousin and said her father called his mother Aunt Alice though she was not certain of the name. Anyway, we know that Robert Little Campbell was a farmer at Balinafad, which is near Erin, Ontario, Canada, where the Moses Little family lived. Is Robert's mother the other daughter of William, Jr., or is she a sister of William Little, Jr. ? We know from old letters that Robert was intimately associated with the Little family. At the death of Robert Dee Little, it is written in an old letter that "Little" Campbell was at the home and remained for a time with the widow.

Mr. Washington (Baird) Bayard, a hardware clerk in Miller's store at Auburn, New York died 1833. He left two daughters and his wife, Olive Campbell. Malcolm Little says in a letter she was a sister to William Campbell in Upper Canada. Are Robert Little Campbell, William Campbell, and Olive Campbell Baird brothers and sisters ? Are they grandchildren of William Little, Jr., or is the connection earlier ?

The compiler visited with Frances Robenia Stringer, a granddaughter of Robert Little Campbell. She lived in Toronto and gave the following information of the family:

Robert Little Campbell was born about 1809 in Ireland. His mother was a Miss Little. The names of his parents are unknown to us. He was a farmer at Balinafad, Ontario, Canada. He married Elizabeth Crewson, and she was born about 1819 in Pennsylvania and died 1894 at Toronto, Canada at the age of seventy-five years. He died June 1, 1884 at Balinafad, Erin Township, Wellington County, Canada at the age of seventy-five years. They had seven children all born in Erin Township. The birthdate of only one is known.

1. Mary Ann Campbell, born in Erin Township, Ontario Canada. She married a man named David Moore. They lived at Acton, Canada.
2. Eliza Campbell married a man named Cox who was born in Yorkshire, England. She is buried at Arthur, Ontario, Canada.
3. Susan Margaret Campbell, born about 1843. She married Richard Sherlock. She died December 24, 1913 at Toronto, Canada.
4. William Campbell married Sarah Ann Allen. He was buried at Toronto, Canada.
5. Jane Campbell married Mathias Lambert. Jane was buried at Acton, Canada.
6. Sarah Campbell married Thomas Thompson. Sarah was buried at Balinafad, Canada.
7. Robert Campbell married Anne Kentner. Robert died at Galt, Ontario, Canada.

Susan Margaret Campbell, daughter of Robert Little Campbell and Elizabeth Crewson was born about 1843 in Erinton Township, Ontario, Canada. She married Richard Sherlock who was born about 1842 and died at Toronto, Canada on the 19th day of May 1917 at the age of seventy-five years. She died at Toronto, Canada on the 24th day of December 1913 at the age of seventy years. They had eleven children born in Erin Township.

8. George Albert Sherlock, birthdate unknown.
9. Infant son, Sherlock, birthdate unknown.
10. Robert James Sherlock, birthdate unknown.
11. Elizabeth Ann Sherlock, born in about 1871. She married George Frederick Watson.
12. Sarah Adeline Sherlock, birthdate unknown, she married James Wesly Patterson.
13. Margaret Jane Sherlock, birthdate unknown. She married William Thomas Ash.
14. Richard Thomas Sherlock, born 3 June 1875. He died 3 January 1905 at Toronto, Canada. He married Florence Martin.
15. Frances Robenia Sherlock, born in 1879. She married Robert Stringer.
16. Chester Edward Sherlock, born about 1881. He married Minerva Kathleen.
17. Everilda Sherlock, born 16 March 1883 and died 19 January 1919 at Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada.
18. Mary Rockzinia Sherlock, birthdate unknown. She married Edward Tonkin.

Frances Robenia Sherlock, married Robert Stringer. No more information obtained. They had one child.

19. Richard Sherlock Stringer, born 31 December 1917 at Toronto, Canada.

Information on the Robert Little Campbell family as here given was obtained from Francis Robenia Sherlock Stringer, whom the compiler visited at her home in Toronto, Canada in 1940. Francis Robenia Sherlock Stringer is a granddaughter of Robert Little Campbell.
